RAIL TAXES ARE LESS

STATE AUDITOR IVERSON SAYS THAT INCREASE FROM OTHER SOURCES WILL MORE THAN OFFSET REDUCTION.

LEVY HAS BEEN DOUBLED

He Expects the Balance in the State Treasury At the End of This Year to Be About $1,000,000.

St. Paul. — Although the railroad gross earnings tax in Minnesota will be approximately $250,000 less this year than last, the state's finances will be in no manner crippled, according to State Auditor Iverson. With an increased tax levy, a balance in the general revenue fund at the close of the last fiscal year of more than $400,000, and a general increase in revenues from corporations, the state's finances will be absolutely unshaken.

Railroad Tax $3,800,000 Last Year.

The total railroad gross earnings taxes last year amounted to $3,896,091.74. In making up the estimate of the amount to be received this year, Mr. Iverson placed the railroad income at $3,300,000. This he considered a low figure, but it was made so in order to be on the safe side. In reality, the railroad tax will amount to approximately $3,600,000, or $300,000 more than estimated in the annual budget. Of this amount, $2,652,587.69 was in and credited yesterday afternoon, with several big roads still to report.

Tax Levy Doubled.

The general state disbursements from the revenue fund last year amount to $7,150,000. The tax levy which produced a great part of this was only nine-tenths of a mill, while this year the levy is one and nine-tenths mills, an even one-mill increase. In making up the budget the general revenue fund was estimated at $6,100,000, but it will be very much nearer the $7,150,000 disbursed in 1911 than that figure. To me added to whatever revenue may come in is $443,576.49 left in the revenue fund at the close of the fiscal year. August 31, 1911.

Expects $1,000,000 Balance.

"While the quarter-million dollar decrease in railroad taxes is regretable," Mr. Iverson said, "it in no way hampers the state. We will have plenty of money, and I confidently expect that at the close of this fiscal year in August we will have a balance of double the sum we had left at the close of last year. In all probability there will be close to $1,000,000 in the general revenue fund as a balance."

SURGEON TESTIFIES

Dr. Polk Richards Tells of Indians' Physical Condition.

Detroit. — Dr. Polk Richards, government physician at the White Earth agency, testified with respect to health conditions on the reservation. He said that beginning in 1910 a canvass was made of the Indians, though not complete, showing that about 20 or 25 per cent had tuberculosis, the most common form of which was scrofula, and that 60 per cent had trachoma. The number already examined was given as 3,733, those having trachoma as 2,315, those having tuberculosis, 520, and the blind, 128. An estimate of the veneereally affected, not based on record, was 25 per cent.

Uncleanliness, poor ventilation of houses, and lack of food were predisposing causes of tuberculosis among the Indians, Dr. Richard said. Conditions at Pine Point, he said, could not be worse for the spread of tuberculosis. Many would be blind if nothing were done to treat the trachoma. The old and the blind, he thought, should be cared for in homes and hospitals.

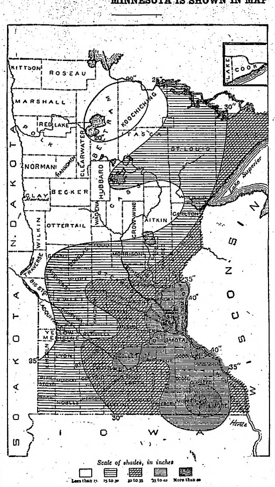
COMPARATIVE RAINFALL IN 1911 IN MINNESOTA IS SHOWN IN MAP



Minnesota's precipitation figures for 1911 are condensed by Section Director U. G. Pursell of the weather bureau in his meteorological summary in the form of a state map. By different lines the map indicates amounts of precipitation up to twenty-five inches for the year, between twenty-five and thirty inches, thirty and thirty-five inches, thirty-five inches and forty inches, and more than forty.

Mr. Pursell's summary reads:

The average precipitation was 29.10 inches, which was 3.65 inches above the normal. The greatest annual amount was 51.53 inches at Grand Meadow, and the least 19.26 inches at Red Lake. The greatest monthly amount was 13.34 inches at Grand Meadow in August, and the least, trace at Fairmount, Glencoe and Worthington in March, and at Pipestone in November. The greatest rainfall occurring in any twenty-four consecutive hours was 6.41 inches at Grand Meadow on Aug. 13. The average snowfall was 47.7 inches. There was an average of ninety-three days on which 0.01 inch, or more, of rain or melted snow fell. Snow fell in the state every month except in July and August.

The precipitation was nearly double that of 1910. It was three inches less than that of 1905, which was the wettest year, with an average of 33.10 inches. The average precipitation for January, February, July, August, September, October and December was above the normal, and for March, April, May, June and November below, making a total of 3.65 inches above normal.

Experiments are being conducted by pupils to ascertain the relative evils of the different weed seeds which are found in grains.

SET GUNS ARE NOT USED

Dangerous Practice Is Disappearing, According to Game Warden Rider.

St. Paul.—With the hunting season for big game and small game practically closed, not one set-gun has been found in Minnesota. According to the belief of H. A. Rider, executive agent of the state game and fish commission, the custom will likely not be revived.

"In previous years," said Mr. Rider, "hunters have loaded up blunderbusses with powerful charges of buckshot, placed a carcass before it for bait, attached a string to the carcass so that when moved the gun would be discharged, and often killed timber animals. This was only one of the many methods used with set-guns. But the charge originally intended for animals, frequently took effect in the bodies of men or domestic stock. Set-guns were so dangerous, that a law against their use was enacted. Apparently, hunters either have become more law-abiding or more humane."

MURDERED HIS SQUAW

Bemidji.—Murder in the first degree is the charge which Chief Lon-ga-ge-shij, the Cass Lake Chippewa faces as a result of the death of his wife.

A coroner's jury here returned a verdict that the squaw came to her death by blows delivered by her husband. The couple had been in Cass Lake and both had been drinking.

At the inquest it was shown that the woman had been badly mutilated, her hair having been pulled out by the handful. The chief is in the Beltrami county jail. He says his squaw fell from the sleigh on the way home and that as she could not get back in he threw her a blanket and went on his way because he was afraid of the cold.

INCREASE IN NUMBER OF AMERICANS GOING TO CANADA

Although Western Canada suffered, as did many other portions of the west, from untoward conditions, which turned one of the most promising crops ever seen in that country, into but little more than an average yield of all grains, there is left in the farmers' hands, a big margin of profit. Of course there were many farmers who were fortunate enough to harvest and market a big yield, and with the prices that were secured made handsome returns. From wheat, oats, barley and flax marketed to the 1st of January, 1912, there was a gross revenue of $75,384,000. The cattle, hogs, poultry and dairy proceeds brought this up to $101,620,000 or 21 million dollars in excess of 1910. There was still in the farmers' hands at that time about 95 million bushels of wheat worth at least another sixty-five million dollars (allowing for inferior grades), besides about 160 million bushels of oats to say nothing of barley and flax, which would run into several million of dollars.

There is a great inrush of settlers to occupy the vacant lands throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. The reports from the Government show that during the past year upwards of 131,000 Americans crossed the border into Canada. A great many of these took up farms, over ten thousand having homesteaded, in fact the records show that every state in the Union contributed. A larger number, not caring to go so far away as the homesteading area, have purchased lands at from fifteen dollars an acre to twenty-five dollars an acre. The prospects for a good crop for 1912 are as satisfactory as for many years. The land has had sufficient moisture, and with a reasonably early spring, it is safe to predict a record crop.

Those who have not had the latest literature sent out by the Government agents should send to the one nearest, and secure a copy.

CHILD'S HEAD A MASS OF HUMOR

"I think the Cuticura remedies are the best remedies for eczema I have ever heard of. My mother had a child who had a rash on its head when it was real young. Doctor called it baby rash. He gave us medicine, but it did no good. In a few days the head was a solid mass, a running sore. It was awful; the child cried continually. We had to hold him and watch him to keep him from scratching the sore. His suffering was dreadful. At last we remembered Cuticura Remedies. We got a dollar bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bar of Cuticura Soap. We gave the Resolvent as directed, washed the head with the Cuticura Soap, and applied the Cuticura Ointment. We had not used half before the child's head was clear and free from eczema, and it has never come back again. His head was healthy and he had a beautiful head of hair. I think the Cuticura Ointment very good for the hair. It makes the hair grow and prevents falling hair." (Signed) Mrs. Francis Lund, Plain City, Utah, Sept. 19, 1910.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

My Lady of the North

THE LOVE STORY OF A GRAY JACKET

by RANDALL PARRISH

SYNOPSIS.

The story opens in a Confederate tent at a critical stage of the Civil War. Gen. Lee imparts to Capt. Wayne an important message to Longstreet. Accompanied by Sergt. Craig, an old army scout, Wayne starts on his mission. They get within the lines of the enemy and in the darkness Wayne is taken for a Federal officer and a young lady on horseback is given in his charge. She is a northern girl and attempts to escape. One of the horses succumbs and Craig goes through with the dispatches, while Wayne and My Lady of the North are left alone. They seek shelter in a hut and entering it in the dark a huge mastiff attacks Wayne. The girl shoots the brute just in time. The owner of the hut, Jed Bungay, and his wife appear and soon a party of horsemen approach. They are led by a man claiming to be Red Lowrie, but who proves to be Maj. Brennan, a Federal officer whom the Union girl recognizes. He orders the arrest of Wayne as a spy and he is brought before Sheridan, who threatens him with death unless he reveals the secret message. Wayne believes Edith Brennan to be the wife of Maj. Brennan. He is rescued by Jed Bungay, who starts to reach Gen. Lee, while Wayne in disguise penetrates to the ballroom, beneath which he had been imprisoned. He is introduced to a Miss Minor and barely escapes being unmasked. Edith Brennan recognizing Wayne, says she will save him. Securing a pass through the lines, they are confronted by Brennan, who is knocked senseless. Then, bidding Edith adieu, Wayne makes a dash for liberty. He encounters Bungay; they reach the Lee camp and are sent with reinforcements to join Early. In the battle of Shenandoah the regiment is overwhelmed, and Wayne, while in the hospital, is visited by Edith Brennan. Wayne and Bungay are sent on a scouting detail, and arriving at the Minor place, Wayne meets Miss Minor and Mrs. Bungay, and later Edith appears. Wayne's detachment is besieged by guerrillas. Brennan and his men arrive and aid in repelling the invaders until a rescuing party of bluecoats reach the scene. Brennan challenges Wayne to a duel; the latter fires in the air, and is himself wounded. He bids Edith adieu and she expresses the hope that they may meet after the war.

"Hey, there, you gray-back!" he shouted, "hold on a bit!"

As I came to a pause and glanced back, wondering if there could be anything wrong with my parole, he swung his cap and pointed.

"That officer coming yonder wants to speak with you."

Across the open field at my right, hidden until then by a slight rise of ground, a mounted cavalryman was riding rapidly toward me. For the moment his lowered head prevented recognition, but as he cleared the ditch and came up smiling, I saw it was Caton.

"By Jove, Wayne, but this is lucky!" he exclaimed, springing to the ground beside me. "I've actually been praying for a week past that I might see you. Holmes, of your service, told me you had pulled through, but everything is in such confusion that to hunt for you would have been the proverbial quest after a needle in a haystack. You have been paroled then?"

"Yes, I'm completely out of it at last," I answered, feeling to the full the deep sympathy expressed by his face. "It was a bitter pill, but one which had to be taken."

"I know it, old fellow," and his hand-grasp on mine tightened warmly. "If you have been beaten there is no disgrace in it, for no other nation in this world could ever have accomplished it. But this was a case of Greek meeting Greek, and we had the money, the resources, and the men. But, Wayne, I tell you, I do not believe there is today a spark of bitterness in the heart of a fighting Federal soldier."

"I know, Caton," I said—and the words came hard—"your fighting men respect us, even as we do them. It has been a sheer game of which could stand the most punishment, and the weaker had to go down. I know all that, but, nevertheless, it is a terrible ending to so much of hope, suffering, and sacrifice."

"Yes," he admitted soberly, "you have given your all. But those who survive have a wonderful work before them. They must lay anew the foundations; they are to be the rebuilders of states. You were going home?"

I smiled bitterly at this designation of my journey's end.

"Yes, if you can so name a few weed-grown fields and a vacant negro cabin. I certainly shall have to lay the foundation anew most literally."

"Will you not let me aid you?" he questioned eagerly. "I possess some means, and surely our friendship is sufficiently established to warrant me in making the offer. You will not refuse?"

"I must," I answered firmly. "Yet I do not value the offer the less. Sometime I may even remind you of it, but now I prefer to dig, as the others must. I shall be the stronger for it, and shall thus sooner forget the total wreck."

For a few moments we walked on together in silence, each leading his horse.

"Wayne," he asked at length, glancing furtively at me, as if to mark the effect of his words, "did you know that Mrs. Brennan was again with us?"

"I was not even aware she had been away."

"Oh, yes; she returned North immediately after your last parting, and came back only last week. So many wives and relatives of the officers have come down of late, knowing the war to be practically at an end, that our camp has become like a huge picnic pavilion. It is quite the fashionable fad just now to visit the front. Mrs. Brennan accompanied the wife of one of the division commanders from her state—Connecticut, you know."

There was much I longed to ask regarding her, but I would not venture to fan his suspicions. In hope that I might turn his thought I asked, "And you; are you yet married?"

He laughed good-humoredly. "No, that happy day will not occur until after we are mustered out. Miss Minor is far too loyal a Virginian ever to become my wife while I continue to wear this uniform. By the way, Mrs. Brennan was asking Celia only yesterday if she had heard anything of you since the surrender."

"She is at Appomattox, then?"

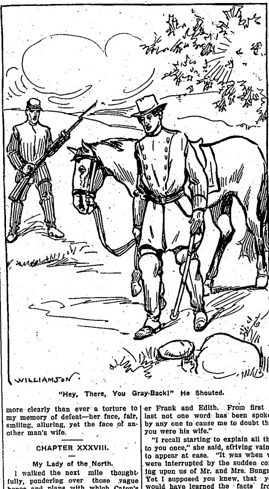
"No, at the headquarters of the Sixth Corps, only a few miles north from here."

"And the Major?"

Caton glanced at me, a peculiar look in his face, but answered simply:

"Naturally I have had small intimacy with him after what occurred at Mountain View, but he is still retained upon General Sheridan's staff. At Mrs. Brennan's request we breakfasted together yesterday morning, but I believe he is at the other end of the lines today."

We sat down upon a bank, and for the time I forgot disaster while listening to his story of love and his plans for the future. His one thought of Celia and the Northern home so soon now to be made ready for her coming. The sun sank lower into the western sky, causing Caton to draw down his fatigue cap until its glazed visor almost completely hid his eyes. With buoyant enthusiasm he talked on, each word drawing me closer to him in bonds of friendship. But the time of parting came, and after we had promised to correspond with each other, I had stood and watched while he rode rapidly back down the road we had traversed together. At the summit of the hill he turned and waved his cap, then disappeared, leaving me alone, with Edith's face more clearly than ever a torture to my memory of defeat—her face, fair, smiling, alluring, yet the face of another man's wife.



"Hey, There, You Gray-Back!" He Shouted.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

My Lady of the North.

I walked the next mile thoughtfully, pondering over those vague hopes and plans with which Caton's optimism had inspired me. Suddenly there sounded behind me the thud of hoofs, while I heard a merry peal of laughter, accompanied by gay exchange of words. I drew aside, leading my horse into a small thicket beside the road to permit the cavalcade to pass. It was a group of perhaps a dozen—three or four Federal officers, the remainder ladies, whose bright dresses and smiling faces made a most winsome sight. They glanced curiously aside at me as they galloped past. But none paused, and I merely glanced at them with vague interest, my thoughts elsewhere. Suddenly a horse semed to draw back from out of the center of the fast disappearing party.

I had led my limping horse out into the road once more to resume my journey, paying scarcely the slightest attention to what was taking place, for my head was again throbbing to the hot pulse of the sun. The party of strangers rode slowly away into the enveloping dust cloud, and I had forgotten them, when a low, sweet voice spoke close beside me: "Captain Wayne, I know you cannot have forgotten me.'

She was leaning down from the saddle, and as I glanced eagerly up into her dear eyes they were swimming with tears.

"Forgotten! Never for one moment," I exclaimed; "yet I failed to perceive your presence until you spoke."

"You appeared deeply buried in thought as we rode by, but I could not leave you without a word when I knew you must feel so bad. Oh, but you, Captain Wayne, you have youth and love to inspire you—for your mother yet lives. Truly it makes my heart throb to think of the upbuilding which awaits you men of the South. It is through such as you—soldiers trained by stern duty—that these desolated states are destined to rise above the ashes of war into a greatness never before equaled. I feel that now, in this supreme hour of sacrifice, the men and women of the South are to exhibit before the world a courage greater than that of the battlefield. It is to be the marvel of the nation, and the thought and pride of it should make you strong."

"It may indeed be so; I can but believe it, as the prophecy comes from your lips. I might even find courage to do my part in this redemption were you ever at hand to inspire."

She laughed gently. "I am not a Virginian, Captain Wayne, but a most loyal daughter of the North; yet if I so inspire you by my mere words, surely it is not so far to my home but you might journey there to listen to my further words of wisdom."

"I have not forgotten the permission already granted me, and it is a temptation not easily cast aside. You return North soon?"

"Within a week."

I hardly knew what prompted me to voice my next question—Fate, perhaps, weary of being so long mocked—for I felt small interest in her probable answer.

"Do you expect your husband's release from duty by that time?"

She gave a quick start of surprise, drawing in her breath as though suddenly choked. Then the rich color overspread her face. "My husband?" she ejaculated in voice barely audible, "my husband? Surely you cannot mean Major Brennan?"

"But I certainly do," I said, wondering what might be wrong. "Whom else could I mean?"

"And you thought that!" she asked incredulously. "Why, how could you?"

"How should I have thought otherwise?" I exclaimed, my eyes eagerly searching her downcast face. "Why, Caton told me it was so the night I was before Sheridan; he confirmed it again in conversation less than an hour ago. Colgate, my Lieutenant, who met you in a Baltimore hospital, referred to him the same way. If I have been deceived through all these months, surely everything and everybody conspired to that end—you bore the same name; you told me plainly you were married; you wore a wedding-ring; you resided while at camp in his quarters; you called each other Frank and Edith. From first to last not one word has been spoken by any one to cause me to doubt that you were his wife."

"I recall starting to explain all this to you once," she said, striving vainly to appear at ease. "It was when we were interrupted by the sudden coming upon us of Mr. and Mrs. Bungay. Yet I supposed you knew, that you would have learned the facts from others. The last time we were together I told you I did not wholly understand you. It is no wonder, when you thought that of me."

"I am going to tell you my story, Captain Wayne. It is not a pleasant task under these circumstances, yet one I owe you as well as myself. This may prove our last meeting, and we must not part under the shadow of a mistake, however innocently it may have originated. I am the only child of Edwin Adams, a manufacturer, of Stonington, Connecticut. My father was also for several terms a member of Congress from that State. As the death of my mother occurred when I was but five years old, all my father's love was lavished upon me, and I grew up surrounded by every advantage which abundant means and high social position could supply. During all those earlier years my playmate and most intimate companion was Charles Brennan, a younger brother of the Major, and the son of Judge David Brennan of the State Supreme Court. As we grew older his friendship for me ripened into love, a feeling which I found it impossible to return. I liked him greatly, valued him most highly, continued his constant companion, yet experienced no desire for closer relationship. My position was rendered the more difficult as it had long been the dream of the heads of both houses that our two families, with their contingent estates, should be thus united, and constant urging tried my decision severely. Nor would Charles Brennan give up hope. When he was twenty and I barely seventeen a most serious accident occurred—a runaway—in which Charles heroically preserved my life, but himself received injuries, from which death in a short time was inevitable. In those last lingering days of suffering, but one hope, one ambition, seemed to possess his mind—the desire to make me his wife, and leave me the fortune which was his through the will of his mother. I cannot explain to you, Captain Wayne, the struggle I passed through, seeking to do what was right and best; but finally, moved by my sympathy, eager to soothe his final hours of suffering, and urged by my father, I consented to gratify his wish, and we were united in marriage while he was on his deathbed. Two days later he passed away."

She paused, her voice faltering, her eyes moist with unshed tears. Scarce knowing it, my hand sought hers, where it rested against the saddle.

"His brother," she paused slowly, "now Major Brennan, but at that time a prosperous banker in Hartford, a man nearly double the age of Charles, was named as administrator of the estate, to retain its management until I should attain the age of twenty-one. Less than a year later my father also died. The final settlement of his estate was likewise entrusted to Frank Brennan, and he was made my guardian. Quite naturally I became a resident of the Brennan household, upon the same standing as a daughter, being legally a ward of my husband's brother. Major Brennan's age, and his thoughtful kindness to me, won my respect, and I gradually came to look upon him almost as an elder brother, turning to him in every time of trouble for encouragement and help. It was the necessity of our business relation which first compelled me to come South and join Major Brennan in camp; as he was unable to obtain leave of absence, I was obliged to make the trip. Not until that time, Captain Wayne—indeed, not until after our experience at Mountain View—did I fully realize that Major Brennan looked upon me otherwise than as a guardian upon his ward. The awakening period pained me greatly, especially as I was obliged to disappoint him deeply; yet I seek to retain his friendship, for my memory of his long kindness must ever abide. I am sure you will understand, and not consider me unwomanly in thus making you a confidant."

"I can never be sufficiently grateful that you have thus trusted me," I said with an earnestness that caused her to lower her questioning eyes. "It has been a strange misunderstanding between us, Mrs. Brennan, but your words have brought a new hope to one disheartened Confederate soldier. I must be content with hope, yet I am rich compared with thousands of others; infinitely rich in comparison with what I dreamed myself an hour ago." I held out my hand. "There will come a day when I shall answer your invitation to the North."

"You are on your way home?"

"Yes; to take a fresh hold upon life, trusting that sometime in the early future I may feel worthy to come to you."

"Worthy?" she echoed the word, a touch of scorn in her voice, her eyes dark with feeling. "Worthy? Captain Wayne, I sometimes think you the most unselfish man I ever knew. Must the sacrifices, then, always be made by you? Can you not conceive it possible that I also might like to yield up something? Is it possible you deem me a woman to whom money is a god?"

"No," I said, my heart bounding to the scarce hidden meaning of her impetuous words, "nor have the sacrifices always been mine; you were once my prisoner."

She bent down, her very soul in her eyes, and rested one white hand upon my shoulder. For an instant we read each other's heart in silence, then shyly she said, "I am still your prisoner."

THE END.

To Judge Men Correctly

We Should Think of Each as He Is Rather Than as the World Sees Him.

It is worth our while to remember that the czar of all the Russias does not sit in royal state with a crown on his head all the time. No, he goes "home" betimes, just as do the men who work in shoe factories, or clerks in the stores, or who plow in the fields, and when the "chores" are done and the evening comes on, and the supper dishes are cleared away there comes to the castle, the same as to the cottage, "the children's hour," when he tumbles about on the floor with the little folks, and plays "Indian," or some other childish game in which all can take part.

Every man has to be something more than the world knows him to be. The man whom the world knows as a great and reverend judge is only "my papa" to the little children who listen for his step on the walk or his knock at the door. In their homes all men are equal. The great man becomes a private citizen and the most humble toiler, to the little ones depending on him for guidance and support, becomes a great man. "For a man's house is his castle," said the great lawmaker, Sir Edward Coke. Let this house be made of boards or bricks or granite walls, it is presumed to be equally as invulnerable before the law.

If we shall think of every man as he is rather than as the social or industrial implement the world sees fit to make of him, we shall judge men more correctly.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Muff.

Senator Borah was talking about a disgruntled political opponent.

"His attitude," said the eloquent senator, "reminds me of a young lady at the seashore.

"Discussing this young lady and a Chicago millionaire, a girl remarked:

"'She says he's not a very good catch, after all.'

"Another girl, tossing her head, then made the comment:

"'She says that, does she? Then he must have dropped her.'"

His Right to Title.

A French paper says that a New Zealand chief had just taken up his residence upon a piece of land, his right to which was contested: "I have got an undoubted title to the property," he observed, "as I ate the preceding owner."

Beauty—real beauty—is more than skin deep. No cosmetic in the world can give the wholesome color, the bright eyes, the clear, transparent skin that is the natural result of pure blood, proper diet and hygienic habits of daily life.

It sounds easy and it is easy for a woman to have the beauty which health alone can give. A safe and efficient tonic if the blood is weak, thin or impure (Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are especially recommended), the avoidance of foods which will cause eruptions, and regular bathing of the skin. That is all and it is the only way. Most ladies, and especially young mothers, will be interested in the following statement:

"After my baby was born," says Mrs. Etta Estes, of No. 333 South Lawndale street, Kansas City, Mo., "I did not gain in strength as I should have. I did not have any color and kept losing in flesh until I was almost a skeleton. I had severe headaches and pains in the side, arms and shoulders. I finally gave up the doctor's treatment in order to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They helped me immediately and I became stronger each day, soon got a better color and am now in the best of health. I am convinced that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do all that is claimed for them and advise any woman who is suffering as I did to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at once and not wait another day."

Write to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Box 176, Schenectady, N. Y., for a free booklet, "Plain Talks to Women." It is an outspoken but perfectly proper little book and should be read by every woman and growing girl. A free sample of the new laxative "Pinklets" will also be sent you. Should you be unable to obtain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in your locality they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, fifty cents per box, six boxes for $2.50.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

Every legitimate local enterprise should have the hearty co-operation of every loyal citizen.

A man with a large family can live better on the farm, where money grows, than in the city, where money goes.

With all the talk of peace conventions and the like, when two worlds powers fall out there is a scrap and when a popular man in Mexico or any of the South America republics wants to be President he starts up a rebellion.

There are some defects in the vagrant law that should be remedied when the next legislature meets. If a man is able to loaf he has a right to do so, but when he is not able to do it yet spends his time in idleness, he is a menace to society.

There is said to be a lot of counterfeit ten dollar bills floating around the country just now, but we have no fear of connecting with any of them for we are not expecting any one to pay us such an unreasonable amount and we cannot get one in exchange, sure thing.

The land business in this section of the state is probably more active now than it has been in years, and there is a reason. The lands here are just getting the advertising that it deserves and on investigating the people are coming to realize that it is logic and good sense to buy land here now when there is almost a certainty that within five or six years it will be twice the present value. Advertising attracts the people to a place and then good values in lands make purchasers.

Talk about hard times! What do you mean, say? The wages of the workingman to-day will buy more comfort, culture pleasure, or whatever he pleases to purchase than ever before in the world's history. People who are continually harping about hard times are not only common nuisances, but public enemies. Cease your howling and turn in and do something for humanity and for self. Talk wisely and act wisely and the times will not be so much out of joint, at least so far as you are concerned.

Leap Year Results.

We are publishing below a little ditty writen by a love-stricken maiden to one of our popular young men, and as the letter does not give the name of the writer the young man who has fallen for the tender and loving words, kindly requests us to publish them with the hopes that the writer will reveal her identity by adressing O., in care of the Pioneer and we have promised to not reveal the names of either parties to the public

My dear and most respected Sir:
I send you this your love to stir
'Tis you I've chosen first of all
On whom to make a Leap Year call.

I've given you this foremost chance
A home for you I would enhance
Your heart and hand I ask not in jest
And hope you will grant my found request

And send me back without delay
Your answer saying "yes" or "Nay"
But if your hand does not incline
In Wedlocks clasp to join with mine.

Then you must Leap Year law obey
And down to me five dollars pay
Beside, kind Sir, a handsome dress,
I'll ask no more or take no less.

Now you may think this little funny
But I must have either man or money.
So now do send me this reply
And let me be your wife until I die.

And if you think that I'm a dandy
Send me a box of sweetest candy.
And if the writer's name you guess
Send this back to my address.

And if there really is no hope
Send me back six yards of rope
With lots of love and kisses
From one who cares to be Your Mrs.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

Election Next Tuesday

Next Tuesday is village election. Nothing stirring is anticipated in connection with this event, however altho it is learned that a few new candidates will be announced besides those who are already serving, and who are in line for re-election. As far as has been learned there is little likelihood of there being any opposition to Wm. Bottineau for mayor. "Bill" is a capable man and is well liked by everyone and will undoubtedly be retained in his present official capacity.

The village caucus will be held tomorrow (Saturday) evening.

Had Exciting Runaway

A team belonging to Geo. Gunderson, a farmer residing near this place, indulged in a lively runaway this week. Lars Cloven and Joe Gunderson were in the rig at the time of the runaway and were thrown out of the sleigh. The team was stopped near the Soo tracks by Mr. Albin, and had then smashed the sleigh and torn their harness from their bodies.

More Fire Protection

The matter of fire protection for the village will be brought up for consideration by Mayor Bottineau in the near future. The village is at present without any fire protection at all and the time is about rife when some action is taken to provide for some means by which to extinguish a blaze in case one should get strated. While so far Plummer has been fortunate in not having been burdened with many fires; no one can tell however, when a fire might originate.

Locals Defeated.

The game advertised with the Commercial- Normal school of Thief River at this place last Tuesday evening was not pulled off on failure of the visitors to show up and instead the locals went up to Thief River that evening and played a game with the Athletics of that place that evening. The game is said to have been loosely played and both sides made heavy scores, the Thief River team winning by the large score of 22 and 13. It is expected that the Thief River team will play the locals at this place either this week or next.

Married Saturday.

Last Saturday at the home of Rev. Kolstoe occured the marriage of Miss Sarah Lindberg and Mr. Roy Green, both residents in Garnes township, the Rev. Kolstoe officiating. The wedding was a pretty home affair and only immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties were in attendance. The young people are both well and favorable known throughout this section. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Green and has up to the present time made his home with his parents. The bride has made her home with her parents in Garnes township and has won for her a large circle of friends. The Pioneer joins in with their many friends in extending congratulations.

We are informed that on Sunday night the couple were pleasantly chivarried at the Ralph Green home by many of their neighbors and friends and after making the usual racket which was produced by pounding on tins pans etc., a social followed.

Went Isane.

Word reaches us that Andrew Peterson, a resident in Mayfield township was found to be in a demented condition the latter part of last week and was brought before the judge of probate of Pennington county last Monday by Sheriff LaBree where he was adjudged insane. He was taken to the insane asylum at Fergus Falls last Monday afternoon. The condition of Mr. Peterson, who is a bachelor, is said to have been caused mainly by extreme lonliness while residing on his claim.

ALTER CORPORATION TAX

To Tax Those Whose Income Reaches $5,000 a Year—Would Mean Yearly Revenue of $50,000,000 or Over.

Washington, D. C. — A bill to put sugar on the free list, eliminating $53,000,000 in all customs revenue, and another to extend the present corporation tax to include individuals and co-partnerships having an income of $5,000 a year or over, were ratified by the Democratic caucus of the house.

The excise tax, so-called by the ways and means committee, is in effect an income tax. The bill is so drawn that it is expected to comply with the supreme court's decision against the constitutionality of an income tax. Its effect would be to tax every person who earns more than $5,000 a year, on the excess of $5,000 at the rate of 1 per cent.

The estimate of Chairman Underwood and members of the ways and means committee is that the proposed excise tax would bring in a revenue of between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000 a year. Placing sugar on the free list, the Democratic leaders estimate will reduce the price of sugar to the consumer about a cent and a half a pound.

The secret that members of the ways and means committee had been so closely guarding for several days was the provision to extend the corporation tax. In the caucus that bill was not seriously opposed.

The free sugar bill, however, was bitterly assailed by representatives from Louisiana, the sugar cane state, and representatives from sugar beet growing states who were absolved from the bond of the caucus. No roll call on the ratification of the bills was demanded. Majority Leader Underwood announced that the bills would be reported to the house in a few days.

"We simply took the corporation tax law and rewrote it to include individuals and co-partnerships," Mr. Underwood said. "The bill, to illustrate, simply means that I, whose business is that of a member of congress, will pay to the government 1 per cent of my salary income over $5,000. The salary of a congressman is $7,500. I would therefore pay an excise tax of $25 a year."

The president of the United States, should the proposed bill become a law, would pay 1 per cent on $70,000 or $700, his salary being $75,000.

Railroads will be subjected to heavy fines for intimidating employes who seek to join labor unions or for "blacklisting" discharged employes, by the terms of a bill introduced by Representative Stevens of Minnesota.

The bill would amend the railroad rate law and provide penalties of from $100 to $1,000 for violations of the new section. It was referred to the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

The senate adopted a resolution calling on President Taft to submit to it all the correspondence with Colombia dealing with the acquisition of the Panama canal zone by the United States.

The resolution was offered by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska who urged its adoption in a speech in which he charged former President Roosevelt with participation in a conspiracy to foment the resolution by which Panama was lost to Colombia and the canal zone became the property of this country. There was no division on the vote of adoption.

Washington, D. C. — Patent medicines and other patented articles may be sold without reference to the prices fixed by the patentee. This was the opinion handed down by Justice Wright in the equity court when he refused the application of a drug manufacturing concern for an injunction to prevent a local druggist from cutting prices without the manufacturers' permission. The court declared that the patentee of an article could control the price by which it should be sold by a "licensee," but that once the article has found its way to the open market by outright purchase all right to fix the price passed from the patentee.

What vinegar is in the United States is determined by a decision of the government pure food board, signed by Secretary of Agriculture Wilson. The decision holds that when natural vinegars are diluted with water to reduce their acidity, the label must indicate this fact and that no vinegars may be diluted to an acidity of less than 4 grams of acetic acid per 100 cubic centimeters or approximately 4 per cent.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has approved a decision of the pure food board which holds that no cherries may be labeled "Maraschino" unless they are Marasca cherries preserved in Maraschino, a liquor prepared by distillation of the Marasco cherry.

Washington, D. C.—An investigation to determine whether there is a "money trust" in the United States operating through or in connection with the national banks, was ordered by the house by a vote of 270 to 8. While Republican regulars and insurgents protested that the inquiry as proposed was a "sham" and a "delusion," the Democratic forces united in support of a compromise "money trust" resolution, and succeeded in securing all but eight Republican votes in its support.

Usage of Panama to Stifle Rates.

In an effort to preserve and promote the interests of the government by the protection and development of full, fair, open and profitable use of the Panama canal by the ships of commerce and war of all people and all nations the house interstate and foreign commerce committee embarked on a general investigation of charges of ship trusts, subsidies and other rumors of impropriety in the usage of the canal after it is opened.

The resolution was introduced by the chairman of the committee, Representative Adamson, of Georgia. It recited the need of a thorough inquiry into the charges that the canal will be used by trans-continental railroads to stifle competition in freight rates. It empowers the committee to call the aid of the government executive departments to summon witnesses and put them under oath and to get papers and other information throwing light on the matter. The result of the investigation will be in recommendations for laws appropriate to the needs disclosed by the inquiry.

Senator Poindexter of Washington, opened his campaign for the abolition of the commerce court by advocating before the senate interstate commerce committee his bill to end the court's existence. Senator Townsend asked questions designed to show that only those who opposed the creation of the court were disappointed with it. Senator Clarke of Arkansas, declared if the court did not change its attitude he would favor limiting its powers or abolishing it although he had voted to create it.

Washington, D. C. — The interstate commerce committee which has under consideration the matter of tolls for the Panama canal, has practically decided, says Representative Stevens of Minnesota, to have all vessels, whether foreign or domestic, pay the same charges for use of the canal, and that all vessels doing an interstate business which are owned by any railroad in the same trade, shall be excluded from use of the canal.

The Democratic bill to levy an excise tax on all net incomes above $5,000 a year, including salaries, will be reported with the bill to put sugar on the free list. It is expected both measures will be passed by the house within 10 days.

The income tax, or extended corporation act bill, under the senate rules, will go to the committee on judiciary, where it will meet an unfriendly reception. The free sugar bill will go to the finance committee. Senate leaders declare that the finance committee hardly would feel justified in reporting a bill cutting off more than $50,000,000 in revenues without knowing what the senate proposed doing with the income tax bill which is looked to to make up the deficit. On the other hand, it was said the members of the judiciary committee would not be easily convinced of the necessity of the new taxing measure in the absence of the passage of the sugar bill and the consequent deficit in the revenues.

Bristow Scores Stephenson.

Senator Bristow's speech in opposition to the retention of Isaac Stephenson of Wisconsin as a United States senator was concluded. Mr. Bristow read extracts from the testimony intended to show that money had been corruptly used in carrying the primaries for Stephenson. He said large sums of money had been used corruptly in procuring the influence of the game warden of the state and his deputies.

Mr. Bristow occupied two days in the presentation of the facts which he said was a disagreeable duty; but necessary for the protection of the seats of the senate against barter and sales.

As a climax to an exciting session of the committee in which the Lawrence strike conditions were revealed from several rival sources, Representative Victor Berger, of Wisconsin, and Robert McCartney, of the citizens committee of Lawrence almost came to blows and were separated by Representative Wilson of Illinois.

C. — President Taft has taken the initiative in a movement to bring business men of the country into touch with the government for advice and counsel in the administration of laws, the enactment of new statutes and the development of commerce. Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor, has called a convention of delegates from commercial organizations in Washington April 15. Invitations have been sent to 1,000 local chambers of commerce.

Saccharine Barred In Foods.

Washington, D. C. — By a vote of 2 to 1 the board of cabinet officers charged with the enforcement of the pure food law entered a final decision against the use of saccharine in prepared foods. Secretary of Agriculture Wilson and Secretary of Commerce and Labor Magel confirmed the decision that food containing saccharine was adulterated. Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh dissented. One month's grace will be given manufacturers to arrange for the elimination of saccharine.

ATTACKS THE PRIMARY

Heyburn Cites Stephenson's Case as Example of Its Inefficiency.

Washington, D. C. — The primary election system, adopted by many states, was attacked in the senate during consideration of the election of Senator Stephenson of Wisconsin. Senator Heyburn declared the primary opened the way for "graft," while it was condemned as "unsatisfactory" by Senators McCumber and Overman. Senators Borah and Bristow defended the law.

SUGAR TARIFF TO CAUCUS

Ways and Means Committee Members Take Oath of Secrecy.

Washington, D. C. — Democratic members of the house ways and means committee, after many stormy conferences and differences, agreed to make a report to the Democratic caucus on the sugar tariff schedule next Friday afternoon. To guard the exact terms of the revised schedule from publicity, members of the ways and means committee took an oath of secrecy.

RECALL AT MANKATO

Ousted City Employe Files Petition to Remove Mayor and Commissioners.

Mankato.—Petitions were filed asking for a recall election on mayor and four commissioners who comprise the city council under the commission form of government. Those sought to be ousted are Mayor Charles T. Taylor and Commissioners Bangerter, Humiston, Lamm and Henline. The petitions were filed by E. V. Watters, former street commissioner, who was removed last fall, and contains in all 456 names or nearly 100 more than the necessary 15 per cent of the votes cast in the last election.

After being removed three months ago Watters filed charges against the council for alleged violations of the charter in the manner of making public improvements and expending city money. These allegations were investigated by a committee of the Commercial club, and found to be largely technical, and resulting in no detriment of the city's interest. The recall election is asked on the same grounds. There are no charges or intimations of dishonesty or incompetency, on the part of any one.

Under the charter, if the petitions are found to be legal the election must be held in about sixty days.

TO AID LAND DEALERS

Immigration Commissioner Would Help Realty Men With Clients.

The state immigration commissioner is preparing to launch a new plan for the more thorough advertising of Minnesota and its advantages. He proposes that the immigration department be the clearing house for all land men and those having real estate to sell in the state. He wants it to be the central office for the compilation and distribution of names of those wishing to come to Minnesota.

The commissioner proposes that every real estate man who for any reason in the recent past has failed to close with prospects from outside the state send to the state department a list of such prospects. He thinks that, perhaps with the department on their trail such prospects can be suited in some other county or section.

TO VOTE ON LICENSE

Annual Agitating is up Again at Fergus Falls.

Fergus Falls.—A petition was circulated for a vote on the license question at the election on April 2. The city is very evenly divided, a recount being necessary to determine whether it was "wet" or "dry" at the last election. Another close fight is anticipated this year.

Saloon is Held Illegal.

Moorhead.—Whether the Rex hotel and saloon is within the prohibited lines, being in proximitely to a school was recently referred to the attorney general. He says the saloon is illegal. The question hinged on the continuity of a license which, the attorney general says was terminated when license was refused by the city authorities a year ago. The council issued a license transfer several months ago on the ground that license had been issued for that site before the charter provision became a law.

Sues Theater and City.

Pipestone.—Asserting that her husband's death was due to injuries which he received while walking along a street at Watertown, S. D., Mrs. Jessie Rowe of Jasper, this county has brought suit for $30,000 against the proprietors of Watertown. William Rowe was walking in front of the theater when one of the walls fell out and he was crushed. The city is made a party to the action on the ground that its building inspector should have condemned the wall.

NERVOUS HEADACHE

And Numbness in the Hands and Arms.

This Iowa Woman Was in a Serious Condition and Her Cure Will Interest Many.

A cure of unusual interest and importance is related by Mrs. J. H. Morgan, of Correctionville, Iowa. After being a hopeless sufferer from sick headaches, she is now entirely free from attacks. She tells of her cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as follows:

"Some years ago I was in a terribly nervous and run-down condition and suffered greatly from nervous headaches. I was treated for three months by a specialist in Chicago, who advised me to wear glasses, but he did not help me. My head seemed as though it would burst, and I had frequent dizzy spells. I was in despair of getting well until I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and began taking them. A few boxes cured me and since then I have used them as a family medicine.

"Before the birth of my last child I suffered untold agony with pain and numbness in my hands and arms up to the shoulders. My hands were so swollen and the muscles so sore that I could hardly dress myself. For a time I could not close my left hand. During the day if I kept moving the pain did not seem to be so bad, but my hands were always numb. I again used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and found them good for this trouble also, as they entirely relieved me."

Unless properly treated sick headache is a disease of many years duration, as it occurs before the twentieth year in two-thirds of the cases and recurs with more or less regularity until the fiftieth year or later. It is usually hereditary and is probably directly caused by a defect in the process which changes the food we eat into blood. Most sufferers are troubled with obstinate constipation which makes it necessary to use a laxative.

An ideal combination treatment is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and the new laxative pills, Pinklets. This treatment is fully described in a little booklet, "The Treatment of Sick Headache," which is free on request, together with a sample of Pinklets, the little laxative pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Probably the Truth.

The druggist in a small town died, and his widow continued the business. A month later she arranged the window display so that it was very attractive. That week the town paper contained this item of news:

"Mr. Arthur Edwards, a prominent druggist of Higginsville, took in the sights of our city yesterday. He was very much interested in our druggist's attractive widow."

OLEOMARGARINE TAX NEXT TO GO

REPRESENTATIVE HAUGHEN BELIEVES MAJORITY IN HOUSE WILL PASS THE MEASURE.

PREVENT SUBSTITUTION.

Iowan's Bill Already Introduced Represents Wishes of the Dairy Men.—Other Congressional News.

Washington, March 5.—The dairymen of the country are awakening to a realization that the Democratic majority in the house is so friendly to liberal legislation in the interests of oleomargarine that a bill is pretty certain to be favorably reported by the agricultural committee and pass the house, removing the tax from oleomargarine and attempting to prevent fraudulent substitution of oleomargarine for butter by labels on packages. The committee probably will vote on the bill in ten days.

Representative Haughen of Iowa, who has introduced a bill which represents the wishes of the dairymen, said that in his opinion, the Democratic bill giving oleomargarine a better chance in the trade will pass the house. Mr. Haughen has presented what will come to be known as the 'dairy bill.'

Three Provisions Drastic.

The Haughen bill contains two or three drastic provisions intended to protect the butter business, chief among which is the retention of the proposition that oleomargarine, when it enters interstate commerce, shall be subject to the laws of each state or territory in which it enters, and shall be liable to seizure if sold in violation of the laws of such states. The other proposition is the prohibition of the use of any milk, cream, butter, or butter fat in the production of oleomargarine, and another provision is added to the special taxes which are imposed upon manufacturers and wholesale dealers, a clause creating a hotel or restaurant which serves oleomargarine as a retail dealer, subject to a tax of $6 a year. This proposition is that every person, including keepers of these various eating houses, hotels, restaurants, etc., where food is sold, who serves oleomargarine, shall not only pay the special tax as a retail dealer, but shall continually display in the room where oleo is served as a substitute for butter a sign in letters a foot high the words, "Oleo Is Served Here."

A WOMAN DOCTOR

Was Quick to See That Coffee Poison Was Doing the Mischief.

A lady tells of a bad case of coffee poisoning, and tells it in a way so simple and straightforward that literary skill could not improve it.

"I had neuralgic headaches for 12 years," she says, "and have suffered untold agony. When I first began to have them I weighed 140 pounds, but they brought me down to 110.

"I went to many doctors and they gave me only temporary relief. So I suffered on, till one day, a woman doctor advised me to drink Postum. She said I looked like I was coffee poisoned.

"So I began to drink Postum, and gained 15 pounds in the first few weeks and am still gaining, but not so fast as at first. My headaches began to leave me after I had used Postum about two weeks—long enough, I expect, to get the coffee poison out of my system.

"Now that a few months have passed since I began to use Postum, I can gladly say that I never know what a neuralgic headache is like any more, and it was nothing but Postum that relieved me.

"Before I used Postum I never went out alone; I would get bewildered and would not know which way to turn. Now I go alone and my head is as clear as a bell. My brain and nerves are stronger than they have been for years." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

OPEN SEASON FOR GAME FISH ENDED ON LAST THURSDAY

Bass, Pike and Muskellunge legally Safe for Next Two Months —Many Arrests Have Been Made by Game Wardens This Season in Minnesota.

Thursday was the last day of the open season for bass, pike, muskellunge, crappies, perch, sunfish, catfish and sturgeon. At midnight the "lid" went on for bass until May 29, and for other fish until May 1. Nothing but pickerel, suckers, redhorse, carp and bullheads may be taken. There is no closed season for these fish. They may be speared during any month of the year, but artificial lights for such purpose are prohibited during May and June.

According to H. A. Rider, executive agent for the state game and fish commission, there has been less unlawful spearing of fish during the open season, than in previous years. Numerous persons have been arrested, however, for spearing in lakes and streams stocked by the game and fish commission. The game and fish commission is already preparing to start its campaign for spawn with which to stock the state's lakes and streams this spring. There arrived at the offices in the capitol, a box containing 10,000 land-locked salmon spawn, shipped by the federal government from Maine. The box was later taken to the St. Paul hatchery. A day or two ago, 250,000 lake trout squawn arrived at the St. Paul hatchery from Duluth. The spawn was gathered in Lake Superior.

GOVERNOR GREETS

SENDS LETTER OF FELICITATION TO MRS. ROSET SCHMAHL ON HER LEAP YEAR BIRTHDAY.

SURVIVOR OF MASSACRE

Of the Sioux Indians in 1862—Molded Bullets for Soldiers' Day After Birth of Son at Fort Ridgley.

St. Paul.—Mrs. Roset Schmahl, pioneer heroine of the Indian massacre of 1862 and mother of Julius Schmahl, secretary of state, was handed a telegram from Governor Eberhart, congratulating her upon the completion of her eighty-third year. Although Mrs. Schmahl was 84 years, she celebrated her twenty-first birthday, as February 29 comes only once in four years.

The Governor's letter follows:

Recognizing your invaluable services to the state in the trying times of its early history and ranking you as one of its most honored citizens, I want to join in the congratulations of your host of friends on your birthday anniversary, bespeaking for you continued health and prosperity.

In the early days of the Minnesota settlements Mrs. Schmahl and her husband settled in St. Paul and went from here to Traverse des Sioux, where they engaged in the hotel business. Their hotel was the stopping place of Alexander Ramsey, Henry M. Rice and the other early state officials. It was at their hotel that Ramsey met the Indians and paid them their allotments.

Later the Schmahl family moved to Fort Ridgley, where they were at the time of the Sioux massacre of 1862. They were living in a stone farm house near the fort and when the Fifth Minnesota troops came past the farm they forced the family to go to the fort. Twelve hours later all of the persons who had not gone to the fort were massacred.

It was in the fort that Mrs. Schmahl gave birth to Herman G. Schmahl, now a merchant at Redwood Falls. The next day she was molding bullets for the soldiers and helping to care for the wounded. After the defeat of the Indians the family returned to Traverse and later went to Redwood Falls. A few years ago Mrs. Schmahl moved to Duluth and is now living with her daughter, Mrs. John J. Palmer. Of the ten children born to Mrs. Schmahl only six are living. Alexander C., Herman G. and Julius A. Schmahl; Mrs. George Wingett of Dent, Minn.; Mrs. M. Liebenguth of Alexandria and Mrs. John J. Palmer of Duluth.

STATE WINS OLEO CASE

Defense Will Appeal to Supreme Court if New Trial is not Granted.

Mankato.—Ole Hanson, the grocer who sold Swift & Co.'s yellow-tinted oleomargarin, was convicted by a jury in district court here on the charge of selling oleomargarin made in imitation of butter, and not kept free of all coloring and ingredients, giving it a shade or tint of butter. It took the jury of farmers five hours to reach a verdict of guilty. A stay was granted until March 9, and an appeal will follow to the supreme court if a motion for a new trial is not granted, and the constitutionality of the law, passed by the last legislature, will be determined.

Judge Pfau charged the jury that the state must prove intent to imitate butter on the part of the manufacturer of the oleomargarin in question. If the tint or shade of yellow resulted from usual ingredients used to make a good product, it was not unlawful, provided it had quality and color incident to these ingredients, and provided the coloring was not intentionally made to imitate butter.

LOSES LIFE IN SAW

Young Man Feeding Slabs in Sawmill is Caught in Machine.

St. Cloud.—John Hentges, 21 years old, residing near Richmond, this county, died as the result of injuries suffered while working in his father's portable sawmill. The young man was feeding slabs to the circular saw, when a portion of the slab became entangled in the saw and drew both the victim and the timber into the machine. Both of Hentges' legs were horribly lacerated.

Stolen Mail Is Recovered.

Winona.—The long mystery surrounding the disappearance of the pouch of Twin City mail, which was stolen from a truck on the Milwaukee road platform Jan. 4, last, was cleared up when Martin Lechanc, in jail on suspicion, confessed the theft and directed Federal Inspector F. R. Frazier of Minneapolis, and local authorities, to the place where the pouch was hidden. The pouch, still containing most of the mail, had been thrown in a vault at the rear of his home and ashes spread over it to avoid discovery.

SEQUESTERED GEMS

Bankrupt Kasson Jeweler Who Made Burglary Charge is Questioned.

Winona.—Victor P. Mastenbrook, bankrupt jewelry merchant of Kasson, admitted when pressed by counsel for the creditors in bankruptcy court in Winona that he gave a part of his stock to Mando Erickson, a young man of Kasson, just before he filed his petition in bankruptcy.

Erickson came to Winona early this month with the jewelry and the local police, suspecting burglary, placed him under arrest. Mastenbrook came to Winona, identified and claimed the jewelry, and declared Erickson had robbed his store while Mastenbrook was absent in connection with the bankruptcy matter. Erickson, who first alleged the jewelry had been purchased by him from a brick yard worker at Kasson, revised his story and declared it had been given to him by Mastenbrook to hold, pending the bankruptcy proceedings.

Mastenbrook brought no formal burglary charge against Erickson. In the court he said he believed his stock was exempt and that he could do as he pleased with it. In his schedule he set forth his assets were $200, all of which he claimed was exempt, and the creditors demanded to know why he did not also include the goods given to Erickson if they, too, were exempt. Mastenbrook's liabilities are $1,672. The first hearing of the creditors was adjourned to March 19.

FIGHT FOR STATE AID

Court to Decide Seniority of Rival Agricultural Society in Morrison County.

St Paul.—The dispute between two Morrison county associations, each of which claims to be the senior agricultural society in the county and therefore entitled to the state aid granted by statute, came before Judge Lewis of the Ramsey county district court yesterday. The hearing was in the mandamus case of the state on the relation of the Morrison County Agricultural society, which holds its fairs in Motley, against State Auditor S. G. Iverson to compel him to draw a warrant in favor of the society in the sum of $428, the amount paid in legitimate premiums.

The rival of the plaintiff society is the Morrison County Agricultural Co-operative Society of Little Falls, which says it is the successor of the Little Falls Street Fair association and lays claim to seniority and title to the state allowance.

The conflicting claims of these two societies have been reviewed at a hearing before the state auditor, who decided in favor of the Little Falls society as senior, and will pay it the state bounty unless prevented by the court.

MAKES MONEY IN PRISON

Stillwater Convict Ends 14 Months' Term and Gets $250.

Stillwater.—Edward Matthews was released from the state prison and was paid $250 as money he had earned for overtime in fourteen months' incarceration. He was an expert operator of spindles in the binder twine factory and earned as much as $15 a month for extra time.

Matthews was arrested on a charge of grand larceny in December, 1910. He was then working on the farm of Joseph L. Tauer, at Cottage Grove, in the southern part of Washington county. Matthews was charged with selling various farm products belonging to his employer and offering to sell a span of horses. He pleaded guilty, and gave as a reason for a badly bruised face and head that he had fallen out of a wagon while suffering from a "brain storm."

Matthews called at the court house after being released from prison to get two satchels of clothing; showed his money and told how he had made a "stake" in prison. He left for the state of Washington, where he has a brother. Formerly he was a stonemason in Iowa.

DUMAS TRIAL COST $1,000

Bill is to Be Presented Beltrami Commissioners in Detail March 14.

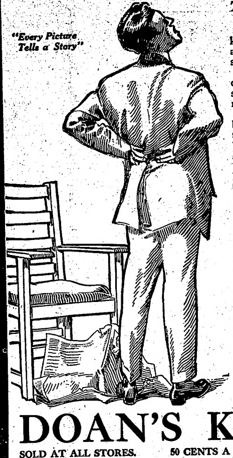
St. Paul.—Attorney General Smith returned from Beltrami county, where he was in conference with county commissioners relative to bills, aggregating about $1,000, incurred in the trial of Dr. D. F. Dumas, of Cass Lake, charged with incendiarism. An agreement was reached whereby Mr. Smith is to reitemize the bills and present them at a meeting of the board March 14.

WOMAN LOSES LEG

Alleges Husband Fired Shots—He Called It Accident.

Hibbing.—Mrs. John Backs, the Lavalle township woman, who was shot through both knees about two weeks ago, alleging the shooting was done by her husband, underwent an operation, one of her legs being removed. She is reported as having rallied. The husband is in jail at Duluth, awaiting trial. He alleges the shooting was accidental.

IS THE PAIN THERE?



"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Then Your Kidneys May Be Weak and in Need of Quick Attention

Backache is enough cause to suspect the kidneys. The kidneys are in the small of the back. Congested kidneys swell and throb. The back naturally aches. It hurts to bend or stoop or to sit down.

Kidney trouble may come on all unnoticed. A cold, a chill, a fever, a strain or irregular habits may start it. While sick kidneys can be cured in the beginning, it is a serious matter when dropsy, gravel or Bright's disease sets in.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made a reputation in the cure of backache, and kidney and bladder ills. The best proof is the testimony of the users. Here are two typical testimonials. Thirty thousand others are being published in the newspapers. A postage stamp will bring you reports of cases nearer home.

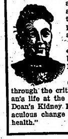
MRS. MARY I. REMINGTON.

A Resident of Gilroy, Cal.

Cured of Serious Case at a Critical Period.



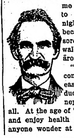
"I suffered so severely from pain and soreness over my kidneys," says Mrs. Remington, "that it was a task for me to turn in bed. My kidneys acted very freely but secretions were retarded and scalded in passage. I was weak and much run down.

"After taking other remedies without benefit, I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was completely cured. I was going through the critical period of a woman's life at the time, and after using Doan's Kidney Pills there was a miraculous change for the better in my health."

SHELDON SMITH.

Prop. Arlington House, Woodland, Cal.

Cured of Serious Case and Feels Like a Boy, Despite His 76 Years.



"Three years ago I was almost helpless," said Mr. Smith, "Kidney secretions scalded terribly and obliged me to arise ten to twelve times a night. My left limb became so stiff and sore I could hardly walk—just hobbled around with a cane.

"I had almost every complaint that diseased kidneys produce and Doan's Kidney Pills cured them all. At the age of 76 I feel like a boy, and enjoy health and comfort. Can anyone wonder at my gratitude?"

COLD COMFORT FOR MOTHER

Comment of Boston Belle on Young Man's Conduct Was Icy in the Extreme.

General F. D. Grant, at a Washington's birthday dinner in New York some years ago, told a story about a young Boston Tory.

"This Tory," he said, "fought during the Revolution neither on one side nor on the other. He took a pleasure trip on the Continent, and he didn't come back home again until the war was over.

"He was treated very coldly by society on his return, and this grieved his good old mother to the heart.

"The dear old lady tried to explain the matter one afternoon to a Boston belle.

"'Naturally, as the head of the family,' she said, 'my son could not take part in the war. To him fell the duty, perhaps the more arduous duty, of protecting his mother and sisters and looking after the interests of the estate.'

"'O, madam,' said the belle, with an icy smile, 'you need not explain. I assure you, I'd have done exactly as your son did—I'm such a coward!'"

HANDS WOULD CRACK OPEN

"About two months ago my hands started to crack open and bleed, the skin would scale off, and the good flesh would burn and itch dreadfully. When my hands first started to get sore, there were small blisters like water blisters which formed. They itched dreadfully, it just seemed as though I could tear the skin all off. I would scratch them and the skin would peel off, and the flesh would be all red and crack open and bleed. It worried me very much, as I had never had anything the matter with my skin. I was so afraid I would have to give up my employment.

"My doctor said he didn't think it would amount to anything. But it kept getting worse. One day I saw a piece in one of the papers about a lady who had the same trouble with her hands. She had used Cuticura Soap and Ointment and was cured. I decided to try them, and my hands were all healed before I had used one cake of Cuticura Ointment. I am truly thankful for the good results from the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, for thanks to them I was cured, and did not have to lose a day from work. I have had no return of the skin trouble." (Signed) Mrs. Mary E. Breig, 2522 Brown Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura." Dept. L, Boston.

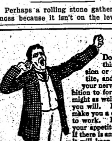
Do You Feel This Way?



Do you feel all tired out? Do you sometimes think you just can't work away at your profession or trade any longer? Do you have a poor appetite, and lay awake at nights unable to sleep? Are your nerves all gone, and your stomach too? Has ambition to forge ahead in the world left you? If so, you might as well put a stop to your misery. You can do it if you will. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will make you a different individual. It will set your lazy liver to work. It will set things right in your stomach, and your appetite will come back. It will purify your blood. If there is any tendency in your family toward consumption, it will keep that dread destroyer away. Even after consumption has almost gained a foothold in the form of a lingering cough, bronchitis, or bleeding at the lungs, it will bring about a cure in 98 per cent. of all cases. It is a remedy prepared by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., whose advice is given free to all who wish to write him. His great success has come from his wide experience and varied practice.

Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. Pierce's medicines, recommended to be "just as good." Dr. Pierce's medicines are OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Their every ingredient printed on their wrappers. Made from roots without alcohol. Contain no habit-forming drugs. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

WARNING!

SIGN NOTHING!

Recently there has been a gentleman traveling thru the country especially thru eastern Red Lake and Pennington Counties claiming to be from McIntosh representing some supposed land firm from Grand Forks listing farms for sale and getting the owners of the land to sign listing contracts tying them up for a period of 6 or 8 months and listing these lands regardless of the price asked by the owners as that part of it is immaterial to them for the reason that it is not their intention at all to even attempt to sell these lands but merely to tie them up so that the owners themselves even cannot dispose of it as while this party driving thru the country listing these lands may tell you that it is not their intention to record these contracts the fact of the matter is that all of same are being recorded at the Court house in Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls thus clouding the title which the farmer would not know anything about until in case he should happen to sell himself when getting out the abstract of title he would then see his contract of record which would prevent him from closing his deal and even prevent him from renewing his old loan on same unless he first had settled with that land company paying whatever amount they would ask for releasing that contract of record.

It is an old game and has been worked by various unscrupulous land firms and companies in various places thruout this and other States and only works a hardship on the owners of the land. Quarters have been listed for $5000.00 that would not sell for more than $2500. which conclusively goes to show that it is not the selling of the land they are after but simply tying it up and in that way knowing that the farmer perhaps within a year or so would either sell it himself or have to make a new loan he would be obliged to come to them and pay them for getting it off the records and even if a sale of that kind did not take place for the next ten years the contract would still be there so that sooner or later a settlement would necessarily have to be made.

Sign no contracts or agreements of any kind unless you are absolutely sure of what you are signing and if not go to your nearest bank or person familiar with that kind of business and ask him about it and in that way save yourself not only trouble but also money.

Married Yesterday

Yesterday at the home of the brides parents near Mahnomen occured the marriage of Miss Amanda Anderson to Mr. Osmund Rice of this place. The wedding was a pretty home affair in which only immediate relatives and friend of the contracting parties were in attendance. The nuptile party will arrive here the latter part of this week and on Saturday evening will tender their many friends a reception and dance at the city hall.

The bride is well known in this vicinity having at one time made her home here, while the groom has been a resident here for some time. They have both a large circle of admiring friends who take pleasure in extending to them their best wishes of success and happiness while they travel life's road together.

They will leave for North Dakota in a few days where the groom has rented a farm and where they will make their home.

The Pioneer joins their host of friends in extending congratulations.

Grand Concert At Thief River Falla.

An effort is being made to secure the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra for a concert at Thief River Falls at some date the latter part of this month.

Thief River Falls made a name for itself by having the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra last spring and encouraged by the success of that venture, an attempt is being made to book the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra for some date this spring and we hope that this will also be a success as it deserves to be, and in this event people in the nearby towns will undoubtedly be on hand as such opportunities in the musicial line are rare.

But give the same man a new suit, clean linen, a good hat and shinning shoes and you will see how soon fear will fly away and confidence be restored. HAIL AMUNDSON AS DISCOVERER

NORWEGIAN EXPLORER CABLES THAT HE FOUND POLE ON DEC. 14.

SCOTT STORY A MISTAKE

Remained Three Days To Secure Proofs —Will Return Home Through the Northwest Passage.

Christiania, Norway. — Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, has cabled two local newspapers from Hobart, Tasmania, that he reached the south pole on Dec. 14, 1911.

The dispatch is as follows:

"Pole reached fourteenth-seventeenth December."

Captain Amundsen sent a second cable denying having telegraphed that Captain Scott of the British expedition had reached the south pole or that he had telegraphed anything at all about Scott.

Honor Goes to Amundsen.

The honor for the achievement of reaching the south pole must now be given to the Norwegian explorer until Lieutenant Scott announces the results of his expedition.

Captain Amundsen has, for many years, been considered one of the most daring and competent of explorers. A sailor from youth he started polar research at the age of 25, when he participated in the Belgian antarctic expedition under command of Gerlache. He was first officer of the vessel, and the voyage lasted from 1897 to 1899. On his return he made up his mind to continue polar research, but this time he decided to go to the north in an endeavor to discover the northwest passage.

He prepared himself for the task by undergoing a course of two years' study in magnetism and meteorology, after which he sailed for the north from Christiania on board the Gjoa, with a crew of only eight men, June 16, 1903.

Proceeding to Lancaster sound he sailed past Cape Adelaide and King William land and Ross strait. The vessel wintered in that part. For many months Amundsen drifted along, and finally, on August 26, met an American whaler to the east of Cape Bathurst. He ultimately brought his little vessel through the Behring strait and thus, for the first time, accomplished the northwest passage.

During the voyage he determined exactly the position of the magnetic pole. Altogether he was three years away from Norway.

The Fram, which Captain Amundsen selected for his latest expedition, has been used for many years in arctic explorations. From 1893 to 1896, during the expedition of Dr. Fridjof Nansen, she covered a journey of about 7,000 miles in the Arctic ocean, 3,000 miles of this being accomplished while she was frozen solid in the ice. She was not damaged at all during this voyage.

Telegrams of congratulations in the name of King Haakon of the Norwegian government and of the Geographical society here were forwarded to Captain Amundsen at Hobart. His majesty has consented to the use of his name and that of Queen Maud on the maps of the newly discovered territory in the Antarctic. This city is gayly decorated with flags and bunting in honor of Captain Amundsen's accomplishment.

Amundsen Makes Denial.

Hobart.—Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, denies having telegraphed anything regarding Captain Robert Scott or the British expedition.

Captain Amundsen, up to the present, is the only member of the antartic expedition who has landed from the Fram. Nobody is allowed to go on board the vessel under any pretext whatever. The explorer says he is pleased with the results of his expedition but otherwise maintains absolute silence on the subject.

Captain Amundsen intends to stay at Hobart for a few days. He will then go to Australia and give a few lectures there, afterward departing for Europe by the circuitous route of Buenos Aires, then around Cape Horn up to Bering Straits, and through the Northwest passage and the Arctic ocean.

Dr. Cook's Comment.

New York.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook heard the news of the discovery of the south pole at his uptown hotel, where he had just returned from a lecture tour. "It is not only possible that Scott and Amundsen crossed each other, but it is likely that both men met at the pole," said Dr. Cook, with a smile. "Captain Scott, at the very latest, ought to be heard from in ten days."

RAISING RICE IN PHILIPPINES

Wonderful Rice Terraces Were Built by Savage Ifugaos in the Island of Luzon.

Panay, P. I.—Almost every traveler in the Orient has seen or heard of the rice terraces in Japan, China and the region of the Straits Settlements. But more wonderful than any of these, according to the Scientific American, are those of the Ifugaos, a tribe living in Luzon, one of our own Philippine islands.

From an industrial viewpoint the Ifugao terraces represent the most colossal undertakings in the Philippines and perhaps the most stupendous task ever accomplished by a thoroughly savage people. Viewing the terraces, one compares them with such works as the Pyramids or the great wall of China, or even with the Roman viaducts.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Cultivating a Rice Field.

In the art of intensive cultivation the Ifugaos have progressed far. They irrigate and fertilize in a single operation. Water deflected from mountain streams or arising from springs passes through decomposed vegetable matters, ashes, black alluvial soil and manure, and is then conducted to the topmost rice terrace, carrying in suspension rich fertilizing matter which is evenly distributed.

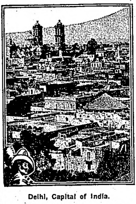
There is thus no part of a rice paddy which is not fertilized. From the topmost terrace the water flows through a gap in the retaining wall to the terrace next below, still carrying fertilizing matter in suspension. Most of the work in the paddies is done by the women, who wade about stirring up the sediment. Sometimes the rice straw of a harvested crop is covered over with dirt and allowed to rot. The result produces the finest rice raised in the Philippines, of great size, and it is said by experts of practically perfect form. Ranchers in the west occasionally run an irrigating ditch through fertilizing matter, but the practice is not general.

REMOVAL OF INDIA'S CAPITAL

Change Made From Calcutta to Delhi Rights an Ancient Wrong.

London.—The commercial instinct of the East India Company led it to perpetrate a great outrage upon Indian national susceptibilities by removing the capital to Calcutta. Ever since the dawn of civilization Delhi had figured as the government seat. The Hindus and Moslems both had favored it in this way. Off and on in the course of centuries whimsical rulers had jilted India's hub for some other favorite city, but sooner or later the lucky metropolis always managed to gain the upper hand over its rivals.

The East India Company, knowing little of and caring less for the sentiments of Indians, established the capital of India at Calcutta, for situated as it was on the banks of the Hooghli, a navigable river, it was easy of access from the sea, whereas Delhi was hundreds of miles from any port.



Delhi, Capital of India.

When the suzerainty of the peninsula was transferred from the commercial corporation to the British Crown at the close of the Indian Sepoy mutiny of 1857 Hindustan hoped that justice would be done to its imperial city; but it was disappointed.

Thus it has been reserved for King George V. to right this wrong and make all Hindustan happy over it. Only a very limited number of people will decry this measure. Among these no doubt are the alien and native merchants and property holders of Calcutta who have fed and fattened on the necessities of those who must perforce make their homes in the capital.

Spleen Was Broken.

INCREASE FOR 150,000

OUTLOOK REPORTED FAVORABLE TO COTTON AND WOOLEN MILL OPERATIVES.

5 PER CENT RAISE APRIL 1

Haywood, Yates, Ettor and Trautman, Leaders of the Lawrence Strike, Accused of Misusing Contribution to Relief Fund.

Boston, Mass. — It is estimated that 150,000 cotton and woolen mill operatives in northern New England will share in an advance in wages of at least 5 per cent before April 1. Advices received here indicate that manufacturers in Fall River and elsewhere in southern New England are considering the advisability of meeting the increase decided upon by mills having their head offices in Boston. Should the 30,000 operatives in Fall River and a like number in New Bedford be given higher wages manufacturers at other southern New England points feel that it would be policy for them to take similar action.

An advance in all New England textile districts would directly affect from 250,000 to 300,000 persons. In New Bedford the textile council held a meeting to consider a plan of communicating with the manufacturers' association regarding higher pay. Otis N. Pierce, president of his association, expressed his personal opinion that the fine goods market was not on a basis sufficiently firm to warrant an advance at this time.

Unrest in Fall River.

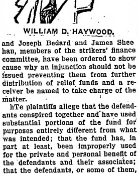
Considerable unrest exists among the mill employes of Fall River. The mill firemen there held a meeting to discuss a demand for a wage increase and this subject will be discussed during the week at meetings of the carders', spinners', slashers' and weavers' unions. There has been no change in the wage scale in Fall River since 1908 and some of the manufacturers say privately that they expect to grant an increase of 5 per cent April 1.

Notices of a 4 per cent wage raise were posted in Maine and New Hampshire cotton mills, employing 35,000 hands.

Mills in various Massachusetts towns advanced the pay of about 11,000 employes.

Labor Chiefs Accused.

Joseph J. Ettor, William D. Haywood, William Yates and William Traut, leaders of the Lawrence strike, and Joseph Bedard and James Sheehan, members of the strikers' finance committee, have been ordered to show cause why an injunction should not be issued preventing them from further distribution of relief funds and a receiver be named to take charge of the matter.



WILLIAM D. HAYWOOD.

hTe plaintiffs allege that the defendants conspired together and have used substantial portions of the fund for purposes entirely different from what was intended; that the fund has, in part at least, been improperly used for the private and personal benefit of the defendants and their associates; that the defendants, or some of them, have drawn sums from the fund as salaries, a purpose for which they had no right to use the fund; that substantial amounts have been contributed for the board and private expenses of Ettor; large sums paid for the transportation to New York and other cities of children for the purpose of inducing the public to swell the fund; that large sums have been paid to counsel for defending Ettor; and other large amounts turned over to the Industrial Workers of the World.

20 DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

Dubuque, Ia., Man Breaks Long Fast in Good Health.

Dubuque, Iowa. — Twenty days without a bite to eat and nothing to drink except water is the record of L. S. Obsonreiter, a local business man. He celebrated the finish of his fast with a square meal in a downtown hotel. When Obsonreiter began his fast he weighed 243 pounds, and now he weighs 226 pounds, though not a whit the worse off in point of health.

HEALTH FOR THE CHILD.

The careful mother, watching closely the physical peculiarities of her children, soon learns that health is in a great measure dependent upon normal, healthy, regular bowel action. When the bowels are inactive, loss of appetite, restlessness during sleep, irritability and a dozen and one similar evidences of physical disorder are soon apparent.

Keep the bowels free and clear and good health is assured. At the first sign of constipation give the child a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bed-time and repeat the dose the following night, if necessary. You will find the child will quickly recover its accustomed good spirits, and eat and sleep normally.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable to salts, cathartics and purgative waters which are harsh in their action. Syrup Pepsin acts on the bowels easily and naturally, yet positively, and causes no griping or discomfort. Its tonic properties build up the stomach, liver and bowels, restoring their normal condition.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this remedy, send for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. He will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Shot With a Knife.

Years ago in a stock performance of a famous old melodrama, the villain, Charles Wolcott, suddenly discovered that he had left his revolver in the dressing room. In much confusion, he fumbled in his pocket and found a penknife which, he figured, would do just as well for the bloody deed. Imagine his consternation when, after plunging the blade into the hero's breast, that player failed to change his lines and screamed at the top of his voice: "Heaven forgive you! I'm shot."

Humorous Thrust.

"How—"

The savage chief held a glittering spear near the captive missionary.

"—do you like this?"

His tone was not facetious, but the captive was undismayed.

"Well, if you ask me—"

He glanced at the weapon, the propinquity of which was not comforting.

"—it goes against my stomach!"

Unfortunately, however, the captive was in a locality where there is no market for humor, and the end came soon.

Romance of the Rail.

It was on a Pullman car. The man who traveled for gents' furnishings had succeeded in working up a conversation with the lonesome-looking young woman. He leaned over her and breathed in her ear:

"Peaches, I'm taking a little trip to New York. Don't you want to go along?"

"Sir," she said, angrily, "you are going too far!"

But she didn't object to accompanying him as far as Schenectady.

FROM THE NORTH COUNTRY
Where the Winters Are Cold and the Snows Deep.

Writing from the vicinity David Harum made famous, a man says that he was an habitual coffee drinker, and, although he knew it was doing him harm, was too obstinate to give it up, till all at once he went to pieces with nervousness and insomnia, loss of appetite, weakness, and a generally used-up feeling, which practically unfitted him for his arduous occupation, and kept him on a couch at home when his duty did not call him out.

"While in this condition Grape-Nuts food was suggested to me, and I began to use it. Although it was in the middle of winter, and the thermometer was often below zero, almost my entire living for about six weeks of severe exposure was on Grape-Nuts food with a little bread and butter and a cup of hot water, till I was wise enough to make Postum my table beverage.

"After the first two weeks I began to feel better and during the whole winter I never lost a trip on my mail route, frequently being on the road 7 or 8 hours at a time.

"The constant marvel to me was how a person could do the amount of work and endure the fatigue and hardship as I did, on so small an amount of food. But I found my new rations so perfectly satisfactory that I have continued them—using both Postum and Grape-Nuts at every meal, and often they comprise my entire meal.

"All my nervousness, irritability and insomnia have disappeared and healthy, natural sleep has come back to me. But what has been perhaps the greatest surprise to me is the fact that with the benefit to my general health has come a remarkable improvement in my eye-sight.

"If a good appetite, good digestion, good eye-sight, strong nerves and an active brain are to be desired, I can say from my own experience, use Grape-Nuts and Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HIS MODESTY OF HIGH ORDER

Tinker, of Course, Loved His Neighbor as Himself, but That Wasn't Too Much.

Lord Tankerville, who is sending his son to an American school, said the other day in New York:

"There are too many Englishmen—and English boys as well—who develop, in the presence of a lord, a painful and unnatural modesty. Their modesty reminds me of a village tinker.

"This tinker had a rather crusty disposition, and his pastor said to him one day:

"'My man, you should love your neighbor as yourself.'

"'Yes, sir,' said the tinker.

"But the pastor had in mind a nasty black eye that the tinker had given the bricklayer next door, and so he went on:

"'Do you, though, do you, honestly, love your neighbor as yourself?'

"'Yes, sir; oh, yes, sir,' said the tinker; and he added, 'but I'm a modest man, ye see, and, to tell the truth, I ain't a bit stuck on myself, sir.'"

$340,000 FOR ROADS

STATE HIGHWAYS COMMISSION APPORTIONS 1912 FUND AMONG THE DIFFERENT COUNTIES.

MINIMUM SHARE IS $2,000

South Fares Best—Result of Quarter Mill Tax and Share of Federal Land Sales—Pennington County Road Approved.

St. Paul.—The state highway commission today apportioned the 1912 road fund amounting to $340,000, among the counties of the state. The money comes from the quarter-mill tax levy, income from investments of the internal improvement land fund, and the 5 per cent given the state from sale of the federal lands within the state. The total is about $20,000 more than was believed would be available.

Southern Part of State Gets Most.

The joint resolution, passed by the last Legislature, providing that counties, which did not share in the old "pork barrel" appropriation, should first receive approximately $100,000 before apportioning the entire sum throughout the state was generally observed, although a few deviations were made.

The minimum each county will get this year is $2,000 and the maximum $8,000. The counties in the northern part of the state get approximately $140,300 of the fund and counties in the southern part of the state $199,700.

Approval of the proposed new state highway in Pennington county was given by the commission.

It is intended by this approval to provide a basis on which opponents of the Elwell road law may start proceedings in the courts to test the validity of the bill if they so desire. The commission also placed its approval on the Deer river and Northome road.

FARMERS' BODY ON ROAD

Leading Stock Raiser of Otter Tail County Expires Suddenly.

Fergus Falls.—Parties who were in from the town of Aastad brought news of the death of Thorwald H. Thorson, one of the leading stock raisers of this county, his body being found by the roadside near his home. Mr. Thorson had driven to Wendell, eighteen miles south of here, to sell some hogs and was returning home late in the evening. A neighbor who happened to be coming from the opposite direction noticed that his team had left the road and gone over to a haystack, and went over to investigate. He found the team without a driver and going back over the road which they had come, he discovered the body of Mr. Thorson. He had apparently died from heart disease.

Mr. Thorson made a specialty of raising thoroughbred stock, and took a large percentage of the prizes at the county fair here last fall.

SEEK MURDER SUSPECT

St. Louis County Authorities Expect Arrest of Slayer of Asa Shepard.

Duluth.—The sheriff's office is making every effort to apprehend Frank McClusky, on whose land the body of Asa Shepard, the Kelsey homesteader, was found buried in the snow with evidence of murder.

Sheriff Meining received a second telegram from Deputy Sheriff Frank Magie, at Kelsey, in which it is intimated that the murdered Grand Army veteran never went to Superior to mortgage his land. The deputy telegraphed that Shepard had no acquaintance in Superior, and that his murderer came to Superior with the deed to his farm and his pension papers. The deputy stated that McClusky was seen in Eveleth February 29, with $300 in his possession.

BOOSTING GOOD ROADS

Five Hundred Dollars Subscribed At Madison Lake.

Madison Lake. — At a good roads meeting here an organization was formed, with John Brown president, Joseph Fasnacht secretary and J. Rousch treasurer. Nearly $500 was subscribed. Several business men from Madison Lake were present, and each gave $25. It is expected to grade and gravel six miles of road, and connect with the Mankato-Twin City state road.

Ride on Falling Tree Fatal.

Brainerd.—In cutting timber in the woods at Hamlet Lake, near the Deerwood fish hatchery, Ole Tunneson climbed to the top of a lodged tree, chopped away the branches and attempted a dare-devil woodsman's feat of riding to the ground with the pine tree. In jumping like a squirrel from the descending tree he lost his balance, fell backward in the path of the tree, fractured his skull and died within an hour, never regaining consciousness. Tunneson was single, 27 years old, and possessor of farm land.

MOORHEAD ON STAND AGAIN

RELATES HOW HE FEARED BEING INTERCEPTED.

Moorhead Man Says Logging Line Zigzagged Through Best Timber Tract.

Washington, D. C.—W. K. Moorhead, witness before the Graham committee, was again on the stand and was asked by Representative George to go into details regarding his statement that when collecting affidavits on the White Earth reservation he feared he might be intercepted in his effort to take the affidavits to Washington. "When I was about ready to return to Washington," Mr. Moorhead replied, "a friend of mine who had recently been in Park Rapids, the nearest point to the railroad, said that several persons had asked when I would reach Park Rapids and when I would start for Washington. My friend said he inferred from their questions that they hoped to persuade me not to present my affidavits to the federal authorities and might even accompany me on the train.

"It was plain they represented the interests involved in my affidavits. Not desiring to take any risks I proceeded north and took the railroad at another point."

Mr. Moorhead also discussed the construction of the Nicholas-Chisholm logging railroad, running 15 miles north of Pontsford in navigable waters. "This incident in the White Earth history should be investigated. The Nichols-Chisholm people were given concessions to pass over the Indian lands with their railroad after compensating the owners for timber. It appears, however, that the compensation was merely nominal, and that the railroad builders twisted their route in and out so as to pass through the finest pine timber, besides cutting a path many times wider than their permit allowed. When I saw the amount paid the Indians for this timber I was amazed at its smallness."

TO PUSH RIVER WORK

Government Prepares for Short, Active Season on Mississippi.

Winona.—A short but active season is the general outlook for the government in its work of improving the Mississippi river for navigation this year. It is generally conceded that government crews will be unable to resume work along the river for at least six weeks, as ice in the Mississippi is from three to four feet in thickness.

Larger crews than ever before will replace the ones which operated in this section last year. It is understood also that two or three extra crews will be operating this year to augment the government's force. One or two of these will work in the immediate vicinity of Lake Pepin.

When the season's work is completed the sixteen-mile stretch between Winona and Richmond, which is said to be a model of river construction, will become merely a link in a long chain of similar channel. The entire river from Lake Pepin to the Wisconsin river will compare favorably with this sixteen miles.

Electric Company Sues City.

Fergus Falls.—Papers have been filed in the United States court in this city in a suit brought by the Western Electric company against the city of Detroit, Minn., for $6,366.33. The company alleges that it contracted to put in a municipal electric light plant for the city and was to receive $11,628 for the labor and material. It was also to be paid for extras, and these amounted to $4,667.07. The city has paid something over $9,000, and was to pay the balance when the plant was formally accepted, but it is alleged that it has delayed the formal acceptance and final payment, although the plant has been in successful operation for over a year.

School Site Fight Renewed.

Grand Rapids.—Judge Templeton of the district court has been advised that the plaintiffs in the famous Minot normal school site suit will appeal to the supreme court from the decision which was made by him. The plain-plaintiffs contend that there was an agreement between themselves and the board of normal control whereby the property that was donated to the state for normal school purposes, and which was a part of the city of Minot, was to be vacated so far as the easements held by the city for streets and alleys were concerned.

Asks Relief For Indians.

Washington.—Chairman Graham of the White Earth investigating committee, introduced a bill providing an appropriation of $25,000 for the immediate relief of diseased and indigent members of the White Earth Indian tribe. The proposed fund is to be taken from the White Earth money now in the federal treasury and is to be handled by the Red Cross society, through whom clothing, medicine, attention and other care will be distributed among the sufferers.

Great Northern Gains Big.

St. Paul. — The gross earnings of the Great Northern Railway company for the first seven months of the present fiscal year exceeded those of any similar period in the history of the system. Even the high mark of 1910 was eclipsed. The operating revenue of the Great Northern for the period named was $40,424,468.86, a gain of $2,315,052.93. Total operating expenses were $20,202,174.84, a decrease of nearly $1,000,000, leaving a net revenue of over $19,000,000, or an actual increase of $3,270,633.85.

Two Charged With Arson.

Baudette.—Joseph Lafave and Oscar Baker have been arrested by Deputy State Fire Marshal Fullerton on the charge of arson in the first degree. It is reported that Baker has confessed that he had been hired by Lafave to burn the building, which was insured for $600. It was owned by Lafave. It was found that two holes had been bored and kerosene poured in. Mrs. Villadeau and three children, who were sleeping upstairs, didn't hear any noise

DREADED ATAXIA

What Active Treatment With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Accomplished in a Recent Case.

Mr. Francis M. Poole, a harness maker, of Garvin, Lyon Co., Minn., says: "My illness started in 1902, with sharp pains all through my limbs. At first I thought it was rheumatism but the pains kept getting more and more severe and I grew steadily worse. Later a numbness came over my feet. It gradually extended up my legs to my spine and waist. By this time I had lost all control of my legs. Next my bladder and bowels were affected and I lost all control of them. At this stage of the disease I was perfectly helpless and from November, 1905, to April, 1906, I was confined to the bed. My memory was so affected that I thought I would lose my mind. I looked just like a dead person. My lips and finger nails were blue. I suffered with terrible sharp, shooting pains and could get relief only from the use of morphine.

"I was treated by five St. Paul doctors. All of them pronounced my case locomotor ataxia. One said I could not live a year and another told my wife all he could do for me was to give medicine to relieve the pain. I was discouraged and, when my brother-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I did so willingly for he had read of their curing a case similar to mine. I started to take the pills in March, 1906, while I was still confined to bed. I took several boxes when I felt a slight change for the better and had a healthier look. I was finally able to go to the country but kept on with the treatment. The bluish color left my lips and my eyes became brighter. I took the pills a long time and the next spring in May I could walk around. In June I went to work although still weak. I kept on gaining and am now working without the return of a symptom of my former trouble and without losing a days' work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People absolutely cured me and I want all fellow sufferers to know of my wonderful recovery."

Those who are interested in the treatment which cured this case should have our booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System," which will be sent to every nervous sufferer upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

"WHY SHOULD I USE CUTICURA SOAP?"

"There is nothing the matter with my skin, and I thought Cuticura Soap was only for skin troubles." True, it is for skin troubles, but its great mission is to prevent skin troubles. For more than a generation its delicate emollient and prophylactic properties have rendered it the standard for this purpose, while its extreme purity and refreshing fragrance give to it all the advantages of the best of toilet soaps. It is also invaluable in keeping the hands soft and white, the hair live and glossy, and the scalp free from dandruff and irritation.

While its first cost is a few cents more than that of ordinary toilet soaps, it is prepared with such care and of such materials, that it wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of other soap, and making its use, in practice, most economical. Cuticura Soap is sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but the truth of these claims may be demonstrated without cost by sending to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston, for a liberal sample cake, together with a thirty-two page book on the skin and hair.

FOR POPULAR VOTE

GOVERNOR A. O. EBERHART AND CHAIRMAN E. E. SMITH AGREE TO CASWELL PROPOSAL.

COMMITTEE FAVORABLE

Count to Be Made in Each Precinct and Reported to State Convention—Governor Expresses His Approval.

St. Paul.—Governor A. O. Eberhart and Chairman E. E. Smith of the republican state committee agreed to the plan for a popular vote test on presidential choice, outlined by I. A. Caswell of the Roosevelt committee. While this does not bind the republican state committee, it commits the state organization to the plan, and leaves little doubt that the state committee will ask to have the popular vote recorded in the caucuses. The state committee was named by Governor Eberhart.

The Caswell plan was presented to Governor Eberhart by Frank Knox of Michigan, representing the Roosevelt national committee. He was accompanied by Mr. Caswell and A. A. D. Rahn, and Secretary Ralph W. Wheelock also sat in the conference.

They talked the proposition over and the Caswell plan was submitted to the governor in writing, as follows:

The republican state central committee to instruct the county republican committee in each county to include in its call for caucuses and convention a request that all ballots to be used at such meetings be so prepared that the voter may express thereon his choice as to presidential candidates and that the secretary of each caucus report the result in his precinct to the county convention and that the secretary of the county convention report the result in his county to the district or state convention.

Governor Eberhart wrote underneath as follows: "After reading it twice over I approve of this plan. Some such plan as this must be adopted. I stand for any plan which, properly safeguarded, will give the people an opportunity to express their choice."

Mr. Caswell issued a statement giving the result of the conference. Chairman Smith was not present and is not mentioned in the statement, but was consulted over the telephone by Mr. Knox and later by Mr. Rahn. He said that he had no objection to the plan, and as far as he personally is concerned will not oppose its adoption.

This means that the Taft forces have accepted the challenge of the Roosevelt men, which also had been made in less definite form by the La Follette men, and will submit to a verdict of the people in each district and in the state at large. Every vote cast in the caucuses will count, whether it is cast for the winning delegate ticket in the precinct or not.

MISSING MAN SLAIN

Body of Aged Kelsey, Minn., Farmer Found by Deputy Sheriff.

Duluth.—Asa Shepard, a Civil war veteran, 76 years old, who has been missing from his homestead near Kelsey, four miles from here, since February 23, was murdered, according to a telegram received here from a deputy sheriff sent from Duluth to investigate. The telegram read: "Have found Shepard's body. He was murdered."

Shepard was a widower and recently purchased 144 acres of land near Kelsey. For the past year he has not resided on the homestead, but has been living in a small shack on the edge of the village. A week ago Friday he was last seen alive. He was then in good health. When he was missed a search was made, and his friends in Duluth were questioned, as he frequently came to this city to attend Grand Army gatherings.

The finding of his body by the deputy solves the mystery of his disappearance, but the reason for the murder is still unknown. It is believed that the aged man was probably killed for his money.

ROAD MEETING HELD

Owatonna.—More than three hundred men, the great majority of whom were farmers vitally interested in good roads work, attended a meeting here. Township supervisors, road commissioners and good roads boosters from miles around were present and sat down to a dinner provided by the Business Men's league and served by Universalist church members.

John R. Morley read from the Steele County Red Road Book, recently issued by the county commissioners, since they get back for the county $1 to every 40 cents they pay. The rest comes from the large corporations and the railroads.

Bryan At Minneapolis.

Minneapolis. — Hon. William Jennings Bryan declared at a luncheon of 450 Hennepin county democrats that Theodore Roosevelt, when president, had been "terrorized" by the steel trust. He attacked Roosevelt in vigorous terms and declared that "the interest wouldn't have scared La Follette." He announced he was not ready to express his personal choice for president. He made an address at the University of Minnesota in the afternoon to over two thousand people.

Murder Witness a Suicide.

Grand Rapids.—Harry Collier, who was being held in the county jail here merely as a witness in a murder case, committed suicide in the jail by cutting his throat with a razor. As was the custom, William Dennis, a "trusty" was given a razor to shave himself. He had the razor in his vest pocket when Collier brushed past him and seized it and ran to the other end of the big cell. The prisoners raised a cry and sought to take the weapon from Collier, but he sat down on a bench and killed himself.

Counterfeiter Gets Stiff Sentence.

William Fink, a Brooklyn, N. Y., dealer in drugs, was sentenced by the New York Court of Special Sessions, to imprisonment in the penitentiary at hard labor, for four months. The charge was counterfeiting the trade-mark for Carter's Little Liver Pills, in violation of the penal law.

The Carter Medicine Company detected the counterfeit before any quantity of the spurious goods had been placed upon the market. In sentencing Fink, Judge Deuel laid special stress upon the injury done to the public when a remedy so well known as Carter's Little Liver Pills is counterfeited and put on the market. He imposed the sentence not only as the proper punishment of Fink himself, but in order to deter others from the commission of like frauds in the future.

MOTHER OF LARGE FAMILY

Tells How She Keeps Her Health—Happiness For Those Who Take Her Advice.

Scottville, Mich.—"I want to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done me. I live on a farm and have worked very hard. I am forty-five years old, and am the mother of thirteen children. Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

"I am always ready and willing to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tell every one I meet that I owe my health and happiness to your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. J. G. JOHNSON, Scottville, Mich., R.F.D. 3.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for woman's ills known.

Backache

Is only one of many symptoms which some women endure through weakness or displacement of the womanly organs. Mrs. Lizzie White of Memphis, Tenn., wrote Dr. R. V. Pierce, as follows:

"At times I was hardly able to be on my feet. I believe I had every pain and ache a woman could have. Had a very bad case. Internal organs were very much diseased and my back was very weak. I suffered a great deal with nervous headaches, in fact, I suffered all over. This was my condition when I wrote to you for advice. After taking your 'Favorite Prescription' for about three months can say that my health was never better."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism. It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. Tones and builds up the nerves. Do not permit a dishonest dealer to substitute for this medicine which has a record of 40 years of cures. "No, thank you, I want what I ask for."

In this age of crooks and sharpers not to much caution can be taken with strangers who are continually swindeling the public with their get-rich gold brick schemes. The last one to be unearthed in this section, we are informed, is by a smooth tongued party who has been operating in eastern Red Lake and Pennington counties claiming to be an agent of some land company and is traveling around for the purpose of securing owners of land to sign listing contracts for the disposal of their lands This is asserted to be an old scheme whereby this company after it gets the signatures of land owners to this contract can by recording same cloud the title of the land for any length of time they may desire. If in any case the owner should desire to dispose of his land in the meantime he would be prevented from so doing until he first settled with the land company to get the contract of record.

It does not appear that the company has any intention at all to dispose of these lands but merely to tie them up so that the owner will at some time or other be compelled to settle with them in any amount they may demand to clear his title to the land. This scheme is not a new one as it has been worked in different parts of this and other states, and is generally fortunate in getting some victims everywhere. M. t s o these kinds are no trifles and canno be handled with too much caution If you must sell your land list your land with parties at home that you know are on the square and do not take any strangers into your confidence.

County Fair Dates Set

The officials of the Red Lake County Agricultural Society have decided that the second annual Red Lake County Fair shall be held in this city Sept. 16, 17, and 18, 1912. The arrangements for the fair are being made early that the farmers may have time to plan their work and prepare excellent exhibits for the county show.

The premium list is now being prepared. The complete list is to be published in the Gazette the last of March. This will give the farme s an opportunity of knowing before spring seeding is done on what agricultural products premiums are offered and to make their plans accordingly. Later, some time during the summer, the premium book will be printed and copies sent to all of the farmers in the country.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

Judging from the size of the cream checks the patrons of the Plummer Creamery are receiving we predict that within 5 years there will not be an acre, of good land anywhere within 10 or 12 miles of Plummer to be had for less than $40 or $50 per acre. Red Lake County is fast getting to be known as one of the best dairy counties in the state of Minnesota and the immigration agents and Railroad Companies predict that there in this county this comming year 1911 there will be the greatest movement in land with sales principally to actual settlers from southern Minnesota, Iowa Wisconsin, and Illinois that this country has ever seen and they are certainly in position to know whereof they speak.

TO TAKE POSSESSION SATURDAY

J. E. Lee, of Hanley Falls, To Take Over Popular Hostelry Next Saturday.

J. E. Lee arrived here the first of the week from Hanley Falls and has been busy installing his furniture and getting things in readiness to take charge of the Scotland Hotel tomorrow. He was joined here by his family last Wednesday morning. The Scotland under the able management of H. H. Finrow has enjoyed a good patronage and this will undoubtedly continue under the management of its new proprietor. Mr. Lee has our well wishes of success in his new venture.

How About It?

Now that the time is drawing near when all good sports should get their base ball, bats and gloves from out of the attic and greese them up for action, we hereby venture a suggestion that this is a good time to get together and start something; get the available material lined up and organize a base ball team. Plummer should have a good team this year and by getting together early and putting in some hard work to start with should be able to "get back" at some of their old rivals and make them set up and take notice.

LOOKS LIKE A CERTAINTY

Work of Surveying Crew In Roseau Co., Revive Railroad Rumors Again.

Reports from Roseau county are to the effect that a certain surveying party appeared in that section about three weeks ago and were seen to work south, apparently having commenced from the Canadian boundry. If they continue the line they are running they will pass about 16 or 18 miles to the east of Plummer. This varifies the report from out in the section east of here to the effect that stakes had been discovered there and was thought to be the work of surveyors, and evidentally is the preliminary line run and the route now taken is the general laying out of the road. Many think they are in the employ of the St. Louis road which is to construct a line from the Twin Cities to Winnipeg this year. All the ties which can be bought are being secured in the territory about Spooner, and further south.

FINROWS TO LEAVE MONDAY.

Old Residents of this Section Will Depart For Montana The First of Next Monday.

The H. H. Finrow family have all their household goods and bolongings packed and expect to leave for Lewistown, Mont., next Monday where they will make their home. They expect to make their home at Lewistown temporarily at least and may decide later to move out on their son Arnold's ranch.

The Finrows are pioneer settlers in this section of the state. Before there was a building on the present site of Plummer Mr. Finrow conducted a general store on the banks of the Clearwater river near the dam where he was engaged in business until the town was platted out and sprang into existance. He was engaged in the same business here for a number of years until he disposed it to G. Halverson some time ago and has since been proprietor of the Scotland Hotel.

During their long residence here the family have made a large circle of acquaintances who regret to see them leave for new fields but who will wish them success and happiness in thei future vocations.

A large number of their friends here assembled last night and pleasantly surprised them and left a token of remembrance.

THE PASSING OF THE WILD HAY

With The Development of the Country Tame Hay Will Be At A Premium.

We refer our readers to an article elsewhere in this issue relative to fodder corn. With the influx of settlers at the present rate which will mean the cultivation of a great amount of soil the hay question is liable to take a serious turn. After a portion of the land is cultivated the wild hay will not be sufficient to carry the stock over the winter. This country like the old countries will have to feed something with more nutriment than wild hay. In sections where timothy, clover and fodder corn have been tried almost in every instance do the farmers prefer fodder corn to any other variety of tame grass. This, however, is not to be wondered at when one considers that on a well cultivated field of ten acres sowed to fodder corn the same amount of feed can be realized as on 160 acres of any other variety of feed stuffs. There is no question that the farmers here as well as elsewhere will have to adopt this plan sooner or later in order to get the proper benefit from their soil and also to be able to feed their dairy herd with plenty of good wholesome feed. The sooner this is done the better and this summer would be a good time to put the plan into effect. Select your seed early and take special care to select the seed best adapted to this country.

Work To Commence Soon

Work on dith No. 48 north of town will be resumed in about two or three weeks if the weather is at all favorable, which indications now point to. The contract for the work has been relet this year and Mr. Colberg who was the original contractor will not complete the work. The ditch is about 16 miles in length and will empty into the Clearwater river near the Dan Carrol place. The machinery is expected to be on the ground in a short time so that the work will be commenced as soon as the weather will permit it. Among the machinery to be used is a large walking dredge which is expected here at any time.

The reception and dance given in the city hall last Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Osmund Rice to their many friends was well attended and everyone had an enjoyable time. Drys and Wets In Village Elections

If the returns from the village elections held throughout the state of Minnesota are any criterion, there are to be many thirsty souls in the state during the coming year. Ninety towns voted wet and ninety-one dry. Alexandria, with a record of sixteen years of continuous wetness behind it, voted to transform itself into an arid Sahara for the first time, and Spring Valley voted to cease selling liquor after an experience of nine continuous years of it. Excelsior in Hennepin county went "wet" after being "dry" five years.

4 DISTRICTS COMBINE

Red River Valley Provides Fortieth Consolidated School.

Crookston.—The first school consolidation ever effected in Polk county was carried by a vote of 59 to 73 at Eldred when the voters in school districts 41 and 150 in Roome, 68 in Andover and 254 in Vineland held an election. The only opposition came from some residents who would have over five miles to send their children, and from some who thought it was a movement for the benefit of Eldred.

The combined enrollment is over 100 and it is proposed to erect a four-room modern school building, in which agriculture and domestic science will receive attention. The next step will be to hold an election to vote on a bond issue. The progressive farmers are in favor of the idea because of the additional educational facilities that will be afforded. This is the fortieth consolidated school in Minnesota since the enactment of the Holmberg act of 1911.

St. Paul Man in Charge.

St. Paul.—Andrew S. Mitchell, of St. Paul, has been called to Washington at once by the federal food and drug department to temporarily succeed Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the United States bureau of chemistry, resigned. Mr. Mitchell is at present chief inspector of the United States department of food and drugs inspection, located in the old capitol building, St. Paul, having been in charge of the department since it was established in 1906. He is said to be one of the foremost drug and food experts in the country. He was summoned from St. Paul late yesterday by Secretary Wilson.

Telegrams asking the name of "the best chemist in the United States," were sent simultaneously to the presidents of leading institutions throughout the country.

Twenty-five Hurt in Wreck In Iowa.

Dunkerton, Iowa. — Twenty-five persons were injured, 13 seriously and one probably fatally, in a wreck on the Chicago Great Western railroad three miles east of here. The train, which was south bound, struck a broken rail on a curve.

New Settlers At Crookston.

Crookston.—The first arrival of the newcomers in numbers for this section this spring, consisted of eighteen cars of Bohemians, who came to Ulen this week to locate on farms near that place. There have been many scattering arrivals for different sections of the Red river valley, but the main movement of immigrants has just started. During the last half of March and the first two weeks in April the greater proportion will arrive, the land men advising against coming too early.

May Improve Baudette River.

Washington.—Representative Steenerson has received a petition from the commercial bodies of Baudette and Spooner asking that a survey be made of the Baudette River in the vicinity of those communities with a view to extensive improvement.

The river and harbor appropriation bill has already been reported to the house, but the chairman of the river and harbor committee has intimated that he will permit Mr. Steenerson to put the proposed Baudette survey in the bill as a floor amendment.

ROBBER SURRENDERS

Samuel L. Copeland, Converted, Would Become Prisoner.

Fergus Falls.—Samuel L. Copeland, confessed bank and train robber, who was converted at a Gypsy Smith meeting at Los Angeles, arrived from that city to surrender himself to officers here and take whatever punishment might be in store for him.

Copeland says he held up a Northern Pacific train between Perham and Wadena and robbed passengers in the sleeping car. George Lyons was convicted of the crime and ended his life in the county jail here. Copeland at about the same time was sent to prison from Moorhead for robbing a bank there and served a five-year sentence. The county attorney doubts if anything can be done with him for the train robbery at this time on account of the statute of limitations. He has asked him to remain until the matter can be investigated.

TO AID STATE ROAD

Meeker Commissioners Will Take Up St. Paul-Browns Valley Project.

Litchfield. — The board of county commissioners of Meeker county will do its share toward helping along the state road from St. Paul to Browns Valley, proposed by the state highway commission. The money will be expended on that portion of the road in this county between Dassell on the east end of the Kandiyohi county line on the west. Representatives of the several counties will meet soon with the state commission to present the matter jointly. This county will be represented by Commissioners Hollihan, Johnson and Nordine. The commissioners of Meeker county have appropriated the sum of $4,000 toward the project.

DEDICATE NEW CHURCH

St. Peter.—The Catholic church, erected in this city last season at a cost of $40,000, was formally dedicated Sunday by Archbishop Ireland, who delivered a sermon at high mass in the forenoon and also spoke in the evening. Other church dignitaries were also present.

OIL BARRELS TAPPED

Minneapolis Agent of Consumers Company Robbed At Clitherall.

Fergus Falls.—A Minneapolis agent of the Consumer' Oil company, arrived in Clitherall with ten barrels of kerosene oil and had the consignment unloaded on the station platform. During the night, someone bored holes in each of the barrels and 500 gallons of oil poured out. The village has offered a reward of $50 for the arrest of the guilty person.

Money Given for State Road.

Litchfield. — The board of county commissioners of Meeker county has appropriated $4,000 to help along the state road project from Minneapolis to Browns Valley. The money will be expended on that portion of the road in this county that lies between Dassel to the west and the Kandiyohi county line. To get in touch with the other counties along the line, so as to make a joint presentation of the case to the state highway commissioner, committees are being appointed from each county and municipality.

REGULATING THE STOMACH

That Important Organ Works According to the Quality of the Blood That Is Furnished to It.

There is the most intimate relation between the condition of the blood and the activity of the stomach. The blood depends upon the stomach for a large part of its nourishment; while every act of digestion, from the time the food enters the stomach until it is digested and assimilated by the blood, needs plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. The stomach works only according to the quality of the blood.

The most common cause of indigestion is anæmia, or lack of blood. Indeed there is not a single disturbance of the health of the body nor any form of exhaustion or lowered vitality, that may not lead to stomach trouble. Disordered blood is the one common cause of indigestion. Thin, impure blood weakens the muscles of the stomach and lessens the product of the glands which furnish the digestive fluids.

Nothing will more promptly cure indigestion than plenty of pure, well-oxidized blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People increase the red corpuscles, the oxygen-carriers of the blood, until the blood is rich and red. A thorough trial of these pills gives a hearty appetite, perfect digestion, strength and health.

Mrs. Emma M. Mayne, of No. 635 Second avenue, Clinton, Iowa, says: "I had just worked myself out bringing up a family of five children and, while in this run-down condition, I took sick with some kind of stomach trouble. I doctored with several physicians and saw a specialist in Chicago but received little help. I could not eat anything with relish and could not sleep. I would have deathly sick spells and would vomit. I had terrible headaches and dizzy spells. I got very thin and my friends thought I was going into consumption. I doctored for a year or so without help. While visiting a niece she told me that she took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, so I tried them. They soon helped me and a few boxes entirely cured me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

COLDS AND CHILLS BRING KIDNEY ILLS

Colds, chills and grip strain the kidneys and start backache, urinary disorders and uric acid troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills are very useful in the raw spring months. They stop backache and urinary disorders, keep the kidneys well and prevent colds from settling on the kidneys. Mrs. E. A. Bennett, Johnson Ave., Los Gatos, Cal., says: "If I took cold or overworked, I had such severe pains through my back, I could hardly move. My limbs ached until I scarcely knew what I was about, and headaches and dizziness distressed me. I began using Doan's Kidney Pills and was entirely relieved. It is over two years since I have had any kidney trouble to speak of."

No Wonder She Blushed.

Two of the University of Pennsylvania track runners passed a learned and preoccupied professor showing a young woman visitor through the "Gardens."

With a dainty shiver, the girl remarked:

"It's dreadfully cold—isn't it—to be without stockings?"

The professor's mind turned for a moment from contemplation of the fourth dimension.

"Then why did you leave them off?" he asked.—Lippincott's Magazine.

2 CONVICTS KILLED

BIG FIGHT OCCURRED BETWEEN OFFICERS AND PRISONERS NEAR SPRINGFIELD.

HID IN FARMER'S WAGON

Murderers in Wagon Driven By Farmer who Was Forced to Drive Them Toward Springfield.

Louisville, Nebraska. — The three convicts, Gray, Down and Morley, who, last week murdered three officials at the state penitentiary at Lincoln, were surrounded from Omaha, Lincoln and Plattsmouth. All but Morley were shot dead and he is back in prison. Harry Blunt, whom they compelled to aid them, was also killed.

The outlaws were driven towards Springfield in a sleigh by Harry Blunt, a farmer who resides three miles north of town. The convicts lay down in the body of the vehicle forcing the farmer to expose himself to the bullets of the posse as soon as they get within fire distance.

The three convicts approached the Blunt home and ordered the farmer to take them in his sleigh to Springfield. He refused at first, but they covered him with their guns and ordered him to make haste to start. The first of the pursuing posses was a mile behind the fleeing convicts. Two other posses were a short distance in the rear.

There was a running battle for three miles before the three men were killed and Morley surrendered. Young Blunt was the first to fall.

A special train came from Omaha and another already had arrived from Plattsmouth carrying large posses. Another came from Lincoln, bearing a sheriff's posse and a body of national guard.

The three murderers, Taylor, Morley and Dowd, spent Friday night, all day Saturday and part of Saturday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hall, on a farm, five miles east and a mile north of Havelock. After tying Mr. and Mrs. Hall so securely that they could not liberate themselves, they tore the telephone instrument from its place, cut out the wire and left the Hall home at 10:30 p. m., Saturday. During their stay they compelled the people at the farmhouse to serve them with meals and permitted no one to leave the house.

Blunt was 22 years old and had been married but two months. His young widow was prostrated when his body was returned to the family home by his brother.

After leaving the Hall home, the outlaws went to Prairie Home, obtained a handcar and went to Mordock, where they burglarized two stores and secured arms, ammunition and clothing. Later they ditched the stolen handcar at Meadow, threw the car into the Missouri river and started north toward Omaha on foot.

MANIAC SENT BOMB

Gotham Police Expect Another Case on Rosalsky Order.

New York, March 19.—No arrests were made in connection with the effort of the police department to clear up the mysterious attempt to blow up Judge Otto A. Rosalsky of the court of general sessions with a bomb. If any promising clues developed they were not divulged.

The Brandt case was not mentioned seriously in any quarter.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty clung to the theory that a maniac is at large in the city aiming to destroy "enemies of society," as they appear to his obsessed brain, and that he was responsible for the death of Helen Taylor, who was killed by a bomb last month and for the sending of the machine to Judge Rosalsky. On this theory another attempt may be expected at any time.

Judge Rosalsky was back on the bench in general sessions and every person entering the court rooms was searched for weapons. This precaution, however, was without result.

Sick Women

When shown positive and reliable proof that a certain remedy had cured many cases of female ills, wouldn't any sensible woman conclude that the same remedy would also benefit her if suffering with the same trouble?

Here are five letters from southern women which prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Elliston, Va.—"I feel it my duty to express my thanks to you and your great medicine. I was a sufferer from female troubles and had been confined in bed over one third of my time for ten months. I could not do my housework and had fainting spells so that my husband could not leave me alone for five minutes at a time.

"Now I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. Whenever I see a suffering woman I want to tell her what these medicines have done for me and I will always speak a good word for them."—Mrs. ROBERT BLANKENSHIP, Elliston, Montgomery Co., Va.

LETTER FROM LOUISIANA

New Orleans, La.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy feelings, backache and irregularities. I would get up in the morning feeling tired out and not fit to do anything.

"Since I have been taking your Compound and Blood Purifier I feel all right. Your medicines are worth their weight in gold."—Mrs. GASTON BLONDEAU, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

LETTER FROM FLORIDA.

Wauchula, Fla.—"Some time ago I wrote to you giving you my symptoms, headache, backache, bearing-down, and discomfort in walking, caused by female troubles.

"I got two bottles of Lydia E Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash and that was all I used to make me a well woman.

"I am satisfied that if I had done like a good many women, and had not taken your remedies, I would have been a great sufferer. But I started in time with the right medicine and got well. It did not cost very much either. I feel that you are a friend to all women and I would rather use your remedies than have a doctor."—Mrs. MATTIE HODNOT, Box 406, Wauchula, Florida.

LETTER FROM WEST VIRGINIA.

Martinsburg, W. Va.—"I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for my mother, daughter and myself.

"I have told dozens of people about it and my daughter says that when she hears a girl complaining with cramps, she tells her to take your Compound."—Mrs. MARY A. HOCKENBERRY, 712 N. 3rd St., Martinsburg, W. Va.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM VIRGINIA.

Newport News, Va.—"About five years ago I was troubled with such pains and bloating every month that I would have to go to bed.

"A friend told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I soon found relief. The medicine strengthened me in every way and my doctor approved of my taking it.

"I will be glad if my testimony will help some one who is suffering from female weakness."—Mrs. W. J. BLAYTON, 1029 Hampton Ave., Newport News, Va.

Robert, at the age of twelve, was much puzzled over one question in his examination paper on civics. Summing It Up.

His Only Complaint.

Senator Beveridge, at a luncheon in New York, was talking about the child labor problem.

"Children are so plucky and so cheerful," he said, "we don't realize how horribly overworked they are till it's too late—till their bodies and minds are stunted irretrievably.

"I was once talking to a tiny errand boy at the height of the Christmas shopping season. He was working, I knew, 17 hours a day. As he walked sturdily along with a mountain of parcels piled on his thin, narrow shoulders, I said to him:

"'Do you like your job?'

"'Yes, sir,' he said; 'I like it fine. Only—'

"Here he grinned up at me gayly from beneath his load.

"'Only I'm afraid I'm doing an automobile truck out of a job.'"

MADE IT ALMOST TOO STRONG

Bachelor's Excuse for Not Visiting the "Only Baby" Almost Cost Him Father's Friendship.

"One of my closest friends," said a Philadelphia bachelor, "is the proud father of a newly-arrived baby boy. For some days I've had a sneaking and guilty feeling that I ought to visit him and make some comment on the obvious superiorities of his offspring. I couldn't bring myself to do it, though, because, according to my way of thinking, no baby is human until it is at least one year old. I'm not very keen about associating with infants, anyway, but I draw the line absolutely until the year mark rolls around.

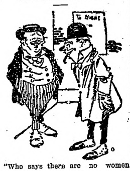
"By way of apology, however, I decided to call up my friend on the telephone. The first question he asked was why I hadn't been over to see Toodles.

"'Well,' old man,' I said, 'I've been intending to get around to see that boy of yours. In fact, I made note of it six weeks ago.'

"'Indeed!' he answered, and never before have I known a man to inject so much sarcasm in one small word. 'Well, it happens,' he continued, 'that the boy has only been in this world three weeks.'

"It took me ten minutes to regain his friendship."

ARTEMUS OUTDONE.



"Who says there are no women humorists?"

"I don't know. Why?"

"My typewriter spells as funnily as Artemus Ward in his palmiest days."

No Time Specified.

Two beautifully dresesd women were parting with a finger-tip handshake.

"You must come and see me. Won't you come and see me some time?" asked one, with just the faintest tinge of eagerness.

"Yes, I will come and see you. I will come and see you some time," echoed the other, with not the faintest tinge of eagerness and with a glacial, acetic acid smile.

HARD TO DROP
But Many Drop It.

A young Calif. wife talks about coffee:

"It was hard to drop Mocha and Java and give Postum a trial, but my nerves were so shattered that I was a nervous wreck and of course that means all kinds of ills.

"At first I thought bicycle riding caused it and I gave it up, but my condition remained unchanged. I did not want to acknowledge coffee caused the trouble for I was very fond of it.

"About that time a friend came to live with us, and I noticed that after he had been with us a week he would not drink his coffee any more. I asked him the reason. He replied, 'I have not had a headache since I left off drinking coffee, some months ago, till last week, when I began again, here at your table. I don't see how anyone can like coffee, anyway, after drinking Postum'!

"I said nothing, but at once ordered a package of Postum. That was five months ago, and we have drank no coffee since, except on two occasions when we had company, and the result each time was that my husband could not sleep, but lay awake and tossed and talked half the night. We were convinced that coffee caused his suffering, so we returned to Postum, convinced that the coffee was an enemy, instead of a friend, and he is troubled no more by insomnia.

"I, myself, have gained 8 pounds in weight, and my nerves have ceased to quiver. It seems so easy now to quit the old coffee that caused our aches and ills and take up Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DR. WILEY HAS QUIT

GOVERNMENT FOOD EXPERT QUITS HIS POST AS GOVERNMENT CHEMIST.

PUBLIC HEALTH BUREAU

Capital Surprised By Report of Resignation—Doctor to Devote Rest of Life Working for New Department.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the United States bureau of chemistry, handed his resignation to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, and announced that he would devote the rest of his life to urging the creation of a national health department, entirely separate from any other branch of the government service.

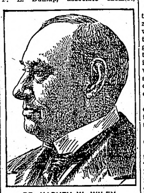
Dr. Wiley said he had several offers under consideration. One is from a lecture bureau, and others are of an editorial and commercial nature. He declared positively that he would not enter business. Already he has agreed to deliver a series of lectures in Kansas and Colorado and at various points in the east.

Asked whether he would be a candidate for head of the proposed federal health department for which he announced he was going to work, he declared that he would not be, that he had held all the government positions he cared to fill.

President Taft sent telegrams broadcast to the heads of universities and colleges throughout the country, asking them to recommend a successor to Dr. Wiley. The president said he hoped in this way to get a consensus of opinion as to the best and most available chemist.

Despite the fact that rumors had been current for several weeks that the government's pure food expert was about to leave the service, the actual news of Dr. Wiley's resignation came as a big surprise to official Washington.

It is known that Wiley for a long time had been unhappy in his connection with the department of agriculture. It is rumored that his action was taken because Secretary of Agriculture Wilson refused to dismiss Dr. F. L. Dunlap, associate chemist, Wiley's antagonist on the pure food question. It is asserted that only a week ago Wiley submitted an ultimatum to Wilson that either Dunlap must be dismissed or he would resign. Wilson refused to dismiss Dunlap, Dunlap refused to resign, and therefore Wiley made good his threat. He has been hampered in the administration of his office and harassed by the other officials. The recent Wiley-Wilson-McCabe controversy was but an outcropping of the friction that long has existed. A house committee that recently investigated affairs of the department complimented Dr. Wiley in the highest terms and scored his enemies in the department. He entered the service of the government as chief chemist in 1883, serving in that capacity continuously until now.



DR. HARVEY W. WILEY.
Chief of Bureau of Chemistry.

Washington, D. C.—The Democratic free sugar bill, passed the house, 198 to 103. Its passage was helped by 24 Republican votes, although this was offset by the defection of seven Democratic votes against the bill by members from Louisiana and Colorado.

At the last moment, Representative Martin, one of the Colorado members, blocked an attempt to fix plans for consideration of the excise tax bill, which througha taxtion of incomes is expected to make up the revenue lost by free sugar measure.

Leader Underwood was at no time embarrassed by the tactics of the opposition. The bill went through as originally framed. A score of amendments were voted down as fast as they were put up.

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican, sought to amend the measure by making it become effective only after receipt of a report on the sugar industry by the tariff board; Representative Broussard of Louisiana, submitted an amendment leaving the duty as it is fixed at present, but abrogating the Cuban preferential. Representatives Good and Poudy, Iowa; Lenroot, Wisconsin, and Morris, Nebraska, strove to have incorporated a clause providing for a bounty on sugar, especially that produced from beets.

All amendments met the same fate.

The debate was marked by occasional flashes of extreme bitterness on both sides. Democratic members from sugar producing states accused their colleagues of working ruin to the sugar industry, while Republican progressives seized the opportunity to give their tariff views.

The Republicans who supported the bill were:

Representatives Anderson, Davis, Lindberg, Miller, Nye, Steenerson and Volstead of Minnesota; Good, Kendall and Woods of Iowa; Murdock and Young of Kansas; Hanna and Helgeson of North Dakota; La Follette and Warburton of Washington; McKenzie and Prince of Illinois; Cary of Wisconsin; Dyer of Missouri; Howland of Ohio; Kent of California; Lafferty of Oregon; Norris of Nebraska, and Sells of Tennessee.

The Louisiana and Colorado members, all Democrats, voted against the measure.

The sugar bill out of the way, the house will take up the excise measure which provides a tax of 1 per cent on incomes of corporations, firms or individuals which reach or exceed $5,000 a year. This tax is intended to offset the loss of revenue now derived from sugar.

Washington, D. C.—Revolutions, filibustering expeditions, or promoters of domestic violence in any country in Pan-America hereafter may not hope for war supplies of any description from the United States. This principle, was proclaimed in a concurrent resolution adopted by the senate at the instance of President Taft.

Mahlon Pitney, chancellor of New Jersey, President Taft's nominee to succeed the late Justice Harlan on the supreme bench was finally confirmed by the senate by a vote of 50 to 26.

Commercial Bodies Accept Bid.

Chambers of commerce throughout the country have responded enthusiastically to Secretary Nagel of the department of commerce and labor that they would accept President Taft's invitation for a conference of commercial bodies here on April 15 to form a national board of trade.

Washington, D. C.—The bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and the operation of the canal was agreed to by the house committee on interstate commerce. It would give to the president authority to fix tolls within certain limitations, a maximum of $1.25 a ton being prescribed with a minimum not below an amount sufficient to maintain and operate the canal. No preference would be given to American ships.

The bill would authorize the president to open and operate the canal and to make rules for the government of the canal and fixe the tolls.

The prohibition clauses, summarized, include:

That it shall be unlawful for ships to pass through the canal which are "owned, leased, operated or controlled by any railroad company engaged in interstate commerce or by any other corporation in which such railroad company has any interest whatsoever, or by any other person, association or corporation with intent to restrain or prevent, or with the effect of restraining or prevention of competition through the Panama canal, either between ships, ship lines and ship companies, or between ships, ship lines or ship companies and railroads."

That it shall be unlawful for any ship to pass through the canal if the owner "shall be engaged in any agreement, combination, ship ring or conference with intent to restrain or prevent, or with the effect of restraining or preventing competition through the Panama canal among ships, ship lines or ship companies, or between railroads and such ships, ship lines or ship companies."

The bill would establish one United States district judge with magistrates and bailiffs in the various towns throughout the zone and would provide jury trial on demand in all criminal cases and cases at law. The district court would have appellate jurisdiction with the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans. Extradition of criminals also would be provided.

Curtailment of the Democratic tariff revision program with a view to "speeding up" congress to permit adjournment before the national conventions is now the expressed aim of the Democratic majority in the house. Republicans and Democrats in the senate and house are chafing over delay in actual legislation that threatens to crowd congress later on. Democratic Leader Underwood of the house, chairman of the ways and means committee, indicated that the wool tariff revision bill, which is to be reported probably within ten days, will be the last of the revision measures at this session of congress.

Agricultural Bill Is Passed.

The second filibuster within four days preceded the passage of the agricultural appropriation bill in the house. The measure, which carried approximately $15,800,000, was delayed in its final legislative stage in the house by Minority Leader Mann. He led a bitter fight against it in an effort to obtain added appropriations for the national forests and to eliminate those voted for drainage purposes. In both his contentions the Republican leader lost. The bill now goes to the senate.

MURDER AT BEMIDJI

PAUL FOURNIER FATALLY SHOT BY GEORGE CYR AT QUIRING, MINNESOTA.

ECHO OF DAHL MURDER.

Dead Man Attacked Latter and Wife With Dirk—Deceased Tried Three Times for Dual Homicide.

Bemidji, Minn.—Paul Fournier, noted as having been convicted of the charge of killing N. O. Dahl, near Quiring, in this county, in the spring of 1907, who began serving a life sentence for the crime and was afterwards found not guilty by a jury at a new trial, was shot and instantly killed at Quiring, by his cousin, George Cyr, who voluntarily surrendered to John Morrison, Jr., deputy sheriff at Red Lake agency.

Cyr was brought to Bemidji and his case will be at once taken before the grand jury now in session and should an indictment be returned, the trial will probably be held at this term of court. When he was found not guilty of the crime of killing Aagot Dahl, daughter of N. O. Dahl, and was released from custody, Fournier returned to the scene of the Dahl murders and has been residing with Cyr and his wife. Cyr claims that Fournier became enraged and rushed at Cyr's wife, flourishing a dirk and saying that he had killed two in the woods at Quiring and would kill two more.

Cyr grabbed a gun that was hanging on the wall and shot Fournier, killing him instantly. Cyr then walked to Redby, several miles distant, and gave himself up to the authorities.

The killing of N. O. Dahl, over two years ago, and his daughter, Aagot, were the most brutal and cold blooded crimes in the history of Beltrami county, and when Fournier and "Shorty" Wesley (now serving a life term in the Stillwater penitentiary) were tried for the crimes, sentiment ran high against both men. When their cases were given to the jury, a verdict of guilty was speedily reached in each case. Fournier and Wesley were sentenced to life imprisonment. Fournier was given a new trial on the grounds of admission of improper evidence, and alleged misconduct of the county attorney. Juries at Brainerd and Aitken returned verdicts of not guilty against Fournier.

No effort was ever made to get a new trial for Wesley, although the pardon board now has an application for paroling him. Cyr, who killed Fournier, was at once arrested in company with Fournier on the joint charge of having killed the Dahls but was subsequently released, there being lack of evidence connecting him directly with the murders.

Much interest is being taken in the tragedy, as it is believed that the killing of Fournier will result in clearing up some of the mysterious angles of the Dahl cases which have never been solved. No one has ever been found who could be directly connected with the actual slaying of the old man and his daughter.

SEEK AIR AND GET SPEAR

Fish Easily Taken in Many Lakes Owing to Weather Conditions.

St. Cloud.—Luther Blood, a farmer at Lake Julia, is less than two hours speared twenty-five pickerel, ranging in weight from five to nineteen and one-half pounds.

There is a spring creek running into the lake, and the fish swarm up this in so great numbers that they literally pack the small stream. It was an easy trick to pick out the big fish with a spear. Mr. Blood examined the edge of the lake and saw many dead fish under the ice. He said there must have been at least a ton of the dead ones in a space no larger than a city block. The cause of death is want of air. The long cold weather had formed ice of unusual thickness sealing up all the air holes.

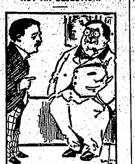
Fall in Arithmetic.

St. Paul.—Arithmetic and composition are stumbling blocks in the paths of school teachers in Minnesota. According to figures compiled by G. M. Cesander, second state assistant of public instruction, out of 2,478 examination papers in arithmetic, 1,312 fell below passing grade. In composition, 1,151 failed. In agriculture, out of 663 papers submitted, 565 passed. A total of 4,849 persons were examined, and 22,280 papers submitted. There were 142 first grade certificates issued, 439 second grade, and 311 limited.

Reward for Murderer.

St. Paul. — Governor A. O. Eberhart has issued a proclamation offering a reward for the arrest and conviction of Frank McClusky, charged with the murder of Asa Shepherd, a civil war veteran at Kelsey, Minn. Shepherd, who was 74 years of age, took up a homestead in St. Louis county and lived in a shack. McClusky visited Shepherd for the purpose of purchasing the homestead. He stayed for several days and then disappeared. Neighbors found the old man dead with his skull crushed.

NOT AN OBJECTION.



Mr. Hardhead—I have called, sir, to ask for the hand of your daughter.

Old Gentleman (with emotion)—She is the only child I have, and her mother is gone.

Mr. Hardhead (hastily)—Oh, that's no objection, I assure you.

PHYSICIAN SAID ECZEMA CAME FROM TEETHING

"When my little girl was about eight months old, she was taken with a very irritating breaking out, which came on her face, neck and back. When she first came down with it, it came in little watery-like festers under her eyes, and on her chin, then after a few days it would dry down in scaly, white scabs. In the daytime she was quite worrysome and would dig and scratch her face nearly all the time.

"I consulted our physician and found she was suffering from eczema, which he said came from her teething. I used the ointment he gave me and without any relief at all. Then I wrote for a book on Cuticura, and purchased some Cuticura Soap and Ointment at the drug store. I did as I found directions in the Cuticura Booklet, and when she was one year old, she was entirely cured. Now she is three years and four months, and she has never been troubled with eczema since she was cured by the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. (Signed) Mrs. Freeman Craver, 311 Lewis St., Syracuse, N. Y., May 6, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

What Is in a Name?

A Chicago man who hardly knew one tune from another made the mistake of taking a knowing woman to a concert at Orchestra Hall. The selections were apparently unfamiliar to him, but when the "Wedding March" of Mendelssohn was being played he began to evince some interest.

"That sounds familiar," he said. "I am not strong on those classical things, but that's a good one. What is it?"

"That," gravely replied the woman, "is the 'Maiden's Prayer.'"

The Reason for It.

Monday was St. Patrick's Day. The day here, however, was not observed to any noticeable degree and Shamrocks did not find a ready market.

An exchange remarks in summing up his record in office "that when President Taft gets set on anything, it is mighty hard to move him from his position" which is a fact that cannot very well be denied.

The best young man in the whole world is in our town. He never "chaws tobacce", never touches any liquor, never swears, never kisses or flirts with the girls or goes out o' nights for a time with the boys He is buried in the cemetery.

A monster mass meeting held in St. Paul several days ago, showed the remarkable growth of Roosevelt sentiment in the state. It is stated that the Colonel's following in the state has grown largely since his recent Columbus speech,

No more significant evidence of the popular will in the matter of selecting a candidate for the presidency has come to light than the poll taken by the Brooklyn Eagle, a conservative newspaper in a comunity considered strongly conservative and claimed by the Taft managers to contain sentiment strongly in favor of the president.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

The Latest About That "Dawg" Song.

The "Dawg" song is still going the rounds. It has been applied to all sorts of creatures and men. A St. Louis writer looks at from several different view points. He gives portions of it that might have been written by several celebrated poets. Longfellow, he states, might have written it thusly:

"In the spring from out the Ozarks,
From the blue and silant Ozarks,
Forth he came with faithful Houndog,
Houndog walking in his footsteps.
Met them, many city urchins,
Met the youth and met the houndog,
STRAIGHTWAY KICKING AT THE HOUNDOG!"

What Ails The Railroads?

What is the matter of the railroads? Every day brings its report of an accident of terrifying nature somewhere.

The resisting power of steel cars reduces the mortality, but the list of injured is appaling, and the harm done the health of the country by the nerve raking shocks is incalculable. In this case, as in the case of quick or slow murder by greed in industry, the dead are sometimes happier.

Continued comparative search does not reveal a common cause, like rail trouble, over congestion, excessive economy in use of men or decay of equipment. The discovered causes are as various as the effect is deplorable monotonous.

The only approach to a common denominator is a predominating weight of evidence that the equipment has outrun the resistance of roadbed in weight and power, in the effort to handle increasing business without mulitiplying tracks or trains. This in not incouraging because roadbed is the most costly thing to strengthen or expand and most of the railroads are hard up now.

Some healthy slackening of general business would permit the alternative remedy of putting less strain upon roadbed by making up lighter trains and running at less speed. But that would be only temporary at best—Minneapolis Tribune.

Concert Next Friday.

Definate arrangements have been made at Thief River Falls for two concerts to be given by the St. Paul Symphony Orchestra on Friday March 29th.

The committee in charge of this concert arrangement have contract for a special train from Winnipeg and also agreed to wait until all evening trains coming in on the Soo Lines have arrived before commencing the concert, this will give all people wishing to hear this great organization a chance to leave home and attend the concert the same evening, returning the next morning.

It is hoped that many of the people from this vicinity will take advantage of this offering by the people of Thief Rivre Falls and such attraction deserve the patronage of all people.

Among the soloists are Mrs. Madame Rothwell-Wolff and Marcus Kellerman from whose press notices we publish the following: Madame Elizabeth Rothwell-Wolff is one of the principal soloists with the St. Paul Syinpohony Orchestra, and the beautiful young wife of the director is one of the few great singers who is of the home-loving disposition.

Kellerman's "Song to the Evening Star" was one of the gems of the programme. As an encore he sang with spirit, the Mefistofele Serenade from Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust."—Chattanooga Times.

WARNING!

SIGN NOTHING!

Recently there has been a gentleman traveling thru the country especially thru eastern Red Lake and Pennington counties claiming to be from McIntosh, representing some supposed land firm from Grand Forks listing farms for sale and getting the owners of the land to sign listing contracts, tying them up for a period of 6 or 8 months and listing these lands regardless of the price asked by the owners as that part of it is immiterial to them for the reason that it is not their intention at all to even attempt to sell these lands but merely to tie them up so that the owners themselves even cannot dispose of it as while this party driving thru the country listing these lands may tell you that it is not their intention to record these contracts the fact of the matter is that all of same are being recorded at the court house, in Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls thus clouding the title, which the farmer would not know anything about until in case he should happen to sell himself when getting out the abstract of title he would then see his contract of record which would prevent him from closing his deal and even prevent him from renewing his old loan on same unless he first had settled with the land company, paying whatever amount they would ask for releasing that contract of record.

It is an old game and has been worked by various unscrupulous land firms and companies in various places thruout this and other states and only works a hardship on the owners of the land. Quarters have been listed for $5090.00 that would not sell for more than $2500, which conclusively goes to show that it is not the selling of the land they are after but simply tying it up and in that way, knowing that the farmer perhaps within a year or so would either sell it himself or have to make a new loan, he would be obliged to come to them and pay them for getting it off the records and even if a sale of that kind did not take place for the next ten years the contract would still be there so that sooner or later a settlement would necessarily have to be made.

Sign no contracts or agreements of any kind unless you are absolutely sure of what you are signing and if not go to your nearest bank or person familiar with that kind of business and ask him about it and in that way save yourself not only trouble but also money.

Mary Was Spoiled.

A doctor in one of the West Philadelphia children's homes tells the story of a woman who came to him one day in a most perturbed state of mind. She had taken home her daughter of five years the week previous, after a stay of a year in the home, and found she had an elephant on her hands. "Oh, sir," she said to the doctor, "whatever can I do with Mary? You have made her far too grand for her own home. Why, the first day she was back she refused to be dressed in the morning till she had a bath; then she would eat no breakfast whatever because she wanted fruit and some 'serious food' first, and, last of all, she put a saucer of water at her place at the table and she dips her fingers in that every few minutes. Sure, doctor, I don't know what I'll do," and the woman passed out, shaking her head as if the problem was certainly too much for her.—Philadelphia Record.

The Poor Member.

"Brother Lastly," said the spokesman, "I have an unpleasant duty to perform. There is a report that you have said that one of the best and most worthy members of our congregation is unable to attend service often on account of not having good enough clothes. We have come to ask the name of that member. We don't know of any such person, and a report of that kind is likely to reflect upon us as a congregation that does not look after its poor but worthy members. Will you tell me who it is?"

"Certainly, brethren," replied the Rev. Mr. Lastly, with a brave attempt to be cheerful. "It's my wife."

OLD VILLAGE LOCKUP.

Quaint Structures For Confinement of Rogues and Vagabonds.

Several villages in the midlands possess in more or less ruined state their old parish lockups, commonly known as roundhouses.

Breedon, a Leicestershire village, close to the South Derbyshire border, possesses its "lockup," a quaint stone building eighteen feet high and eight feet six inches diameter inside. The walls are fifteen inches thick. The door is of stout oak, studded with many large iron nails.

The lock is very strong, and the keyhole is covered with an iron plate, which itself has to be unlocked by a spanner before the door key can be inserted. Ventilation is afforded by small holes punched in an iron plate, six inches by seven, fixed in the center of the door. There is no window.

At Worthington, the next village to Breedon, the old lockup is a seven sided brick building, badly in need of restoration, an opportunity for archaeologists which it is hoped will not be missed. Both at Breedon and Worthington these diminutive disused prisons are on the roadside adjacent to the pound, or pinfold, so that the constable had conveniently side by side the strayed cattle and any human rogues or vagabonds he had charge of. There are similar old lockups at Smisby and Ticknall, two villages close to Leicestershire.—Sheffield (England) Telegraph.

BLUSH IF YOU CAN.

It Is a Sign of an Active Brain, Declares a Scientist.

Sir Arthur Mitchell, K. C. B., of Edinburgh, who knows much that is strange about dreams, laughter and other commonplace human characteristics, has advanced the consoling theory that blushing is an achievement of which every one who can blush should be proud.

He says it requires brains to blush. Idiots cannot blush; neither can animals. Sir Arthur calls attention to the fact that tiny infants do not blush, although they learn to at an early age—just as soon, in fact, as the brain begins to exercise its functions. In blushing, he says, the mind always must be affected. It is always and only a bodily expression of a mental state.

It is a natural thing for a blusher to say that he had tried not to blush. No individual blushes of his own free will. The blush arises without call instantaneously and vanishes almost as quickly. Neither for its coming nor its going is there any exercise of volition. It is controlled, Sir Arthur says solely by the brain and is a positive sign that there is an active brain there—New York World.

Boissier's High Priced Autograph.

A good Boissier-Renan anecdote is told by a French paper. One day Boissier arrived at Renan's home with a beaming face, saying: "Now I'll tell you a piece of news that will humiliate you. My autograph has fetched a higher price than yours." "That does not surprise me," Renan said serenely. "And where did you hear this?" It then turned out that at an auction a day or two before a Renan autograph had been sold for 3 francs and a Boissier for 5. "Well," Renan went on, "now let me tell you the reason. There were three faults in the spelling of your letter, which is now lying here on my writing table. A friend of mine was at the auction and made a higher bid for the letter after noticing the artificial genis that adorned your prose. He brought it to me in order that I might return it to you instead of reaching the public, which might get a bad impression of the accomplishments of members of the French academy."

OLD WOOL BILL REVIVED AGAIN

HOUSE MEMBERS UNABLE TO RECONCILE VIEWS WITH TARIFF BOARD.

BOARD IS CONDEMNED

Original Measure Unexpectedly Introduced by Chairman Underwood—Other Congressional Doings.

Washington, D. C.—The Democrats in the house have surrendered on the wool tariff. That is accepted as the only explanation of the course pursued by Chairman Underwood of the ways and means committee in introducing the same old wool tariff bill, levying a 20 per cent ad valorem duty on raw wool, that originally was passed by the Democratic house in the special session, and what was regarded by all protectionists as a much worse bill than the one passed as a compromise between the house Democrats and the insurgent Republicans, which ultimately was vetoed by President Taft.

After having spent many weeks in efforts to reconcile their views with these of the tariff board, the house Democrats practically confess their inability to make any progress on the subject beyond what they first proposed before the tariff board report was made public.

Instead of accepting the bill which President Taft vetoed, and agreeing to stand upon that measure, the house Democrats have agreed to stand upon their original bill, which even the senate insurgents refused to support in the special session.

To Avoid Serious Dispute.

The reason for the unexpected action by Mr. Underwood is said to be fear on the part of the Democratic leaders in the house that an effort to patch up a new Democratic wool tariff bill would precipitate a serious row between the free wool advocates and the opposition to free wool, and the Democratic leaders would find themselves in a worse quandary than ever.

Having once agreed to the old house bill they have decided to go back to that, rather than agree upon the mongrel Democratic insurgent bill which was voted for by the house Democrats last summer, and was vetoed by President Taft.

There is known to be no relation whatever between that bill and what the tariff board reported on wool and woolen goods. In other words, Chairman Underwood has given up in despair.

The re-introduction of the bill vetoed by President Taft, with the elimination of the senate amendments, will be used by the Democrats as the basis for an arraignment of the tariff board. In the report on the bill, which is being written by Mr. Underwood, an effort will be made to show that the board is a failure and that its report on wool was useless.

In a special recommendation to congress Postmaster General Hitchcock urged immediate extension to rural letter carriers, who may be injured in the line of duty, the same privileges and compensation as now provided by law for injured railway mail clerks.

Tilt Over Indian Question.

Washington.—A sub-committee of the house committee on Indian affairs, composed of Representative Carter of Oklahoma, Democrat, and Representative Miller, Republican, had a hearing on the Steenerson bill providing for the passage to patent of all unchallenged Indian allotments on the White Earth reservation within 90 days unless any contemplated federal action is begun within that time.

Representative Graham of the committee now making a special White Earth investigation, appeared and spoke against the measure. He took particular exception to the 90-day provision, declaring that six months, at least, should be given the government in which to commence contests of title if any were thought necessary. He urged that no action be taken on the measure until his own committee has concluded its prolonged investigation of the Minnesota situation.

Representative Steenerson of Minnesota introduced a resolution providing for a special committee of five members of the house to investigate a combination of coal dealers and coal mine operators at the head of Lake Superior in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

The committee would be directed to inquire into charges that a combination of dealers and operators, operating in violation of the anti-trust law, declined to supply coal to any municipality attempting to deal in coal for accommodation of the public, refused to supply except to regular retail dealers and declined to sell coal to any consumers either in carload lots or otherwise.

The senate has frowned on the proposal to abolish about 25 army posts declared by the war department to be of no use and when it reports the army appropriation bill that and other provisions will be stricken out.

The house proposition to cut the cavalry down to 10 regiments, make all enlistments five years and consolidate several bureaus in the war department, will be reported adversely.

The senate military affairs committee added $275,000 for equipment of coast artillery companies of the militia.

Washington, D. C. — The Democratic excise bill to virtually tax everybody's income when it is $5,000 or more a year passed the house 250 to 40. The Democrats voted solidly for it and carried 80 Republican votes with them. Forty regular Republicans were the opposition.

The bill now goes to the senate where its fate is problematic. Many senators declared that if upon analysis they found the house measure would tax all classes of people alike, they would support it. Democratic senators with a few exceptions are expected to vote for it. Democratic Leader Martin expressed the hope that the Democratic senators and the progressive Republicans might put the bill through. Republican leaders are depending upon the president's veto to check revenue revision bills from the house.

The excise bill though primarily intended to produce anywhere from $20,000,000 to $60,000,000 a year to make up for the losses on free sugar is also expected to be one of the offsets to general pension legislation which seems sure to be enacted.

Democratic Leader Underwood held his majority intact through the passage of the bill. Not one Democratic vote was cast against it, and the measure was passed exactly as framed.

With the free sugar bill and excise tax bills out of the way Democratic members of the ways and means committee are free to tackle again the wool schedule which is considered the knottiest problem they have to deal with at this session of congress. The committee will begin work with the free raw wool sentiment strong.

The house passed the rivers and harbors appropriation bill carrying upwards of $26,250,000. The vote for it was unanimous.

The senate agreed to adjourn on Saturday in time to participate in the Maine memorial exercises.

Washington, D. C. — The abolition of the United States senate and the office of vice president with a reduction of the membership of the house to 300 is propsed in a resolution which Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota announced he would introduce. Mr. Lindbergh, as one of the advanced Republican Progressives, forced the inquiry into the so-called money trust.

The main feature of Mr. Lindbergh's resolution provides for the creation of a "committee at large" which would have absolute control over the legislative activity of congress. The members of the committee would be elected by the country at large for a term of 15 years and it could prevent the submission of bills to the president. This opposition could be overcome only by a two-thirds vote of the house.

In order to provide what Mr. Lindbergh called "checks and balances," in his plan, he invoked the recall of the members of the committee at large whenever their actions, in the minds of the people, justified their removal. Presidential succession in the absence of the vice presidential office, would be dictated by the committee.

Mr. Lindbergh's resolution will be the first concrete plan for a change in the existing form of government, although many suggestions recently have been made. He declared his intention to press early action on his reform scheme and claimed he had a rapidly growing support for it.

A California wine manufacturer, opposing the bill to prohibit transporting liquors from wet states into dry states, told the judiciary committee the best cure for drunkenness was to encourage the use of wine.

Washington, D. C. — Prospects of a coal strike stirred members of both houses of congress to action. Senator Townsend introduced a bill to provide a federal investigation of any controversy affecting interstate commerce, and Representative Esch proposed a similar measure in the house. Senator Townsend's bill is similar to one he introduced when a member of the house several years ago.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Knox by wireless from the cruiser Washington, advised the state department that the results which it was hoped would come from his tour of Latin-America had been attained. World-wide importance attached to the secretary's trip and while the full significance probably has never been officially announced, its prime purpose is said to have been to lay the foundation for closer relations between the United States and Latin-America to anticipate any European aggression.

Hillsville Tragedy Re-enacted.

Hillsville, Virginia.—Another tragedy was enacted in the old Carroll county courthouse. Another troop of mountain outlaws rode in, shot the judge down off his bench and duplicated the grusome assassinations of a week ago—but this time it was only for the moving pictures. The actors did more firing and made more racket and caused almost as much fuss as the real outlaws did, and Hillsville almost had as much excitement.

American Jailed in Error.

Winnipeg, Manitoba.—Through United States Vice Consul Jones here an appeal is being made of an American citizen, John Edwards, a land seeker, from Denver, Colo., who, it is said, was arrested at Saskatoon, on November 25, 1911, on the charge of receiving stolen goods, by order of Attorney General Turgeon of Saskatchewan. A speedy trial was ordered, but he remained four months in jail before being brought to trial when he promptly was acquitted. A demand for compensation is made.

Food Expert Characterizes Representatives as "Dopers."

Washington, D. C.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, appearing as a private citizen before the pure food board in advocacy of a regulation guarding very strictly the use and sale of opium, morphine, cocaine and other habit forming drugs, aroused the anger of drug representatives by referring to them as "dopers." A heated argument ensued and for a moment it looked as if blows might be exchanged.

Coal Dealers Face Probe.

Washington, D. C. — The department of justice contemplates an investigation of associations of coal dealers in the Northwest which, it has been charged, have combined to maintain a high price for coal in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. Numerous complaints against the associations of coal dealers, principally in the Great Lakes region, have reached the department during the last few months. It is believed here that a proposed inquiry into the situation is the one referred to in the Chicago reports.

FOR SCIATIC RHEUMATISM

Try the Treatment That Cured This Pronounced Case in Minneapolis After Other Treatments Failed.

Sciatica is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve. Its origin is generally rheumatic and is the direct result of taking cold. For this reason the disease is commonly known as "sciatic rheumatism." That Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure this disease is shown by numerous cases like that of Mrs. J. B. Hansen, of No. 221 Twentieth Ave., So., Minneapolis, Minn. She says:

"A few years ago following an attack of the grip I was taken with sciatica. For six years I suffered untold agony and thought it would be a blessing to me if I could only die. There were sharp, shooting pains in both of my limbs and my shoulders and arms were affected also but not so severely. If I moved about quickly, the pain would catch me so that I had to scream. My limbs would swell until I could hardly walk. I also had a terrible dull pain in my back which was often unbearable. I was confined to bed for a week or two at a time. While suffering from the sciatica I was further run-down by weakness common to women of my age.

"I received so little relief from the doctor's medicine that I became discouraged and quit it. My husband urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as he had read how they had cured cases like mine. I felt better after I had taken the pills a short time but took several boxes until I was certain I was cured. I give this statement of my cure thinking that other sufferers may be helped as I was through using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills succeeds where other treatments fail because it is based on the sound medical principle that the health of the nerves depends on pure, red blood.

Every person who is interested in the home treatment of nervous disorders should send for a new edition of our booklet entitled, "Diseases of the Nervous System, Their Nature, Symptoms and Treatment." Address the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale at all druggists, or will be mailed to any address, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y

Exposing Children to Disease.

In an article on the treatment of sick children in the Woman's Home Companion the author, Dr. Roger H. Dennett, a famous New York specialist on the diseases of children, says: "Never, never, never expose the child to any contagious disease in order that he may have it once and be done with it. Even the so-called simple children's diseases, such as measles or whooping cough, have a death rate that is appalling.

Modern Journalism.

Arthur Brisbane, the editor, praised at a dinner in New York, the educative value of moving pictures.

"But of course," he said afterwards, "the moving picture will never equal the newspaper as an educative force.

"The newspaper not only reports news—in dull seasons it makes news as well. A famous editor put this news-making feature very neatly before a cub reporter when he said:

"'If a dog bites a man it isn't news. But, if a man bites a dog, it is. Whenever you can't find a man biting a dog, go and bite one yourself.'"

Financial Cripples.

They were taking the visitor from up-state around Manhattan, showing him the sights. The big automobile rolled past many wonderful buildings, all of which the host pointed out with some feelings of civic pride. At last they chanced to pass by the Municipal Lodging house.

"What's that place?" asked the rural visitor.

"Oh, that's one of New York's home for cripples," was the reply.

"What kind of cripples?" was asked.

"Financial," was the reply, as the car sped on.—New York Herald.

His Coming Out.

A fond Chicago mother is to give a coming-out party for her son. Of course, we have no means of knowing the youth, but we fancy he must be exactly that kind of son—and we await with bated anxiety a full description of his coming-out costume.

What will be done with the gentle youth after this severe social ordeal isn't stated, but it can be believed that he is to be rushed around to all sorts of society functions—and, of course, carefully guarded against the matrimonial designs of fortune-hunting females.

NO WORDS WASTED

A Swift Transformation Briefly Described.

About food, the following brief but emphatic letter from a Georgia woman goes straight to the point and is convincing.

"My frequent attacks of indigestion and palpitation of the heart culminated in a sudden and desperate illness, from which I arose enfeebled in mind and body. The doctor advised me to live on cereals, but none of them agreed with me until I tried Grape-Nuts food and Postum.

"The more I used of them the more I felt convinced that they were just what I needed, and in a short time they made a different woman of me. My stomach and heart troubles disappeared as if by magic, and my mind was restored and is as clear as it ever was.

"I gained flesh and strength so rapidly that my friends were astonished. Postum and Grape-Nuts have benefited me so greatly that I am glad to bear this testimony." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in Pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

105 MINERS KILLED

ONLY ELEVEN MINERS RESCUED FROM TOMBS IN DEPTH OF THE EARTH.

ACCIDENT IN OKLAHOMA.

Accumulation of Dust and Gas Cause Terrific Explosions in Mine of Bois Coal Co. Near Town of McCurtain.

McCurtain, Oklahoma.—One hundred and five lives is now accepted as an approximately accurate count of the human toll taken when mine No. 2 of the San Bois Coal company here was wrecked by an explosion. Of 116 men of the day shift only 11 are known to be alive. The others are entombed behind the debris.

Among the unaccounted for are members of a surveying party, headed by W. D. Roper of Clio, S. C. Forty-three Americans were employed in the mine.

The explosion occurred shortly after 9 o'clock. Those on the surface heard a faint rumble and an earth tremor. When those nearest to the mouth reached the opening a cloud of smoke and dust belched forth. Then came tense moments of waiting for those in the mine to emerge. Frank Fields, a miner, was the first to stagger out. He was walking in an entry and heard the explosion, he said. Nine other miners escaped through a "man way." A "rope rider" who was coming to the surface when the explosion occurred, was the eleventh man to escape.

The systematic work of penetrating the mine was begun. Half a hundred rescuers worked in relays. They brought four bodies from the mine. It was reported that a rescuing party had found 16 more bodies.

The explosion was caused, according to mine experts, from either accumulated gas or coal dust.

McCurtain, Oklahoma.—One hundred and seven of the 116 men at work in the Sans Bois mine No. 2 when the property was wrecked by an explosion, have been accounted for. Twenty-six of the number were rescued alive, one has since died, 52 bodies have been recovered and 29 bodies have been located.

NO TRACE OF SCOTT.

Japanese Antarctic Expedition Saw Nothing of British Explorer.

Wellington, New Zealand. — The Japanese Antarctic expedition retunrned here. They report having seen nothing of the British polar expedition of Capt. Robert F. Scott. The Japanese reported all on board the Kainan Maru well. They were engaged chiefly in coastal exploring on King Edward island.

Lieutenant Shirase, the head of the Japanese antarctic explorers, sailed from Sydney Nov. 19 of last year on board the schooner Kainan Maru. It was the second attempt of the Japanese to reach the south pole. The first expedition got as far as 74 degrees south, but was forced to return on account of stormy weather and ice packs, the Kainan Maru proving unfit to resist the ice pressure. The schooner was repaired and her equipment improved before the second start was made.

STRIKE IS AVERTED.

Unions at Fall River Decide to Accept an Advance of Ten Per Cent.

Fall River Massachusetts. — There will be no strike in the Fall River mills. This was definitely settled when the members of the five unions affiliated with the textile council voted unanimously to accept the advance of 10 per cent in wages tendered by the manufacturers. Thousands of operatives, including weavers, spinners, slasher tenders, carders, loom fixers, are represented in the unions which accepted the raise. They had previously rejected an offer of 5 per cent.

M. C. D. Borden, controlling the seven mills of the Fall River Iron Works Co., announced an advance of 10 per cent earlier in the week, and 35 other corporations controlling 100 mills followed the lead. In all about 35,000 operatives will benefit by the increase.

Gas Fatal to Six in Infirmary.

Norwalk, Ohio. — Six inmates of the Huron country infirmary are dead as a result of asphyxiation. Seven others were overcome, but are recovering. It is supposed that fires in gas stoves went out as a result of gas failure and that later the supply came on again.

36,000 Austrians to Strike.

Prague.—The miners in the Aussig district have resolved to call a general strike. Thirty-six thousand men will be affected.

PROGRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN

TAFT'S MANAGER CLAIMS 143 DELEGATES.

Many Conventions to Be Held This Week—Roosevelt on a Week's Tour.

Washington, D. C. — President Taft has 143 delegates to the Chicago convention. Colonel Roosevelt has 15. Senator La Follette has 10, and Senator Cummins has 2. The Taft managers admit contests in the first Georgia, the third, fifth and fourteenth Missouri, the second Tennessee and the third Oklahoma districts.

On the democratic side Wilson has 10 delegates, Clark has 66, Marshall has 30 and Harmon has 3, while 12 delegates are uninstructed.

No delegates are to be elected on the democratic side this week. The Arkansas primaries are set for the twenty-fifth, but the convention will come later. Speaker Clark confidently expects that he will get the Arkansas delegation solidly.

Counting the New York primaries, 140 delegates will be elected this week on the republican side, bringing the total number elected up to 310, or more than one-half of a majority of the convention, which will be 539.

During this week the managers of the Roosevelt campaign will make a final effort to arouse fresh interest in their candidate. Mr. Roosevelt will campaign in Illinois, Missouri, Minnesota and Michigan from Tuesday until Saturday. Incidentally, he will do what he can for himself in northern Indiana. The Taft managers say they are not worried about the effect of the Roosevelt speaking tour.

Senator La Follette will start April 1 on his long campaign tour. His special mission is to oppose Roosevelt in states where there is insurgent republican sentiment. He proposes to make a specialty of Nebraska. He had planned to spend the whole of next week in Wisconsin, his home state, where the primaries are to be held April 2, but since Roosevelt has decided not to contest for delegates in that state the senator will rest until April 1.

President Taft will make several speeches in April. He plans to answer every speech made by Roosevelt. The probability is that he will make one more trip to Ohio before the delegates are chosen in that state. He is anxious to go into the convention with at least 800 delegates.

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—Found hidden in the attic of a city residence, Albert Koehler, an immature youth of nineteen, later confessed to the police he was the assailant of Miss Anna Miller, aged thirty-two, a cousin, whom he literally hacked to pieces following a quarrel over a board bill at the Miller home.

Girard, Kansas. — "The Appeal to Reason," the socialist paper published here, the bigest political party paper in the world, is to suspend. "It is too hard work to keep it going," said its editor, Fred D. Warren. "This is my last fight. Warren is to be tried in May in the federal court on the charge of sending unfit printed matter through the mails.

THE SAFE LAXATIVE FOR ELDERLY PEOPLE

Most elderly people are more or less troubled with a chronic, persistent constipation, due largely to lack of sufficient exercise. They experience difficulty in digesting even light food, with a consequent belching of stomach gases, drowsiness after eating, headache and a feeling of lassitude and general discomfort.

Doctors advise against cathartics and violent purgatives of every kind, recommending a mild, gentle laxative tonic, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, to effect relief without disturbing the entire system.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the perfect laxative, easy in action, certain in effect and, withal, pleasant to the taste. It possesses tonic properties that strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels and is a remedy that has been for years the great standby in thousands of families, and should be in every family medicine chest. It is equally as valuable for children as for older people.

Druggists everywhere sell Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., and he will be very glad to send a sample bottle for trial.

All of That.

44 Bu. to the Acre

is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

HORRIBLE MURDER

GIRL LOSES LIFE IN BRAVE BATTLE TO SAVE HER HONOR.

VICTIM ALICE MATTHEWS

Sister Passes Body But Believes It Only Night Reveler—Crime Most Horrible in Minneapolis History.

Minneapolis. — With people around to hear her despairing cries for but no one ready and willing to render assistance, Alice Matthews, 21 years old, daughter of Harry Matthews, gave up her life late Saturday night in a desperate attempt to save her honor. Her disfigured and mutilated body was found in the street, less than half a block from her home, by a neighbor at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

Her lips were swollen from a blow in the mouth, her neck and throat were scratched and torn, her clothing was in tatters—everything bore mute testimony to the terrific struggle she had made against her brutal assailant, to whom she did not succumb until life was nearly or quite extinct.

Most Brutal in City's History.

For downright savage brutality the crime has never been equalled in Minneapolis. And with the entire department on the alert, the police are baffled. They have practically no clue to work on. There is nothing to indicate who committed the atrocious crime. There is not even the slenderest thread of evidence that might lead to his apprehension.

Alice Matthews was a packer in one of the flour mills. She had a reputation above reproach. Although she had many friends, they were all girl friends. She was never known to have had a beau. This simply increases the puzzle for the police.

Goes to Theater.

Saturday, Ida Belfy, a friend who had formerly worked with her in the mills, called on Miss Matthews while she was at work and arranged to go out with her Saturday night. Alice told her father and stepmother in the evening that she would spend the night with Miss Belfy, as she had often done before, and nothing was said about it.

The girls attended a picture show and Miss Matthews started home at 11:00 p. m.

It was nearly midnight when Mrs. H. C. Thomas, who lives two doors from the girl, heard some one outside her house. She thought she heard calls for help. A girl's voice cried: "Please let me go!" The cry was repeated, but she thought it children playing and paid no more heed. The body was found in front of the house in the morning.

Other neighbors also heard the pitiful cry for help, "Please let me go and I promise not to tell," is the way one told the police. But the girl pleaded in vain. Mrs. G. W. Tibbetts, who lives across the street at No. 3520 saw the two on the sidewalk. She called the police, thinking there were two intoxicated men who were unable to find their way home. Motorcycle Patrolman Olson of the Sixth precinct arrived, being told to look around Thirty-fifth street and Twentieth avenue, he found nothing. He was seen by Mrs. Tibbetts, but she failed to direct him, as she did not recognize him as an officer. Unsuccessful in his search he returned to the station.

Sister Sees Body.

The most pitiful event connected with Miss Matthews' death was when her younger sister, Jennie, returned home from a party at about 2 o'clock in the morning. She nearly stumbled over the body of her sister, not recognizing her, entered her home and went to bed, forgetting to tell her father of what she had seen.

Battle for Honor.

That the girl had battled desperatelyly for her honor and life was shown by the condition of her clothing and person. Her finger nails were torn and one of the hat pins was clutched in her hand, broken, which leads the police to believe the man must show evidence of the struggle. In the other hand she was tightly holding onto her purse, another proof, the police say, that the girl was taken unawares.

At the autopsy performed by Dr. H. E. Robertson of the University of Minnesota, it was shown conclusively that the girl died as the result of strangulation. It also proved beyond a doubt that the girl had been assaulted.

Cloquet Station Robbed.

Cloquet.—The ticket office in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern station was robbed of $30 and a bunch of tickets at a time when the office and waiting rooms were locked. The locks were picked, and the loss discovered when the agent appeared.

Smuggled Jewelry Seized.

Minneapolis. — About $200,000 worth of jewelry was seized by customs officials in the vaults of a Minneapolis bank where the jewelry was on deposit. The jewels are alleged to have been fraudulently imported. It is said that from here the jewelry was distributed throughout the Northwest. The firm also is said to have operated over the Mexican border. Everything concerning the seizure has been conducted with greatest secrecy. Seizures were in charge of George L. Foulkes, special agent.

Woodman Meeting Ends in Row.

Cloquet.—J. H. Norton addressed the Modern Woodmen in Cloquet on the subject of rates. He was accompanied by Mr. Goldblume of Minneapolis, both being sent out by the head officers of the Woodmen. From the start the speakers were interrupted by questions relative to rates, and their answers proved so unsatisfactory that the meeting was all but broken up. Cloquet Woodmen are indignant. They have over 300 members, and will secure an insurgent speaker for their first meeting in April.

POTATOES PAY WELL

Six Hundred Cars Already Shipped From Little Town of Sabin.

Barnesville. — Four hundred and eighteen cars of potatoes or 209,000 bushels have been shipped from this city since Sept. 1. At 90 cents a bushel, the average price paid, farmers netted $118,000. From Sabin comes the report that 600 cars were shipped from that point since Sept. 1, or a total of 300,000 bushels. At the average price of 90 cents, Sabin farmer realized $270,000.

Wolves Kill Off Deer.

Duluth.—Wolves are playing havoc with the deer of Northern Minnesota, and men who should know say they are increasing in number in this state. One man says that in one day he saw the bodies of six deer that had been slain by wolves in the woods of northern Itasca county. There is a demand that the state increase the bounty to $20 and the county to $10 for every wolf, and that hunters be provided with poison capsules to put in the entrails of deer that are shot in hunting season.

Ore Demand Will Be Heavy.

Duluth.—The United States Steel corporation and independent concerns operating mines are making estimates of the amount of ore that they will need during the present year. Owing to increased orders placed recently the amount of ore needed will exceed 40,000,000 tons as compared with 32,000,000 tons in 1911. The Steel corporation already has announced that it will require 3,000,000 tons more this year than last. Independent shippers will require at least 4,000,000 tons more.

YOUNG DEGENERATE

EUGENE THOMAS TELLS AUTHORITIES HE SLEW MAN IN LONELY CABIN NEAR MORA.

DIME NOVELS BLAMED

Sixteen-Year-Old Lad Gives Details of Terrible Crime.—Boy Says He Was Rifling Cabin When Owner Interrupted.

Minneapolis. — In the village at Grasston, Kenabec county, a sixteen-year-old Minneapolis boy told how he had killed an unarmed man in cold blood. He related how, interrupted in the robbery of a Kanabec settler's cabin by the approach of the settler, he drew a revolver, waited the approach of the settler, deliberately shot him down on the cabin threshold, rifled the pockets of the dead man and left the cabin. He told the story unconcernedly, as a 16-year-old boy might tell of killing his first rabbit.

The boy was Eugene Thomas, who gave himself up to the authorities in Minneapolis. The man he killed was R. N. Winters, who lived in a settler's cabin near the village of Mora.

Men who heard Thomas' narrative, the county attorney and the sheriff, men whose business is dealing with crime, said that the story of the boy, a confession of approximately 6,000 words, is a document which has no counterpart in the history of the state. It is the story of a boy's career in a big city; a story of yellow-backed novels, of the bandit plays of childhood; of a boy's longing for the career of an outlaw; of visions of robbery and wealth; of the first boyish prank; of the steps which led to the final tragedy; of a man's death and a boy's arrest on a charge of cold-blooded murder.

The boy who told the story and who told it only after he had calmly looked at pictures of the cabin in which the settler was murdered and of the settler lying dead on the floor, slept peacefully on a cot in the village jail.

The likeless body of R. N. Winters was found on the threshold of his cabin. Revolver bullets were in his head. Winters had been a recluse. In a corner in the cabin the authorities found a boy's gray mitten.

Three miles away, on the road toward Mora, a farmer said that a boy who wore one gray mitten came to his house and asked for food and for a team to drive him to Mora. The boy got the food, but not the team. He ate heartily and started down the road on foot. That night a boy who wore one gray mitten took a train in Mora for Minneapolis.

Eugene Thomas was known in Mora, and he had been visiting at his uncle's home ten miles out on the Wahkon road. The uncle said that on Friday before the murder he had told Eugene that he ought to go home, that the boy had talked of going west and had boasted of his misdeeds in Minneapolis.

He told his relatives that a neighbor in Minneapolis had a fine dog, that one day he went to the neighbor's barn, tied the dog up, hung it to a rafter by its feet and watched it die.

The Minneapolis police were notified to look out for Eugene Thomas and when a boy friend told him he was wanted in connection with the Kanabec county murder, the boy went home, talked the situation over with his father, came downtown and gave himself up. He refused to discuss the murder.

Beginning with the time when he was a youngster in short trousers Eugene Thomas told of his life. He said he had read the cheap novels of the west and had resolved to become a bandit. He told how the determination to leave home grew upon him, how he finally purchased two revolvers and left Minneapolis. He had visited with his uncle at Christmas time and he decided to stop at his uncle's homestead on his way west.

The boy told of his quarrel with his uncle and his wanderings until he arrived at the settler's cabin last Sunday. Then he told how he determined to rob the cabin, how he entered it and opened the trunk, how he heard a man approaching, how he drew his revolvers and stood waiting, how, when the door opened, he fired, how his victim fell on the floor; how he rifled the settler's pockets, left the cabin and made his way to Mora.

The boy is charged with murder in the first degree and the Kanabec county grand jury will consider the case.

Minnesotan Murdered and Robbed.

Pipestone.—The body of Swan Swanson has been brought to Windom, for burial. Swanson's dead body was found at his home at Wenatchee, Wash., a few days ago, where he had been murdered and robbed. The authorities are endeavoring to apprehend the murderer, but have so far been unsuccessful.

Bridge Contractor Accused.

Browns Valley.—The Traverse county commissioners charge conspiracy and combination on the part of bridge contractors. For years the lowest bidder on bridges in this county has been the same firm, with one exception, and the agent who secured that contract for another company was soon after discharged. Twice the successful bidder, fearing the loss of a contract, cut his bid still further, one time over 10 per cent. The commissioners charge that the several counties of the state are distributed among the bidders.

STEPHENSON WEEPS

WISCONSIN MAN PLACED ON TRIAL ON CHARGES INVOLVING VALIDITY OF SEAT.

LORIMER IS INTERESTED.

Senator Reed Declares Colleague Not Political Novice He Was Represented to Be—Other Doings in Congress.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Isaac Stephenson, the octogenarian millionaire lumberman and banker of Wisconsin, was formally placed on trial on charges involving the validity of his seat in the United States senate. The entire session was taken up by Senator Reed of Missouri with a speech in opposition to Senator Stephenson's retention of his seat.

All through the debates Senator Stephenson, the first to enter the senate chamber, sat quietly back in the rear tier of seats occasionally applying a handkerchief to his moistened eyes as the charges of political corruption were fired across from the Democratic side. Close by him sat Senator Lorimer of Illinois giving close attention.

Senator Reed declared that if the senate acquitted Mr. Stephenson, "We ought to be brave enough to hang on the door of the senate the legand, 'Those who have the money can enter here.' "

He said that Mr. Stephenson was not the political novice that he had been represented to be.

The main effort was to controvert the theory that Mr. Stephenson was innocent of wrongdoing because he had not violated any Wisconsin statutes and Mr. Reed stamped as absurd the claim that the senate could not go back of the legislature's action. He contended that the violation of a specific law was not necessary to invalidate an election.

"This was not an election," he added, "it was a revelry of crime and corruption; a campaign in which the barrel was the controlling figure; a contest of dollars, a contest of the long green."

May Repeal Reciprocity Law.

The finance committee of the United States senate will take up for consideration the measure introduced by Senator McCumber for repealing the inoperative features of the Canadian law which was passed at the special session and which failed for want of favorable action by Canada.

Attorney General Wickersham raised a storm in the senate by refusing to supply information concerning the reorganization of the International Harvester company, which was asked by a resolution adopted March 16. Senator Bacon took exception not only to the attorney general's action, but to the manner of communicating it.

Mr. Wickersham said in his letter that it was incompatible with the interests of the United States to supply the information desired because the correspondence on file related to business which was unfinished.

To Push Freight Claim Settlement.

At the request of President Taft, Senator Clapp introduced a bill to prevent undue delay in the settlement of freight claims. The measure undertakes to lay down rules for the conduct of freight charges controversies.

ENGINEERS ARE REFUSED

Fifty Roads Declare They Are Unable to Bear Increased Expense.

New York, N. Y.—Fifty railroads, comprising practically all lines east of Chicago and north of the Norfolk & Western, refused to grant an increase in wages demanded by their locomotive engineers.

The engineers' demand, presented Jan. 22, was for an increase amounting to about 19 per cent a year. The railroads' refusal is based on the assertion that they are financially unable to bear the increased expense. The reply was presented at a joint meeting of Committees representing the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and twelve presidents and general managers of the railroads.

The railroads point out that the proposed increase will amount to $7,553,792 annually. This increase, they say, would be equivalent to placing on their property a lien of $188,844,818 of 4 per cent securities which would have preference over first mortgage bonds, "and to just that extent would lessen the ability of the roads to make the improvements necessary to increase the efficiency of their service and to insure greater safety to the public and employees."

HANDS BURNED LIKE FIRE

"I can truthfully say Cuticura Remedies have cured me of four long years of eczema. About four years ago I noticed some little pimples coming on my little finger, and not giving it any attention, it soon became worse and spread all over my hands. If I would have them in water for a long time, they would burn like fire and large cracks would come. I could lay a pin in them. After using all the salves I could think of, I went to three different doctors, but all did me no good. The only relief I got was scratching.

"So after hearing so much about the wonderful Cuticura Remedies, I purchased one complete set, and after using them three days my hands were much better. Today my hands are entirely well, one set being all I used." (Signed) Miss Etta Narber, R. F. D. 2, Spring Lake, Mich., Sept. 26, 1910.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE
From 40 to 50 Years of Age, How It May Be Passed in Safety.

Odd, Va.:—"I am enjoying better health than I have for 20 years, and I believe I can safely say now that I am a well woman. I was reared on a farm and had all kinds of heavy work to do which caused the troubles that came on me later. For five years during the Change of Life I was not able to lift a pail of water. I had hemorrhages which would last for weeks and I was not able to sit up in bed. I suffered a great deal with my back and was so nervous I could scarcely sleep at night, and I did not do any housework for three years.

Woman's Power Over Man
Woman's most glorious endowment is the power to awaken and hold the pure and honest love of a worthy man. When she loses it and still loves on, no one in the wide world can know the heart agony she endures. The woman who suffers from weakness and derangement of her special womanly organism soon loses the power to sway the heart of a man. Her general health suffers and she loses her good looks, her attractiveness, her amiability and her power and prestige as a woman. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., with the assistance of his staff of able physicians, has prescribed for and cured many thousands of women. He has devised a successful remedy for woman's ailments. It is known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a positive specific for the weaknesses and disorders peculiar to women. It purifies, regulates, strengthens and heals. Medicine dealers sell it. No honest dealer will advise you to accept a substitute in order to make a little larger profit.

With continued favorable weather in another week should see the farmer getting ready for seeding.

We are anxiously awaiting reports of the arrival of the belated first robin.

Take it all in all the approaching season has every evidence of being a very profitable season for everyone concerned. As evidence of the vast amount of land to be tilled this spring, there has been more farm machinery sold here this spring than in any preceding year. Farmers with modern farm equipments have moved in and are moving in in large numbers. These indications should be sufficient to expect a very satisfactory year, conditions permitting.

One of the most brutal murders to come to our notice is the one committed at Minneapolis last Saturday night. It seems impossible that anyone with a human heart could be the instigator of such a grusome crime. Altho the evidence surrounding the crime is somewhat conflicting according to the sestimony so far available it is safe to surmise that the culprit will be apprehended within a few days and brought to answer for his terrible deed. The extreme penalty of the law to which he will be subject seems a trifle to the enormity of his crime.

The overwhelming majority by which Robt. LaFollette carried the first presidental primary of the year held last week in North Dakota is rather disappointing to the Roosevelt supporters, and is only another example that the unexpected most always happens in the political game. It was estimated that with the apparent strong indorsement of the Colonel in that state there seemed little question as to the outcome, but the result of the vote is highly surprising to everyone and particulary so to the LaFollette supporters themselves. North Dakota admirers of the Colonel were among the first to urge him to enter the race and did not hesitate in pledging him a handsome plurality in case he did. LaFollette was considered down and out even by his own followers. There is little regret, however, at the outcome and when the time comes around for Minnesota to express its preference there is little likelihooh of the Colonel receiving a like jolt handed him in North Dakota.

Washington march 19.—Representative Steenerson has appealed to the state department in an effort to prevent Canada from trying to get farmers to emigrate from Minnesota and the Dakotas. The Congressman had an interview with officials of the department of commerce and labor and the emmigration bureau today, and found that the immigration authorities could do nothing to check the activities of the Canadian government and the Canadian Pacific railroad in this direction. The appeal to the state department is for the purpose of ascertaining how far the Canadian government can go in inducing farmers on this side of the line to go north of the boundary. Reports coming to Representative Steenerson are to the effect that, while the immigrants coming into this country have an average of about $20 each, farmers going to Canada take an average of $1,000 cash out of the country.

The other day a merchant in a nearby town saw a farmer receiving goods at the station from a Chicago mail order house, says an exchange. The goods were in his line and the same had been carried in his store for years. He approached the farmer and said: "I could have sold you every article you have there for less money than you paid the Chicago house and saved you the freight besides." "Then why on earth didn't you say so?" answered the farmer. "I have taken the local paper for years and have never seen a line about you selling these goods. The chicago house sent advertising matter to me, asking for my trade and they got it."

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for milcows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

WARNING!

SIGN NOTHING!

Recently there has been a gentleman traveling thru the country especially thru eastern Red Lake and Pennington counties claiming to be from McIntosh, representing some supposed land firm from Grand Forks listing farms for sale and getting the owners of the land to sign listing contracts, tying them up for a period of 6 or 8 months and listing these lands regardless of the price asked by the owners as that part of it is immiterial to them for the reason that it is not their intention at all to even attempt to sell these lands but merely to tie them up so that the owners themselves even cannot dispose of it as while this party driving thru the country listing these lands may tell you that it is not their intention to record these contracts the fact of the matter is that all of same are being recorded at the court house in Red Lake Falls or Thief River Falls thus clouding the title, which the farmer would not know anything about until in case he should happen to sell himself when getting out the abstract of title he would then see his contract of record which would prevent him from closing his deal and even prevent him from renewing his old loan on same unless he first had settled with the land company, paying whatever amount they would ask for releasing that contract of record.

It is an old game and has been worked by various unscrupulous land firms and companies in various places thruout this and other states and only works a hardship on the owners of the land. Quarters have been listed for $5090.00 that would not sell for more than $2500, which conclusively goes to show that it is not the selling of the land they are after but simply tying it up and in that way, knowing that the farmer perhaps within a year or so would either sell it himself or have to make a new loan, he would be obliged to come to them and pay them for getting it off the records and even if a sale of that kind did not take place for the next ten years the contract would still be there so that sooner or later a settlement would necessarily have to be made.

Sign no contracts or agreements of any kind unless you are absolutely sure of what you are signing and if not go to your nearest bank or person familiar with that kind of business and ask him about it and in that way save yourself not only trouble but also money.

To Mothers and Others

COMMERCIAL CLUB MET

Regular Monthly Meeting of Plummer Commercial Club Held Tuesday Evening.

The regular meeting of the commercial club was held last Tuesday evening and many topics relative to much needed improvements in the village was discussed at length.

The matter of a second elevator which has come up at various times before was again brought up. It is the intention of the club to make a determined effort to see that another elevator is operated here by next fall.

Another item of considerable importance to come up was the question of a sewer system. The plan as proposed is to lay sewer pipes from the corner of Langlie's store to drain into the river below the creamery. S. J. Rice was appointed a committee of one to ascertain the approximite cost per foot for the work of constructing a sewer system.

Drainage is badly needed and this appears to be a good time to get the matter started. Without drainage it is found impossible to keep the cellars clear of water. In the event of a sewer many of the local business men as well as owners of private residences would build basements under their buildings, but for the reasons above mentioned are unable to do so at the present time.

MANY ATTEND CONCERT

St. Paul Symphony Orchestra at Thief River Falls Friday Evening Met By Large Audience.

A number of local people were up to Thief River Falls Friday evening to attend the concert by the St. Paul Symphony orchestra, returning on the Soo Flyer that evening. It is a rarity that people in the smaller towns are afforded an opportunity to attend a first-class organization of a kind like the St. Paul Symphony orchestra and the extent of the audience at the concert shows that a chance of this kind is accepted with appreciation by the music loving public. Thief River seems more than ordinarly successful in landing these large musical organizations and is generally at the head of the list among other towns in the point of attendance.

REDUCE FIRE HAZARD

Waste Caused by Careless Handling of Refuse Can Be Materially Reduced With Care.

At this season of the year, Nature is about to put on her most beautiful garb. The people generally realize the necessity of cleaning up. $150,000 would not make good the fire loss in Minnesota in 1911 caused by carelessness in connection with the annual clean-up.

This cleaning should exteed from the cellar to garret, from house to out-buildings, alleys and yards. A flying spark lodging, a lighted match or, a live cigar or cigarette stub thrown carelessly into rubbish in or outside of buildings has caused many disastrious fires. The chore boy may carelessly throw a match or cigar or cigarette stub into the rubbish of the basement of business blocks where paper, excelsior and other packing materials are often allowed to accumulate; the thoughtless passer-by may throw a cigar or cigarette stub through the grating in the sidewalk into the dust and filth below. Perhaps we cannot prevent the people from carelessly throwing matches or cigars, but we can prevent the accumulation of combustible and inflammable materials, if we will.

DREDGE WORK BEGINS

Forrestal-Feyen Drainage Company Have Large Crew Putting Up Walking Dredge.

The Forrestal-Feyen Drainage Co., commenced operations last Friday in getting ready for their work on the ditch north of this place, which will empty into the Clearwater near the Dan Carrol place.

A large crew of men is at work building a work shop just east of the Soo depot and a couple of boarding cars; the latter which will follow the dredge when work on the ditch is commenced in earnest. Material for the walking dredge to be built here is arriving every day. The dredge will be put together here and when completed will be walked out to its place of operation.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at All Druggists.

S'More Railroad Rumors.

Red Lake Falls Gazette:

The rumor that another Winnipeg line is to be constructed is no doubt well founded. The following notice appearing in a recent issue of the Manitoba Gazette, the official paper of the province, contains interesting informating:

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that, an application will be made at the present session of the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba for an act to incorporate a railway company for the construction and operation of a line of railway from a point at or near the City of Winnipeg and thence extending in a generally south-easterly direction to a point on the boundary line between Canada and the United States of America at or near section one, township one, range five east of the principal meridian, in said province.

Dated this twenty-ninth day of February, A. D. 1912.

GEORGE A. ELLIOT,
Solicitor for applicants.

This line will cross the boundary line about twenty miles east of Emerson. If the road is to continue in a southeastery direction, with the twin cities as objective points, it will pass throught eastern Pennington county and may strick eastern Red Lake county. Bagley, Clearwater county, seems to be located on about the right spot on the map to get the road.

The construction of this road will give the reservation people, who have long been without railroad facilities, a Winnipeg—Twin Cities main line.

It is not kown what railroad people are contemplating the construction of the line. Rumor has said that it is to be built by the Great Northern, by the Grand Trunk, by the Minneapolis & St. Louis and by others.

Crookston Times:

Definite information was recived today from an authoritative source that options for considerable property in the east and south parts of the city for a railroad, both the St. Louis and Soo being mentioned, has been secured. It is known that A. M. Sivertson, who now owns the Barrette lots in the east part of the city, has given an option, and several others have been secured in the same vicinity and in the south end or Woods district. There have also been some options secured in Jerome's Addition, but the work of the purchasers is not being posted on any sign boards and it is hard to get any definite idea of the route. However, it is significant that property has been secured in the eastern and south parts of the city and some definite route can probably be figered out in the near future.

DOLLAR-A-DAY BILL REJECTED

HOWEVER, THE SMOOT GENERAL AGE AND SERVICE LAW IS ENACTED.

90 DAYS IS REQUIRED

Estimated Annual Expenditures Will Be Increased Two Hundred Thousand Dollars—Other News of Congress.

Washington, D. C. — The senate last night, by a vote of 51 to 16, rejected the Sherwood dollar-a-day pension bill, which had passed the house, and enacted the Smoot general age and service pension law which, it is estimated, will increase the pension roll by $20,000,000 annually during the next five years.

During the debate, Senator Overman's reference to the burdens of the Southern people because of pension legislation brought a tart reply from Senator Willam Alden Smith of Michigan.

What Bill Requires.

The bill requires beneficiaries to have served 90 days and provides pensions ranging from $13 to $30 a month, instead of a 60-day minimum and $15 to $30 pension, as in the house measure. The bill now goes to conference with the house. The shadow of a possible presidential veto hangs over the measure.

The senate added provisions that would grant $30 a month to former soldiers disabled by service, wounds or disease, the latter being estimated to add $2,500,000 to the annual outlay under the bill.

The entire negative vote on the final passage of the bill was cast by Democratic senators from Southern states. The Northern Democrats voted with the Republicans for the bill.

The 21 senators whose vote rejected the house Sherwood bill, the real contest of the day, were: Chilton, West Virginia; Culberson, Texas; Foster and Thornton, Louisiana; Hitchcock, Nebraska; Johnson and Gardner, Maine; Johnston, Alabama; Kern and Shively, Indiana; Lea, Tennessee, Martine, New Jersey; Overman and Simmons, North Carolina; Owen, Oklahoma; Percy and Willams, Mississippi; Rayner, Maryland; Swanson, Virginia; Smith, Georgia, and Smith, South Carolina.

On this vote the Northern Democrats voted in the negative because they preferred the Sherwood bill and the Southern Democrats because they opposed both the house bill and the senate measure.

President Taft will send to congress next week what he regards as one of the most important messages he has written this year. He will recommend legislation designed to save millions of dollars each year, consolidate several government bureaus and generally make the machinery of the government conform more nearly with the plans drawn by the economy and efficiency commission appointed by him in June, 1910.

President Taft vetoed a bill providing for the sale of burnt timber on lands outside of the national forests. The bill was designated to relieve the homestead settlers who suffered severely through forest fires.

Valuation of Railroads.

Washington, D. C. — Physical valuation of all the railroads of the United States is authorized in a bill reported by the interstate and foreign commerce committee. The measure enlarges the power of the interstate commerce commission and empowers it to make the valuation for the purpose of fixing and adjusting rates. The legislation has been pressed upon congress for several years, but up to the present time always had failed of favorable action.

Washington, D. C. — Senator Lorimer of Illinois, won an overwhelming vindication at the hands of the special committee of eight senators who have finished a second investigation of his election by the Illinois legislature in 1909. Twice challenged and once acquitted, the committee by votes of five to three on all vital points completely exonerated him of any knowledge of legislative corruption.

Edward Hines, the millionaire lumberman, referred to in the investigation as the "man who put Lorimer over," also got a vindication by the committee. It had been charged that Hines raised a corruption fund of $100,000 to elect Lorimer to the senate. The majority repudiated that and passed a resolution that the evidence had shown that he did not raise or contribute any sum improperly.

The majority held that no new evidence had been adduced to justify a reversal of the senate's previous action in Senator Lorimer's favor; that there was no evidence of a jack-pot in the Illinois general assembly of 1909 in connection with his election and, flatly, that no corrupt practices had been shown by the investigation.

The case will be squarely before the senate probably next week when a protracted debate will begin. Neither side has made a thorough canvass of the situation. Republican leaders point out that there will be about 27 new senators to vote on the case in addition to those who have already voted on substantially the same charges.

The basis of the committee's action was the plea raised by Lorimer's counsel that the previous action of the senate bars reconsideration.

The majority report on the main proposition will be signed by Senators Dillingham, Gamble, Fletcher, Johnston and Jones, and the minority by Senators Kenyon, Kern and Lea.

Senator Jones was against Senator Lorimer on the first investigation. He reversed his position and presented three of the leading resolutions to exonerate Lorimer.

The contention of the minority members will be that the senate passed on the question of the former adjudication when it ordered the present investigation. Their viewpoint is that the new investigation has developed much pertinent to Lorimer's election, which the old committee failed to discover, so that doubts as to the correctness of State Senator Holstlaw's confession have been dispelled; that States Attorney Wayman of Chicago has clearly refuted the claim that coercion was used to extort confessions and that Representative White's confession was corroborated in many particulars. They claim that the respudicata plea is a lawyer's subterfuge to befog the real issue.

Use for Panama Machinery.

Washington, D. C. — Secretary Fisher is urging the house to clothe the federal government with immediate authority to use the construction equipment and supplies on the Panama canal, as they are released there by completion of the work, for building a government railroad in Alaska from tidewater at Resurrection Bay to the Yukon Valley. Chairman Flood of the house territories committee has prepared a bill to provide for a report upon such a project to some future session of congress.

Secretary Fisher, in a letter to Representative Booher of Missouri, makes some suggestions for changes in the Flood bill and also outlines a substitute measure to provide for immediate action. The secretary presses the point that if legislation be delayed, utilization of the Panama canal construction equipment will not be practicable. He calls attention to the government's engineering feat at Panama under a very simple act of congress and wishes to apply the same measures to the railroad in Alaska.

Resurrection Bay has already been selected as a coaling station site by the navy department.

Admit New Senators.

Washington, D. C.—Four senators from the two new states of Arizona and New Mexico will this week enlarge the membership of the upper branch of congress to 96. The new men, all lawyers, are Marcus Aurelius Smith of Tucson and Henry F. Ashurst of Prescott, Ariz., democrats, who will be sworn in at the bar of the senate today, and Thomas Benton Catron of Santa Fe, and Albert Bacon Hill of Three Rivers, New Mexico, republicans, who may not arrive from New Mexico in time for installation today.

These four new senators will change the political strength of the senate to consist of 51 republicans and 43 democrats. The death of Senator Taylor of Tennessee reduced what would have been a representation of 44.

FIRE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Young's Ocean Pier, Feature of Seashore, Destroyed at Loss of $250,000.

Atlantic City, New Jersey.—Young's Ocean Pier, one of the big features along the sea front of this resort, was destroyed by fire. Six firemen were hurt. The pier was about 2,500 feet long. The loss is estimated at $250,000. Before the watchman could sound an alarm the fire spread to the stage and the land breeze carried it out toward the sea.

Fire in Manila; Loss $1,000,000.

FLOOD LOSS HEAVY

MISSISSIPPI RIVER NEAR ST. LOUIS HAS BEEN STATIONARY LAST 24 HOURS.

ALL OVER NORTHWEST.

200 Families Driven From Their Homes in Des Moines.—Train Service in Several States Demoralized.

St. Louis, Mo.—The flood in this section of the country, including Missouri, Illinois and Kentucky are the worst on record. Property loss has already run into the millions. Rain has been falling throughout the flooded district for the last 12 hours and there seems to be no relief in sight.

The Mississippi has been stationary for 24 hours at 29.8 feet, and a further rise is not expected for 24 hours.

Cairo and the drainage district are the only two dry places in that section of the country, the entire country north and south of that city being covered with several feet of water.

The river at Cairo reached a stage of 53 feet, which is eight-tenths of a foot higher than previous records. A stage of 54 feet is predicted before the floods subside.

Large forces of men patrol the levees constantly and everything is being done to keep the embankment in good condition. Trains are still operating out of Cairo, but in many cases are being routed over foreign systems.

The Mississippi is about two feet higher than the Ohio at its mouth, and is running across the country into the Ohio.

The backwater has covered the government road between the national cemetery and Mounds, Ill., to a depth of three feet. The country about McClure, Ill., is inundated. Live stock is being driven to the hills and the people are leaving.

The heavy rainfall has alarmed farmers in the Missouri river bottoms and they are moving property to higher grounds. The Missouri had been falling until the rain commenced.

200 Families Driven From Homes.

Omaha, Neb.—Flood waters in the Platt river continue to recede, but railroad traffic on lines entering Lincoln is still demoralized.

After having passed the 17-foot mark, the Des Moines river is falling and there is no danger of a serious flood unless heavy rains set in, according to the local weather bureau. Considerable damage has been done.

Nearly 200 families were driven from their homes in Southeastern Des Moines when a large section of that district was inundated. Reports from other towns in central Iowa indicate that flood conditions are greatly improved. Many streams fell slightly during the day.

Hickman, Ky., Is Flooded.

Hickman.—The levee broke here and the town is flooded. Hundreds of families have been driven from their homes. There has been no loss of life. Water is everywhere on the business street.

In the streets of Hickman the water reached a depth of two to eight feet within an hour. The fire alarm, relied upon as a signal, was sounded and no lives were lost, but hundreds of homeless are in the rain, seeking shelter. The water late last night was raising.

For four days and nights all the men in town have been working to protect the levee, but the continuously heavy downpour of rain, augmenting the rising river, undid their work in an instant.

Hickman is the town in which the Minneapolis baseball team is doing its spring training.

Trains Running Late.

Great Falls, Minn.—Although the Missouri river has fallen slightly in the last 12 hours the tracks of the Great Northern railway in the Missouri and Milk river valleys are under water at several points and trains are running from five to ten hours late. Chicago, Burlington and Quincy trains are arriving behind schedule, owing to the high water in South Dakota.

Railroad Bridge Washed Out.

Davenport, Iowa.—The stage of the Mississippi river is one foot lower than on Saturday. The decline came, following the breaking up of the ice gorge, six miles below Davenport Saturday night.

The railroad bridge over the Cedar river at Buchanan on the Clinton-Iowa City branch of the Rock Island was washed out.

Stocks in Stores Damaged.

Cedar Rapids.—Thousands of dollars damage has been done to stocks stored in the basements by the Cedar river flood. The river is the highest since 1884.

Mississippi Breaking Up.

La Crosse.—The ice moved out of the river and river navigation on the Mississippi as far north as this point is open. The ice is solid above La Crosse as far as Winona.

Danger Down State Passed.

Winona, Minn.—All danger to towns and villages and to farm buildings and railway roadbeds in southern Minnesota along the course of the Root river, from Lanesboro to La Crescent, Minn., is believed to have passed. The overflow water is rapidly returning to its banks.

Griscom Operated Upon.

Philadelphia, Penn. — Lloyd C. Griscom, who was operated upon at the Bryn Mawr hospital for acute stomach trouble, is resting easy.

Davenport, S. D., Wiped Out.

Pierre, South Dakota.—The town of Davenport, in northern Stanley county, was wiped out by fire. The loss was total, as there was no insurance on the structures burned and no water supply.

Mexican Palace Burned.

Mexico City, April 2.—The original declaration of independenece of the republic of Mexico was destroyed with other priceless documents when the city palace of Iguala, state of Guerrero, was destroyed by fire.

WHAT INSURANCE COMMISSIONERS SAY

Insurance Commissioner Wm. H. Hotchkiss of New York, chairman of the executive committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners, prior to the last Head Camp of the Modern Woodmen of America, gave the following official notice to that society:

"Pursuant to action of the national convention of state insurance commissioners, at its adjourned session in December last, I write you this expression of views as to the necessity of your order—as well as all other fraternal benefit societies—placing itself on a firm foundation as to rates. An insurance society which in these days does not recognize that the cost of insurance is fixed by laws other than man's laws—namely, the laws of nature—or prescribes for its members either a flat rate, irrespective of the age of its members, or any other rate that is not scientifically safe, is deceiving both itself and its members and approaching the time—perhaps slowly, but not the less surely—when it must fail and its contracts be repudiated. The fraternal spirit is a good thing; but the rates and management of fraternal societies must also be such that the beneficiaries of the last member to die will receive every dollar that such member's certificate calls for."

State Insurance Commissioner Ekern of Wisconsin has issued an official interview in which he says: "Fraternal societies generally have come to recognize that their business must be conducted on a sound basis. This means a re-rating for nearly every society, and members who do not fully understand the situation are often inclined to complain of increases in their rates. They should understand that with a re-rating on a sound basis they have a much more valuable insurance than before. All are benefited by getting a permanent insurance for what was uncertain before. The Modern Woodmen of America, by reason of its long experience with a large membership, is permitted to make a rate upon its own experience, which is even lower than that based on the National Fraternal Congress table, which new societies must adopt. The cost of this insurance is not a matter of mortality tables or rates charged, but depends upon the actual deaths in the society. A re-rating merely means that each member shall pay his real share of that cost. Members who think of dropping their insurance will do well to take enough time to study the question before doing anything which may bring regret to both themselves and their families."

The Chicago Inter Ocean says:

"It is unpleasant for the members of the Modern Woodmen Society to have to pay more for their insurance, but let them think how much more unpleasant it would be for those 5,000,000 women and children, or any of them, to be deprived of that protection because their husbands or fathers got angry. That is what all Woodmen should think about."

Cursory.

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damage done by a run to hounds, and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

"Has your husband," he inquired, "made an examination yet?"

"That he have, sir," replied Mrs. Hodge, with a courtesy.

"Rather a cursory examination, I suspect."

COL. SAMUEL ADAMS DEAD

PIONEER OF MINNESOTA AND HIGH MASON.

Career in West Almost Coeval With That of State of His Adoption.

Minneapolis. — Colonel Samuel E Adams, territorial pioneer, legislator, soldier, Mason and business man, died at his home here, after a brief illness.

Samuel E. Adams was born in Reading, Windsor county, Vt., Dec. 1, 1828. He was a descendant of the old Lexington, Mass., family of Adams. His great grandfather served in the Revolutionary war under General Israel Putnam.

In the fall of 1855 he visited St. Anthony Falls for his health, and being impressed favorably with the new country, on his return to Vermont made preparations to move permanently to Minnesota, which he did the year after, locating at Monticello, June 1, 1856, and engaging in mercantile pursuits.

Colonel Adams was a state senator in the last legislature of the Territory of Minnesota; was re-elected to the position when Minnesota was admitted to the union. He was later appointed special agent of the postoffice department for Iowa and Minnesota, and was appointed receiver of the land office at St. Cloud in 1860. In 1862 he was appointed a paymaster in the army by President Lincoln, and was brevetted lieutenant colonel in 1865.

During the flourishing days of the Grangers he was for eight years master of the State Grange and Grand Master of the National Grange for two years. Colonel Adams was president of the State Agricultural society in 1879, and was a life member.

For many years he was editor and proprietor of the Wright County Times, published at Monticello. In May, 1883, he moved to Minneapolis, where he resided for twenty-nine years. For twelve years he was alderman of the Fourth ward.

A pioneer of Minnesota, he was also a pioneer of Masonry in the state. He was a charter member of Monticello lodge No. 16; St. Anthony Falls chapter No. 3, and of Minneapolis Consistory No. 2. He was a Past Master of Monticello lodge No. 16, Past Junior and Senior Grand Warden of the Grand lodge and the Grand Representative of Vermont since October, 1859.

He was Past Venerable Master of the Kadosh at Minneapolis; and was the acting 33d degree Mason representing the state in the supreme council at Washington, D. C. In 1901 he was elected lieutenant grand commander of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, thus making him the second ranking Masonic officer in the world, a position he held at his death.

Colonel Adams married Miss Augusta J. Smith, of Pittsford, Vt., July 21, 1859. Two sons were born of the marriage, Henry R. Adams of Minneapolis and Dr. John C. Adams of Superior, Wis.

General Marion Maus has a keen and delicate taste in literature, and at a recent dinner at Vancouver Barracks, discussing a popular novel of little worth, General Maus said:

"The pathos of the book is really bathos. It reminds me of a private's widow. The good woman was about to sell her household furniture, her rugs, plated ware and what not. As she was going over these articles her eyes filled with tears, a host of memories rose to her mind, and, laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said: "'Oh, dear! I can't let these go! They've been in poor George's mouth too often!'"

When to Call the Doctor.

When to summon the doctor is a point which has probably puzzled most people at one time or another, but in the case of throat and intestinal troubles there should be no uncertainty, says a medical authority. The doctor should be summoned at once, for the sore throat may be diphtheria, and the intestinal symptoms may mean peritonitis, appendicitis or any one of a dozen complications of serious character. Valuable time and the golden opportunity may be wasted by waiting for symptoms that are severe enough to justify calling the doctor.

SHE QUIT COFFEE
And Much Good Came From It.

It is hard to believe that coffee will put a person in such a condition as it did a woman of Apple Creek, O. She tells her own story:

"I did not believe coffee caused my trouble, and frequently said I liked it so well I would not quit drinking it, even if it took my life, but I was a miserable sufferer from heart trouble and nervous prostration for four years.

"I was scarcely able to go around at all. Had no energy, and did not care for anything. Was emaciated and had a constant pain around my heart until I thought I could not endure it. I felt as though I was liable to die any time.

"Frequently I had nervous chills and the least excitement would drive sleep away, and any little noise would upset me terribly. I was gradually getting worse until finally one day, it came over me, and I asked myself what is the use of being sick all the time and buying medicine so that I can indulge myself in coffee?

"So I thought I would see if I could quit drinking coffee, and got some Postum to help me quit. I made it strictly according to directions, and I want to tell you that change was the greatest step in my life. It was easy to quit coffee because I had the Postum which I like better than I liked the old coffee. One by one the old troubles left, until now I am in splendid health, nerves steady, heart all right, and the pain all gone. Never have any more nervous chills, don't take any medicine, can do all my housework, and have done a great deal besides.

"My sister-in-law, who visited me this summer had been an invalid for some time, much as I was. I got her to quit coffee and drink Postum. She gained five pounds in three weeks, and I never saw such a change in anyone's health."

"There's a reason."

PRESS OF COUNTRY PRAISED

Officers of Anti-Tuberculosis Association Acknowledge Debt In Fight Against Dread Disease.

Publicity in newspapers and magazine to the amount of 1,500,000 inches a year on tuberculosis and its prevention is being given by the press of the United States, according to an estimate issued recently by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. If all the publicity on tuberculosis given by the press of this country gathered in one paper, the National Association estimates it would make a paper of over 6,250 pages. In the last four years, during which time an active publicity campaign has been carried on, the National Association estimates that over 5,000,000 inches, or over 90 miles, of press notices on tuberculosis have been published.

"Publicity is the very heart of the educational campaign against tuberculosis," says Dr. Livingston Farrand, the executive secretary of the national association. "Largely because of the intelligent co-operation of the press has the anti-tuberculosis movement in this country been able to become, as it is, the greatest organized movement of its kind in the world. When tuberculosis shall have become a rare disease the American press may justly claim a large share in this gigantic achievement."

JEWS FOR MINN.

IMMIGRATION COMMISSIONER MAXFIELD TAKES UP SUBJECT WITH HEBREW AID SOCIETIES.

WILL SEND PAMPHLETS

Other Nationalities Also to Be Told of Advantages of North Star State Acres for Farming Purposes.

St. Paul.—To interest Jewish immigrants in the farm lands of Minnesota is the latest plan of H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner. Prominent St. Paul Jews have called on him in the last few days asking his assistance in the "back to the land" movement among the Jews in the United States, and he has decided to take the matter up with the Jewish aid societies in the cities of the country and do what he can to get the Jewish immigrants who want to go on to farms interested in the opportunities Minnesota offers for farmers.

"More than 100,000 Jews come to America every year," said Mr. Maxfield. "Practically all of them enter the trades or mercantile pursuits and crowd together in the cities. The Jewish aid societies are now attempting to get them out of the city to the country.

"The Jews who come to America are handicapped in farming because of inexperience. All their training in the other countries is to fit them for the trades. There is a tendency now among the young Jews to go back to land and to learn agriculture, and it is to encourage this spirit that we are going to assist the Jewish aid societies."

The pamphlets and other literature advertising Minnesota will be sent to the aid societies in the large cities of the country. It is planned to print some of the pamphlets in Hebrew.

Many of the Jews in St. Paul have bought state lands, but have bought them more as a speculation than anything else. A few of them have gone out onto their farms, and it is said that many of the younger Jews in St. Paul desire to get out into the country and would go if they knew the best place to settle.

Mr. Maxfield said yesterday that he purposed to interest all of the desirable nationalities in Minnesota lands, and would do so as soon as possible. He has recently learned through whom to act in interesting the Jews and will assist the other foreigners as fast as he can discover the proper authorities to co-operate with in the work.

TO PUSH "AIR" WORK

Forty "Sandhogs" Engaged for the Adams Mine at Oreland.

Brainerd.—Forty "sandhogs" as the men are termed who work in a mine under heavy air pressure, have arrived at the Adams mine near Oreland, and commenced this week. The shaft has reached a depth of 62½ feet and Superintendent Collar expects to sink it to a depth of 123 feet.

The Cuyuna Mining Timber company, although newly organized, has filled $40,000 worth of mining timber contracts for the Armour No. 1, Armour No. 2 and Kennedy mines. The second shaft of the Barrows mine of the M. A. Hanna company is down hinety feet. The Cuyuna-Duluth Iron company has closed a deal for an option on the east half of the northeast quarter of section 31, townsite 47, range 28, adjoining the townsite of Cuyuna and known as the Federal property. It was secured on a royalty basis of 45 cents a ton for all ore mined. The company is also about to acquire the Ironton townsite mine, 750,000 tons of ore averaging 62 per cent iron ore.

GLENWOOD CONVENTIONS

Six Are Scheduled for the Spring and Early Summer Season.

Glenwood.—Six organizations have scheduled their annual conventions for this place. The first will be that of the grain dealers of the northern and western part of Minnesota on March 28. Among the speakers will be E. G. Dunn of Iowa. On May 14, the seventh district group of bankers will hold its convention in Glenwood, and May 23 and 24 are the dates set for the first booster meeting of the West Central Minnesota Development association.

The other conventions scheduled for Glenwood are the Loyal Liberty league an organization of saloon men, on June 11, 12 and 13; the Tindollag on June 5 and 6, and the Telelag on June 24 and 25. These last two are societies of Norwegians, and they generally have from 1,000 to 2,000 persons in attendance. It is estimated 15,000 persons will visit Glenwood this summer as a result of these conventions.

Voluntary contributions have been called for, and it is expected that the memorial will be placed in Mayo park.

ROOSEVELT DAY IN MINNESOTA

FORMER PRESIDENT WHIRLS THROUGH STATE.

Appears Before People in Campaign for Third Term Nomination in Three Speeches.

Minneapolis. — Honorable Theodore Roosevelt was the guest of Minnesota for a day. The reception was cordial and hearty. The colonel spent a day of extreme activity, but when he finished it in Minneapolis, before leaving for Chicago, he insisted he was still feeling "bully."

Before an audience which packed the Minneapolis auditorium, he explained his attitude on the recall of judicial decisions and presidential primary, discussed the tariff at Albert Lea, and in St. Paul discussed country life and the presidential primary. During his trip through Minnesota, the colonel was greeted by crowds which thronged every station. This was true at Albert Lea, at Owatonna and St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Upon his arrival in St. Paul he was escorted to the Merchants' hotel, where he conferred with advisers and met the governor. Later he was taken to the Auditorium, where an immense crowd greeted him.

His most significant speech was delivered in Minneapolis, where he crammed a discussion of the new issue of the recall of judicial decisions into the last 15 minutes of his speech.

The first part of his speech was devoted to a general discussion of civic virtue, although he took advantage of the opportunity to say at the opening of his remarks that he hoped the people would see to it that their representatives gave them a presidential preference primary.

This was followed by a discussion of what he meant by popular rule and referred to the president of the United States, although not by name, saying that the president was afraid of popular rule, "rule by the mob," and extending his hand towards the audience, he asked, "How do you like to be called a mob?"

"You have only ten minutes," Mr. Purdy told him at the last of his address, and the colonel immediately took up the discussion of the recall of judicial decisions.

He expressly stated that he was not referring to the initiative, the referendum and the recall of judges, but merely to the recall of judicial decisions. In a less connected way, it was a reproduction of the speech which he had delivered a few days ago, on the same subject.

Throughout his remarks, there was no reference to the charges which Senator La Follette had lodged against him in North Dakota and no reference to the primaries in New York or the convention results in Indiana.

DULUTH FOR GARDENS

State Experts to Instruct Teachers and Children Will Benefit.

Duluth.—Duluth has the backyard garden fever this year as never before in its history. Last year was the first season in which backyard gardens flourished in Duluth, and this year nearly every householder in the city has begun his cigar box gardening with a view of transplanting his vegetables and flowers later.

The school children have taken it up, the Commercial club and the women's clubs having aided by furnishing seeds. Early next month a garden school will be opened in Duluth under the supervision of the state school of agriculture, and one school teacher from each school will take the course, later passing on her knowledge to the pupils. An effort is being made to secure the use of vacant lots for poor families.

Keen rivalry has sprung up between the different suburbs, and Lakeside and Woodland residents heatedly discuss the merits of the soil in their respective suburbs. Hardware stores report a run on rakes and hoes, and seed dealers are doing a flourishing business.

EXHIBIT IS POPULAR

Minnesota's Traveling Display Meets With Success.

St. Paul. — Minnesota's exhibition car, which is "showing" the people of Missouri Minnesota's advantages, has drawn large crowds at every stopping place, but, in spite of the interest manifested in Minnesota's products, the car cannot compete with a hanging, according to a letter received by the immigration bureau from Frank M. Eddy, who is in charge of the car.

Embezzlement of $2,000 Charged.

Duluth. — C. N. Hamilton, until recently local collector and agent of the People's brewery, was arrested at his home on a warrant sworn out by Frank G. Sandstedt, president of the brewing company, charging embezzlement of $2,012.17.

Carleton Debator Winner.

Northfield. — Melkor Kjorlug, of Carleton College, won the state oratorical contest and the right to represent the Minnesota State Oratorical association at the interstate contest in May, over contestants from the other four colleges of the state oratorical association. The St. Olaf orator, L. O. Berge, got second prize, and A. F. Nelson, of Macalester, third. This is the tenth time Carleton has won the state contest in 15 years. The winning orator's topic was "Master or Slave."

Two Suicides in Polk County.

Crookston.—Two suicides occurred in Polk County, in connection with both of which there were gruesome details. Andrew Holger, a machinist, worried over non-employment and a physical wreck, slashed his throat almost from ear to ear, his body being found in a box car in the local railroad yards. S. Hedstrom of Lengby, a farmer, was the other suicide, and he killed himself in his home near that place. When found the body was lying in a big pool of blood.

SOME TABLE DAINTIES

GOOD THINGS SHOULD BE PERMANENTLY ON THE MENU.

Crisp, Delicious Crackers, as Good as Can Be Bought, May Easily Be Made at Home—For Delicious Mock Mince Meat.

Soda Crackers.—The various kinds of commercial biscuits put up by different firms are made by special recipes which are a trade secret, but the recipes here given are supposed to give results as nearly similar as amateur hands can attain: Take one quart of flour, rub into it thoroughly one tablespoonful of butter, and one teaspoonful of salt. Now add good creamy buttermilk to make a very stiff paste, beating in a little at a time, at first using just enough of the flour to admit beating until very light. Make gradually stiff enough to knead and when well kneaded roll very thin, cut into squares, stick with a fork and bake quickly in a hot oven.

Water Crackers.—Take one pound of flour, one tablespoonful of lard, one teaspoonful of salt, and half teaspoonful of soda. Mix with water enough to beat well; knead, roll thin, stick with a fork and bake in a hot oven.

Cream Crackers.—Take the white of one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, one teacupful of sweet milk or thin cream, half teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and gradually beat in some flour, beating very briskly; gradually make stiff enough to roll thin, prick with a fork, and bake in a fairly hot oven.

Mock Mince Meat.—Take half cup of molasses, two-thirds of a cup of water, two-thirds of a cup of vinegar, one cup of sugar, two cups of bread crumbs, one cup of chopped raisins (some substitute finely chopped dried fruit for this), one tablespoonful of cloves, one tablespoonful of cinnamon, one nutmeg grated, butter the size of a hen's egg, and, if the raisins are used, add one cupful of currants or chopped sour apple, otherwise double the quantity of fruit. Mix thoroughly and heat on the stove before using to equally distribute the flavor of the spices.

Cocoanut Pie.—Use two eggs, three tablespoons of sugar, one cup of fresh grated cocoanut, one pint of milk, one tablespoonful of corn starch, and a piece of butter the size of a walnut. It is better to let the cocoanut soak in the milk three or four hours or over night if you use the desiccated cocoanut. Bake with one crust and sprinkle grated cocoanut over the top.

Peanut Brittle.—To make peanut brittle, boil together one cupful each of molasses and brown sugar, a teaspoonful of vinegar, and two tablespoonfuls of butter. When boiled enough that a little dripped from the tines of a fork into very cold water is brittle, add a cupful of blanched peanut meats, remove at once from the fire, add a teaspoonful of baking soda, beat hard, and as it stiffens pour out and spread flat in a buttered pan, marking into squares before it is quite cold and set.

Chicken a la King.

To make that delectable supper dish, chicken a la king, take the white meat of a boiled chicken and cut it into thick slices, or discs, and put into a saucepan. Put the saucepan on the stove, moisten with hot cream, just enough to cover the chicken, add one whole sweet red pepper cut into discs, a pinch of salt and pepper, and let simmer gently for about fifteen minutes. Remove the saucepan to the side of the stove, beat the yolk of an egg and mix with the cream, but do not allow it to come to a boil. Add a piece of sweet butter the size of a walnut and serve immediately, very hot, over some fresh made toast. May be served in chafing dish if preferred. —Vogue.

Boiled Beef and Noodles.

Here is a most nourishing dish and it is appetizing as well. Ask the butcher for one rib of a plate piece of fresh beef and get him to crack the bone across three times. Put the meat on in barely enough cold water to cover it; cook slowly and when half done add salt, pepper, three slices of onion and a sprig of parsley. Twenty minutes before taking up the meat put in enough noodles of the flat strip sort to make a little dish by themselves. When these are tender serve the meat with the noodles massed beside it. If the meat liquid has died down too low for cooking the noodles, boil up a cupful or so of canned tomatoes and add them hot to the stock. The tomato taste gives the dish an extra filip.

Damask Centerpieces.

Damask centerpieces are quite the style nowadays. Many clever needlewomen outline the flowers or design of the damask with a dainty stitch so as to form a border around the circular piece, and with an edging of heavy lace this makes as effective a centerpiece as could be desired. Damask, however, is by no means cheap, but if one can make a number of such pieces from old linen with only the trifling expense of the lace, one can have one of these centerpieces.

To Whiten Ivory.

To clean ivory ornaments rub well with unsalted butter and place in the sunshine. If the ivory is discolored it may be whitened by rubbing with a paste composed of burned pumice stone and water, and placing it under glass in the sun.

If Sugar Cakes.

If the sugar lumps the first thought is to crush out the lumps with a rolling pin. Instead of doing this, use your food chopper. You will be delighted at the ease with which the work is done, and this without having the sugar get on the floor.

Oat Flake Cookies.

One egg, one cup of sugar, one cup of melted lard and butter, one tablespoon of molasses, four tablespoons sweet milk, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon soda, two and one-half cups of rolled oats, two cups of flour, salt.

LOOK AFTER YOUR HEALTH

If Your System Is Kept Toned Up You Will Escape Many Diseases That Find Easy Victims Among Pale People.

Enough disease germs enter the average human body every day to cause death if the healthful organism did not combat these germs and render them harmless.

Let the human system become run down, or debilitated, and this power of resistance to disease is weakened. Soon the disease germs get the upper hand, an acute sickness follows or the patient becomes a chronic invalid.

It is in the blood that the battle to maintain the health is fought. Keep the blood toned up, the bowels open and observe ordinary care as regards food and rest and you will avoid much sickness.

Debility is not a recognized disease but is a condition in which the sufferer cannot get a good night's sleep, wakes up all tired out, has no strength or ambition, is nervous, has a poor appetite, has trouble with the stomach, and is subject to headaches and backaches. It is most commonly met with in people who have to work hard, are confined indoors, eat improper food or have worries and grief.

The case of Mrs. M. V. McCaslin, of No. 202 South 27th Street, Lincoln, Neb., shows the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic for all run-down conditions of health. She says:

"I gave Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a trial for general debility from which I had been suffering about three years. I was thoroughly tired and worn out and had no ambition for anything. I became very weak and kept losing strength. My appetite was poor and I was nervous and had severe headaches.

"I needed a tonic treatment and tried several tonic remedies but none seemed to help me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I was soon much improved in health and able to get around and do my work. I took the pills until cured and am pleased to recommend them to anyone who is run down in health."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are for sale by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

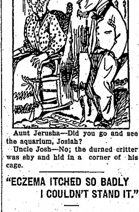
SEEING THE SIGHTS.



Aunt Jerusha—Did you go and see the aquarium, Josiah?

Uncle Josh—No; the durned critter was shy and hid in a corner of his cage.

"ECZEMA ITCHED SO BADLY I COULDN'T STAND IT."

"I suffered with eczema on my neck for about six months, beginning by little pimples breaking out. I kept scratching till the blood came. It kept getting worse, I couldn't sleep nights any more. It kept itching for about a month, then I went to a doctor and got some liquid to take. It seemed as if I was going to get better. The itching stopped for about three days, but when it started again, was even worse than before. The eczema itched so badly I couldn't stand it any more.

"I went to a doctor and he gave me some medicine, but didn't do any good. We have been having Cuticura Remedies in the house, so I decided to try them. I had been using Cuticura Soap, so I got me a box of Cuticura Ointment, and washed off the affected part with Cuticura Soap three times a day, and then put the Cuticura Ointment on. The first day I put it on, it relieved me of itching so I could sleep all that night. It took about a week, then I could see the scab come off. I kept the treatment up for three weeks, and my eczema was cured.

"My brother got his face burned with gun-powder, and he used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The people all thought he would have scars, but you can't see that he ever had his face burned. It was simply awful to look at before the Cuticura Remedies (Soap and Ointment) cured it." (Signed) Miss Elizabeth Gehrki, Forrest City, Ark., Oct. 16, 1910. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Women to Wear Mantillas in Church.

Women of St. Francis De Sales Cathedral will introduce into this country the custom of wearing in church the graceful lace headdress of the Spanish women in place of hats. The innovation was suggested by Rev. Dr. O'Connor to the members of the Altar society and at the general communion of the society the scarfs will be worn.

"The hats of today have become a monstrosity," says Rev. Dr. O'Connor, addressing the society.—Toledo correspondence Cleveland Leader.

For Constipation, Billiousness, Liver and Kidney Troubles, take Garfield Tea.

There are two things calculated to make a man's head swim—a merry-go-round and a merry widow.

Baking Economy.

By the use of perfect baking powder the housewife can derive as much economy as from any other article used in baking and cooking. In selecting a baking powder, therefore, care should be exercised to purchase one that retains its original strength and always remains the same, thus making the food sweet and wholesome and producing sufficient leavening gas to make the baking light.

Very little of this leavening gas is produced by the cheap baking powders, making it necessary to use double the quantity ordinarily required to secure good results.

You cannot experiment every time you make a cake or biscuits, or test the strength of your baking powder to find out how much of it you should use; yet with most baking powders you should do this, for they are put together so carelessly they are never uniform, the quality and strength varying with each can purchased.

Calumet Baking Powder is made of chemically pure ingredients of tested strength. Experienced chemists put it up. The proportions of the different materials remain always the same. Sealed in airtight cans Calumet Baking Powder does not alter in strength and is not affected by atmospheric changes.

In using Calumet you are bound to have uniform bread, cake or biscuits, as Calumet does not contain any cheap, useless or adulterating ingredients so commonly used to increase the weight. Further, it produces pure, wholesome food and is a baking powder of rare merit; therefore is recommended by leading physicians and chemists. It complies with all the pure food laws, both STATE and NATIONAL. The goods are moderate in price, and any lady purchasing Calumet from her grocer, if not satisfied with it can return it and have her money refunded.

LYNCH LAW.

Alkali Bill—Wall, kain't tell what you'd do here, but out my way we'd suspend the banker! Savvy?

The Reason.

"You mark all your compositions forte," said the friend.

"Yes," replied the composer. "They wouldn't have any vogue among people who live in flats if I had them played softly."

There is nothing heavenly about war,—or Dyspepsia. The world is outgrowing the first, and Garfield Tea will conquer Dyspepsia.

It might be well to remember that every man you deal with is looking for the best of it.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

CATCHING UP WITH COL. ROOSEVELT

Taft Trying to Have Supreme Court Decision Recalled.

CHIEF JUSTICE WITH HIM

Mimeograph Case Gives Special Point to Columbus Speech—Administration Wants Congress to Overthrow Court's Action.

On February 21 Colonel Roosevelt delivered before the constitutional convention of Ohio an oration on "A Charter of Democracy," in which he denounced the doctrine of the infallibility of the courts as a grave danger menacing American institutions, and advocated a simplified method for the recall of court decisions by the people. At once he was assailed by the representatives of Big Business and of Monopoly as an advocate of virtual anarchy and a living threat against the safety of property.

Of course, at the time he was speaking more particularly of state courts, but in less than three weeks—on March 11, to be exact—the Supreme Court of the United States handed down a decision, coupled with the dissent of three members, including that of the chief justice, vindicating Colonel Roosevelt's attitude in every particular. The Supreme Court caught up with Roosevelt. And the severe comments drawn upon himself from the advocates of special privilege ought now, in all justice, to be passed on to the Supreme Court and especially to Chief Justice White. For if ever a human being voiced a demand for the recall of a decision of the courts, Chief Justice White did so in his dissenting opinion.

The Case in Point.

The case was that of Sidney Henry et al vs. the A. B. Dick company. The Dick company owned the patent on a rotary mimeograph. It sold one of the machines to Miss Christina B. Fxou, of New York, under a stipulation that the ink, stencil paper and other supplies used with the invention must be bought from the Dick company. The Henry company sold Miss Skou ink for the mimeograph, that was not Dick ink, and the Dick company sued the Henry company and Miss Skou for infringement of the patent on the mimeograph. On March 11, with only seven members of the United States Supreme Court sitting, four of them, constituting a majority, decided the case and held that when the Henry company sold the non-Dick ink to Miss Skou and she used it, this constituted an infringement of the patent.

In a dissenting opinion, in which he was joined by Justices Hughes and Lamar, Chief Justice White denounced this extraordinary opinion in the most biting language. Stating that the patent did not cover the ink in any way, he demanded that the legislative department of the government amend the law so as to make it impossible for the precedent established by the decision to be maintained; and then he cited some of the weird and ridiculous lengths to which this decision, if it were maintained, would reasonably lead.

Views of Chief Justice.

"Under this decision it is now the law," declared the chief justice, "that when a patentee sells an engine, "that has a right to bring under the patent laws all coal or electrical energy used to work the machine, or even the lubricants employed in its operation. Take a patented carpenter's plane. The power now exists to confine the carpenter buying it to the use of lumber sawed from trees grown on the land of a particular person or sawed in a particular mill. The owner of a patented cooking device can now hold the buyer to use it in connection with no other food supply than that sold by the holder of the patent. The purchaser of a patented window frame may now be compelled to use no material in his house not bought from the holder of the patent on the frame. It is now established that by putting on a sewing machine, in addition to the notice of patent required by law, a notice called a license restriction, the right is acquired as against the whole world to control the sale of all the materials used in the operation of the machine by the person who has bought it. These illustrations are not imaginary.

"The ruling now made is in effect that the patentee has the power by contract to extend his patent rights so as to bring within the claims of his patent things which are not embraced therein, thus virtually legislating by causing the patent laws to cover subjects to which they could not reach, the result being to multiply monopolies at the will of an interested party."

The decision caused a laugh of derision throughout the national capital. The advocates of the doctrine of the infallibility of the courts were overcome with chagrin, while the supporters of Colonel Roosevelt inquired with sarcastic emphasis whether the people at the polls, so frequently denounced as a "mob" by the advocates of special privilege, could ever do anything worse.

Applying the Recall.

In the meantime, the attorney general and other administration opponents of Colonel Roosevelt fluttered about in flabbergasted haste to find some speedy way to recall the opinion; for if sustained this opinion will take the life out of some of the most spectacular trust busting suits the administration has in its incubator. The attorney general notified the defeated litigants that if they were game to try to secure a rehearing of the case before a full bench of the Supreme Court, the administration would be glad to lend all the assistance of which the Department of Justice was capable. At the same time the attorney general commenced the preparation of a bill for the amendment of the patent law, with the intention of setting congress loose at the Supreme Court. Other steps for the recall of the decision were inaugurated by the commissioner of patents, who also began to work on a bill to be handed to congress.

While this was going on in the executive end of the government, the scene on Capitol Hill was equally lively. Apparently every legislator in congress wanted a copy of the decision, some for the purpose of enjoying themselves and others to study it in the search for a way to recall it. The supply of copies was only normal and was soon exhausted, but the demand was so insistent that the court officials bowed to popular clamor, at the risk of being charged with having been swayed by the mob, and had an additional supply printed.

This is the second piece of sensational legislation perpetrated by the United States Supreme Court within a few months, but this later instance could not better serve as an endorsement of Colonel Roosevelt's plea for the recall of court decisions if it had beed made to order for that purpose.

The Supreme Court has indeed caught up with Colonel Roosevelt.

To a Poet.

To learn poetry "for recreation" is doubtless a means of cultivating a knowledge of literature; but schoolboys sometimes regard the authors of poems learned as task-masters and personal enemies. This view is amusingly expressed in a letter found among the papers of the venerable German poet Geibel. It was written to him by some schoolboys of Lubeck, and signed, "Karl Beckmann, II. Klasse."

After stating that two boys had been flogged because they could not learn Herr Geibel's "Hope of Spring," the letter reads:

"We suppose that you did not think of such things when you wrote the poem. The Herr Lehrer says it is a very beautiful poem; but there are so many beautiful poems, and we are obliged to learn them. Therefore we beg and entreat you, esteemed Herr Geibel, make no more beautiful poems. And to make it worse we have to learn the biography of every poet, what year he was born in, and what year he died in. We write to you because you are the only poet still living, and we wish you a very long life."—The Sunday Magazine.

NEWS FROM 'ROUND THE COUNTRY

Items of More Than Passing Notice From Elsewhere Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

James J. Hill will make a speech at Bemidji about April 20th.

Those little wagons still continue as a onery nuisence at Thief River Falls, according to the Times.

The Searchlight is the name of a new publication by William Ellis, published at Grayslake, Ill., which terms itself "A political miscellany in opposition to insurgency".

About every week some one of the Thief River Falls papers are hunting up some popular opponent to congressman Steenerson, which looks queer to us, in veiw of the fact that he now has a bill before congress for an appropriation for a federal building at that place, something that they are entitled to, and we hope to see them get it.—Sunbeam.

The preliminary hearing of George Cyr, who, on March 14 shot and killed Paul Fournier, in Cyr's home, near Quiring, was postponed until Tuesday of this week.

The fishing industry on the Red Lake river is liable to take a vacation this year, according to the Sunbeam.

When mother and the youngsters ask father to go with them for a little picnic party, there is one kind of 'em who says this: What's the use of going away for a picnic. Throw the dining room table out and spread the dinner on the floor, then let all the flies in, throw some dust on the sandwiches, sprinkle a few ants in the water, turn the hose on ourselves to remind us of the rain which invariably comes when we are farthest from shelter and cap it off by crowding in the pantry and hanging to the shelves for the usual time it takes to ride home. Nix on the picnic for me!"

Basket Social and Dance

A basket social and dance will be given at the City Hall tomorrow (Saturday) night for the benefit of the base ball team. The proceeds from the dance and social will go towards buying suits and other paraphernalia and the boys intend to have everything to complete a first class ball team, which they intend to have this year. If you injoy a "larruping" good time do not forget to attend the one in store for you tomorrow night and if you are a lover of the National game you will appreciate what your attendance will mean in helping the good cause along.

Folder corn on the Experiment Farm in 1911 yielded from ten to fifteen tons of green folder per acre. One bushel of seed was used for seed for three acres. This spring Minnesota grown seed corn is very high priced, but varieties grown farther south may be used for folder corn, and this seed may be purchased from the large seed houses at from $1.50 to $2.50 per bushell.

Two young men from Oklee, whose names we are unable to learn, were arrested Wednesday and on Thursday were brought to Red Lake Falls to stand trial. Assult and battery was the charge and was preferred against them by Dan Carrol, of this place. On visiting one of the local saloons Mr. Carrol asserts that he was attacked by the two men referred to without any known motive for the assult. At the trial in Red Lake Falls they were fined about $23 apiece.

Don Flory, who is employed as linotype operator on the Duluth Herald staff, arrived here Monday evening, and on Tuesday morning went out to the J. J. Donahue home northeast of town. Mr. Flory stated that he may give up his trade and go to farming later and came here for the purpose of looking over this section with a view of either buying land or taking a homestead if he finds anything in this line to suit him. Mr. Flory appears much elated over what he has so far seen in this section. He predicts that within a short time homesteads and cheap lands will be a thing of the past.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Johnson returned to Gonvick the first of the week after a visit at the Henry Rose home. Mr. Johnson returned recently from a trip to Canada and during his absence Mrs. Johnson has been visiting relatives here.

A birthday party was held at the S. J. Rice home last Friday afternoon in honor of their oldest son, Clarence, who celebrated his ninth birthday on that day. Many of his little boy and girl friends were present and enjoyed the day in playing various games. Refreshments of ice cream and sweets were served to the little ones.

Count the local items of late arrivals who have purchased land in this vicinity, in this week's issue and it will give you an idea of the amount of land that have changed hands within the past year. These are, however, only a summery of the arrivals within the past week, and only a comparative few of these at that.

The Plummer brass band gave their first open air concert last Wednesday evening in front of the city hall. In support of the band it may be truthfully said that the boys are doing admirably well for the length of time the organization has been in existance and Director Ben Lonson desirves a lot of credit for the skillful manner in whice he has handled the band.

The biggest land boom in the history of this part of the state is on right at the present time if we are to judge conditions in other parts of this section by what they are here. Nary a day passes unless a number of people stop of here for the purpose of looking over lands in this vicinity with a view of buying a farm. During the last two weeks there has been an increasing stream stopping off here; all for the purpose of either looking for land or to make arrangements to move unto their lands lately acquired possession of.

"The time to be jolly is when every thing is going wrong and you are way down in the mouth with the blues. That is a mighty nice thing to preach; but almighty hard to practice. How is a fellow to be jolly when he gets out of bed on a cold morning, steps on a tack, burns his fingers while lighting the kitchen fire, finds his pet dog poisoned, goes down to business and finds two sight drafts to pay and no money in sight, gets a letter from his mother-in-law informing him that she is sick and so on through the day. Show us the fellow who wouldn't wear the corners of his mouth in curl papers under those circumstances.

Parties having occasion to tie their horses near our sanctum would confer an everlasting favor upon us if they would kindly refrain from tying their horses to our door knob or leaving their wagons to blockade the main entrance to our office. While we are not so stringent in the enforcement of the former we positively will not stand for the latter, as this is shutting off the only retreat for anyone with a dollar or two to spend to give to us on subscription, and we need those little dollars in our business. We are not disposed to kicks, either, but it 'pears to us their is plenty of room in the village and surrounding country without crowding so close to our little palace, and where the fertilizer could be used to a better advantage, too.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

Something the Matter, Anyhow.

Little Harold lives in Broad Ripple. His mother got him ready for bed one cold night, and to be sure he would be warm enough during the night she took extra precautions, relates the Indianapolis News. After she had put on his little fuzzy pajamas she tucked him carefully in between the wool blankets. Then, to make doubly sure, she got a hot water bottle for him—and the youngster was apparently as snug as could be, with only his little nose sticking out from beneath the covers.

When his mother had finished the tucking-in job she turned down the light. Soon the entire family was in bed. But Harold is like most youngsters. He loves his mother, and wishes lots of attention. So in his child mind he figured out a way to get her to his bed.

"Mamma," he wailed, "I'm cold!"

"Nonsense, son!" replied his mother, and she never made a move to go to his rescue.

The little boy tried the opposite.

"Well, I'm too hot, then!" he yelled.

Convenient Code.

Frank I. Cobb used to be a reporter in Detroit, and knew intimately a former governor of the state of Michigan, who was renowned, among other things, for his ability as a free-hand swearer.

One night Cobb was dining with the ex-governor and him family. A messenger came in to tell the host that one of his pet political schemes had just been defeated through the bungling of a lieutenant. The old man ripped out a string of dark blue ones.

"Now, pa," said his wife, "you promised me you would quit cursing."

"Marie," said the ex-governor, "I'm not cussing—this is just the way I talk!"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Method With Disadvantages.

"Will you make any rear platform speeches next summer?"

"I don't know," replied the candidate. "It's kind of embarrassing to have an engineer blow the whistle, ring the bell and pull out just as you get to the grand climax on which you relied for applause."

Saving His Money.

Gathered Smiles

ROUGH ON THE RABBIT.

The conjurer in the village school room had invited any gentleman from the audience to step up on the platform, and a rustic in a velveteen coat responded.

"Now, sir," said the professor, "I suppose you consider it a matter of impossibility for me to make that rabbit in the box on the table pass into your coat-tail pocket?"

"I dunno about impossible," came the reply, "but I wouldn't do it if I was you, sir."

"Oh, you'll be in no danger, I can assure you," smiled the sleight-of-hand man, airily.

"I worn't thinkin' about myself," the rustic answered. "I were studyin' the rabbit. I've got a couple o' ferrets in that there pocket."

Domestic Troubles.

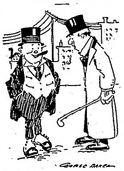
Husband—What's the matter, dear? Why do you look so worried?

Wife—Oh, I've just got everything all ready for Mrs. Meatleigh's visit. I've done up all the curtains and pillow shams and bureau covers and centerpieces, and they're all spick and span.

Husband—Well, if everything is in such apple pie order, why look so disconsolate about it?

Wife (bursting into tears)—Oh, I just know, as soon as she sees them, she'll know I cleaned everything all up because she was coming.—Judge.

A CASE IN POINT.



De Quiz—Do you believe in palmistry?

De Whiz—Yes; to some extent.

De Quiz—Do you think the hands can indicate that a man is about to acquire wealth?

De Whiz—I do in the case of pickpockets.

Transposed.

Leap Year.

A local youth is having trouble with his girl.

"Why won't you marry me?" he demanded the other day.

"I'll marry you, but not until next year."

"Why the delay?"

"I'm not going to have it said that I did the proposing."

Poor Proof.

"It's astonishing how much more important women are than men."

"But are they?"

"Of course. My wife wouldn't wait a half minute to let me speak to some girls I once knew."

"But she'd stand up for three mortal hours while a dressmaker fitted her."

Their Worth.

The girl had demanded her letters back and he was shipping them by express.

"Valuation?" said the clerk.

"What's that?"

"Valuation. What are the contents of this package worth?"

"Put it at 30 cents," answered the young fellow with a scowl.

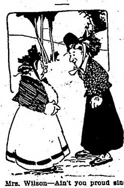
Misnomers.

"Funny about those German baths, isn't it?"

"What's funny?"

"They call them all 'bad,' and then expect them to make good."

SERIOUS OBJECTION.



Mrs. Wilson—Ain't you proud since your daughter's engaged to that French nobleman?

Mrs. Bilson—No; I can't pronounce his name.

A Flustered Bird.

The dove of peace
Men like to boost,
But won't give her
A place to roost.

Well Divided.

Two brothers, each of whom is nearly six feet and a half tall, were one day introduced by an acquaintance to a young lady. As she sat gazing up at the pair of giants in wonder and awe, she exclaimed:

"Great heavens! Suppose there had been only one of you!"

A Matter of Prudence.

"Do you believe that propinquity can develop sentimental tendencies?"

"No, ma'am; not if it's took in time."

Always a Way.

"I am beginning to fear," said Rev. Mr. Goodman, "that I may be injecting too much humor into my sermons. The people may fall into the habit of neglecting to take me seriously."

"Oh, don't worry about that, dear," his wife replied. "Whenever you begin to notice that they are not taking you seriously just ask them to raise your salary."

A Character Test.

"When I was a young man I was very fond of music," remarked Mr. Cumrox. "My singing laid the foundation of my fortune."

"You sang so well?"

"No, the captain of industry who started me in life said that anybody who would get up before folks and sing as I did had marvelous nerve and indomitable will power."

Wish Realized.

While the mercury was snuggling close to the zero mark the charter member came into the Curbstone club headquarters.

"Where's the Ancient Carpenter?" he asked.

"Oh, he hasn't been here," replied the Prominent Plumber, "since that evening when he was wishing for another good old-fashioned winter."

Facilities to Economize.

"Our forefathers lived much more simply than we did," said the man who takes everything seriously. "They did not hesitate to economize."

"Yes, but look at the room they had to economize in. You couldn't expect us to churn in a flat or keep chickens and a garden on the fire escape, could you?"

Between Lawyers.

"I won't defend a man whom I believe to be guilty."

"Now, my boy," said the older lawyer, "you mustn't set your judgment up against that of the majority. I have defended plenty of men whom I believed to be guilty, but the jury decided otherwise."

Not Competent to Speak.

"Pa, do you know anything about the Thirty Years' war?"

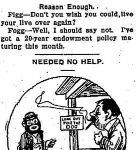
"No, son. Your mother and I have only been married 15 years."

Reason Enough.

Figg—Don't you wish you could live your live over again?

Fogg—Well, I should say not. I've got a 20-year endowment policy maturing this month.

NEEDED NO HELP.



LOOK OUT FOR THE DOG

Tatters—Dat's a funny sign yer got up dere, boss.

Housekeeper—What? "Look out for the Dog?"

Tatters—Yes; dat dog's big enough and ugly enough ter look out for hisself.

Or Very Tough.

Who slips upon
An icy pave
And doesn't swear,
Is very brave.

Where Algernon Lost.

"No," said the disconsolate girl. "I am sure Algernon does not love me. His mind is not on me as it should be."

"How do you know?"

"I played bridge at the same table with him and he could remember what the trump was all the time."

Distribution of Effort.

"I put a lot of work on that speech of mine," said the new member of congress.

"Of course you did," replied the veteran. "After you have been here a while you'll learn to put less work on your original speech and save yourself for the explanations."

Changing Doctors.

"What you need, madam, is oxygen. Come every afternoon for your inhalations. They'll cost you $4 each."

"I knew that the other doctor didn't understand my case," declared the fashionable patient. "He told me all I needed was plain fresh air."

She Was Forgiven.

Authoress—Good gracious, what a state this place is in! You have been reading instead of doing your work.

Servant—I have been reading your last poem, mum, and it so enthralled me I forgot everything else.—Fliegende Blaetter.

Society Note.

"It seems such an appropriate match—that of Miss Packenham and young Sugarbeet."

"Yes. Their fathers were indicted by the same grand jury, I believe."

Sympathy for the Parrot.

Talkative and Abusive Old Lady (complaining of a recently bought parrot)—And when I talk to that parrot he says some dreadful swear words.

Dealer—I don't blame, 'im, ma'am, the poor bird is only 'uman.—Everybody's Weekly.

A Temperance Note.

"They can never do any effective temperance work in Berlin."

"Why not?"

"Because it is a city which is always on the Spree."

BEST DEFENCE AGAINST DISEASE

Is a Supply of Rich, Red Blood and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Are the Tonic to Use When the Blood Is Thin and Weak.

Thin, impure blood is an invitation to sickness. The blood is at work, day and night, to maintain the health and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defense against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of the blood or one or more of its constituents may be lacking. Its surest symptom is pallor. Anaemia is particularly common in young girls from 14 to 17 years of age. It is not confined to them for it is this same lack of blood that prevents full recovery after the grip, fevers, malaria and operations and is present in old age and in persons who have been under an unusual physical or mental strain.

Mrs. Morgan Bowen, of No. 2631 Fillmore street, N. E., Minneapolis, Minn., says:

"When I was 15 years old I went into a decline and my parents feared I was going into consumption. I was sick for a year and was not able to do much of anything. The sickness came on me gradually. I was pale and seemed to lose my strength. I was attending school at Winona at the time and became so nervous that I had to give up my studies. My parents were alarmed about my condition as there had been consumption in the family.

"A friend advised my mother to give me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and before I used them long I was much improved. I gave the pills a thorough trial and was fully restored to health. My health has been good since, but I always keep Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the house and take them when I feel I need a tonic."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened system has made hundreds of cures in the most severe disorders.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People should be used in anaemia, chlorosis or green sickness, sick headache, nervousness and for a general run-down condition of the health.

Send for free booklet, "Diseases of the Blood."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes, $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

Itched So He Could Not Sleep

"On July 27, 1909, we left Boston for a trip to England and Ireland, taking baby with us. After being in Ireland a few days a nasty rash came out all over his body. We took him to a doctor who gave us medicine for him. The trouble started in the form of a rash and was all over baby's body, head and face, at different times. It irritated, and he would scratch it with all his might. The consequence was it developed into sores, and we were afraid it would leave nasty scars on his face.

"When we reached England we took baby to another doctor, who said his condition was due to change of food and climate, and gave more medicine. The rash got no better, and it used to itch and burn at night so bad that the child could not sleep. He was completely covered with it at different times. It was at this time that my mother advised us to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment for about nine months the places disappeared. There are not any scars, or other kind of disfigurement, and baby is completely cured by the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. We have no further trouble with baby's skin. Nothing stopped the itching, and allowed baby to sleep but Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 29 Burrell St., Roxbury, Mass., March 12, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

His Number.

He gazed tenderly into her eyes as she spoke.

"Life," she murmured dreamily, "is after all, nothing but a romance in which we are characters, moving hither and yon as the supreme author of our being directs."

"And in the novel of your life," said he, tenderly, "where do I come in?"

"You?" she answered with a smile. "Oh, you are—let me see—one, two, three—you are Chap Seventeen."—Harper's Weekly.

ALL KINDS OF SALADS

WELCOME SEASON FOR THESE DELICACIES AT HAND.

How the Egg, Natural Accompaniment of Spring and Summer Dish, Should Be Prepared and Arranged—To Shred Lettuce.

Hard Boiled Eggs.—Egg salads will be in demand soon and they afford an opportunity for the cook to display her skill in arranging and garnishing. The eggs must be hard boiled and this is accomplished best by putting them into cold water, bringing it to the boiling point and allowing it to simmer for 25 minutes. Drop the eggs into cold water, then remove the shells and cut in fancy shapes.

Daisy Egg Salad.—One way to make an attractive salad is to cut the eggs in halves lengthwise, take out the yolks and cut the whites into eighths in long strips. Lay round on a bed of shredded lettuce like the petals of a daisy and sift the yolk through a gravy strainer into a heap in the center. A second method is to cut in halves across the smaller part and use each half of the yolk for a center. Cut the half of the white into eighths which will have one pointed end and form into petals around the center; each egg will make two "daisies."

Water Lily Egg Salad.—For a cup use lettuce leaves on a plate and lay the long strips cut by the first plan in so that they will curve upward and fill the center with sifted yolk; this closely resembles a water lily.

Notched Egg Cup Salad.—For a change cut the smaller diameter of the egg round in a zigzag line with a small pointed kitchen knife and separate the halves. Cut a tiny slice from the small end and set upright among the lettuce leaves.

To Shred Lettuce.—To shred lettuce use only the coarser leaves, reserving the cup-shaped for the edge of the salad. Roll these large leaves tightly, then slice from one end with a sharp knife and shape up loosely. It is an economical and appetizing way to use the outer leaves, which are fresh and green and yet not as delicate as the heart leaves.—Alice E. Whitaker.

Deviled Eggs.—Cut hard boiled eggs in two, mash yolks with paprika, mustard, celery salt, butter and Worcestershire sauce until it has become a thick, moist paste; fill this moisture in the egg white, press the two firmly together and set in a cool place until wanted. Nice for the lunch basket.

Baked Omelet.—One tablespoon flour, one tablespoon hot butter, one cup hot milk, half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon pepper, six beaten eggs, one teaspoon baking powder. Stir the flour into the butter and add gradually the milk, salt, pepper. Cool slightly and add the well beaten yolks of the eggs, then the beaten whites and one teaspoon baking powder. Bake in moderate oven.

Rye Muffins.—Measure two cups of rye meal which has been sifted and one cup of sifted pastry flour. Sift the flour and meal with five level teaspoons of sugar and one level teaspoon of salt. Beat one egg, add one and one-quarter cups of milk. Mix with the dry materials and pour into a buttered pan and bake in a sheet. Cut with a hot knife into squares, or bake in buttered hot gem pans. Use rye meal and not rye flour, which is different, and always sift the meal before measuring.

Bread Soup.

Take stale bread (rye, white or any kind of stale bread will do); cover the bread with boiling water, let boil a few minutes; then put through a coarse sieve. If the mixture is too thick add more boiling water, put back on stove; add a stick of cinnamon, let all simmer for about 10 minutes; add sugar to taste. Now allow the yolks of three eggs to a quart of soup and pour over them gradually the boiling soup, stirring all the time; add the grated rind and juice of a lemon. Try it for the children and I am sure they will like it. Good for all, old and young.

Pineapple Sherbet.

For one gallon sherbet grate two two pineapples or else one can of pineapple the size of a corn can. Add the juice of one lemon, 1½ pints of sugar and sufficient water to make a gallon. Leave stand in freezer until thoroughly chilled. Then turn the freezer every few minutes. When about frozen remove stirrer from can and leave stand for one hour. This is fine.

Washing Glass.

Have a wooden bowl for washing glass if possible, and keep it specially for the purpose, for it is impossible to polish glass if there be any trace of grease in the water used for it, says the Minneapolis Tribune. Some people like to use hot water and some use cold for washing glass. Good effects may be obtained with either if the polishing be done carefully with nice, dry, soft towels.

Stewed Kidneys.

Prepare kidneys as usual, cut up in small pieces; add some sliced tomatoes, a few mushrooms; pepper and salt to taste, a tablespoon of water; also one of cherry wine; tablespoon of flour; teaspoon worcestershire sauce; put in well buttered bag, fold and fasten bag and cook for ten minutes in a hot oven.

Curtain Rings.

Sew large battenberg rings on sash curtains to run the brass rods through, instead of putting it through the hem of the cutain, advises the New Era. These rings will keep the muslin from wearing out quickly, and may be left on the curtains while they are in the wash.

Spiced Chocolate.

Put into a saucepan two cups of brown sugar, one-half cup of grated chocolate, a half cup of water, a teaspoonful of butter and cinnamon to taste. Cook until brittle when dropped into cold water, then pour into buttered pans.

THE PEEVISH CHILD NEEDS TREATMENT

When a child sulks drowsily, or is fretful, it is usually due to some slight disorder of the digestive organs, and a mild laxative is very often all that is necessary to restore cheerfulness and buoyancy of spirits.

In cases where the use of a gentle, effective laxative stimulant is indicated, many of the best physicians are now prescribing Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This preparation is admittedly the perfect laxative, being mild, yet positive in its action on the bowels, and far preferable to violent cathartics and purgative waters. It is very pleasant to the taste and is an ideal remedy to regulate and strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. Its easy, natural action makes it especially desirable in the case of children, a dose at bed-time being sure to have the desired result next morning, with no attendant unpleasantness or discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried this splendid remedy, write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for a sample. He will be very glad to send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Extra Inducement.

Cohen, the clothier, followed a customer out to his buggy.

"Dot's a pretty fine horse you are driving," he commented approvingly.

"Yes, he's a good one."

"How much would you sell him for?"

"Seventy-five dollars."

"Mein Gott! is he silk lined?"—Everybody's.

BACKACHE IS DISCOURAGING

Until You Get After The Cause

Nothing more discouraging than a constant backache. Lame when you awake. Pains pierce you when you bend or lift. It's hard to work, or to rest.

You sleep poorly and next day is the same old story.

That backache indicates bad kidneys and calls for some good kidney remedy.

None so well recommended as Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is convincing proof.

As a last resort I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since then I have gained back my lost weight and feel wonderfully improved."

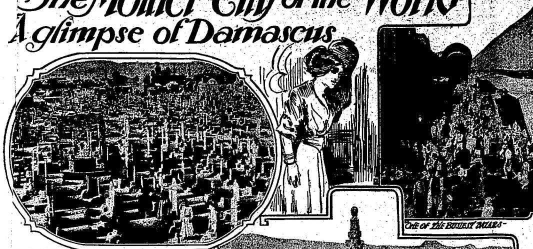
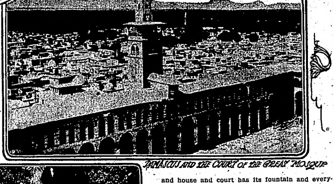
The Mother City of the World
A glimpse of Damascus



THE CEMETERY OF THE MAIDAN AT DAMASCUS

ONE OF THE BUSIEST BAZARS



DAMASCUS AND THE COURT OF THE GREAT MOSQUE

COURT AND GUEST CHAMBER OF A JEWISH HOME IN DAMASCUS

"GO BACK," wrote the late Mark Twain, "as far as you will into the vague past, there is always a Damascus. To her years are only moments, decades only flitting trifles of time; she measures time not by days, months, and years, but by the empires she has seen rise and prosper and then crumble into ruin. She is a type of immortality."

Indeed Damascus is the oldest of cities and for that reason is often referred to as the mother city of the world. When Abraham crossed the desert from Haran, for thousand years ago, Damascus was already stnding on the banks of the Abana, in Syria, and no one knows how long it stood there before that time, for its origin is lost in mists of antiquity. 'Babylon is a heap in the desert and Tyre a ruin on the shore," but Damascus still remains. Rome has been called the Eternal City, but Damascus is twice as old as Rome. Its history runs back to the beginning of the world and bids fair to go on to its end.

It has lived through all these long centuries and no historian has yet had the opportunity to write its decline and fall. This is remarkable when it is remembered that not less than twelve times it has been pillaged and burned, yet it has always arisen with new beauty from its ashes. It has been ruled by Syrians, Persians, Greeks, Romans and Turks and it has lived and flourished under them all.

Damascus is now and has always been a rich and prosperous city. It was so in Bible times. Isaiah writes of the "riches of Damascus" and the traveler today may see long trains of camels laden with all kinds of merchandise, leaving Damascus going down to Egypt or out to Beirout, where they are shipped to other shores. Its bazars are the most famous in the world. These bazars are a series of shops for the sale of articles and in some cases for the manufacture of them. Each bazar is devoted to a particular class of goods. They are famous for their treasures of silk, carpets, saddles, silver and gold ornaments, slippers, sword blades, rare woods and almost everything required in the general life of the east. People of many races, men and women in all picturesque costumes, strings of camels, donkeys, with cradle saddles, Arabian horses, dig through the streets. Then Damuscus is destined to play an important part in the history of the east. It is the center of a network of railroads. It already boasts of three railroad stations and when the Bagdad line has advanced to the Euphrates, as it is expected to do early this year, Damascus will be in railroad communication with Constantinople and Europe, as well as with Palestine, Arabia and eventually Persia. Then Damascus was the first city in the Bible lands to have electric trams and electric light.

It is certainly one of the most beautiful cities in its situation. Imagine a magnificent plain, well watered, and fertile in the midst of a desert, covering an area of more than 30 miles in circumference, surrounded on nearly all sides by high hills—imagine this vast plain in a high state of cultivation, one vast garden, of fruit trees of almost every species, fields of grain, nearly every variety of flowers and the ever present murmur of running waters. Situated about the middle of this plain and buried in this forest of grass, grain and trees and sparkling streams, a city of 150,000 people, with its hundreds of white minarets, gilded domes and crowned bazaara, that is Damascus, beautiful indeed for situation.

It undoubtedly owes its beauty, vitality and wealth to the River Abana, which rises in the Lebanons some twenty miles away. Before it reaches Damascus it is divided into six artificial channels, through the heart of the city. Pipes are led from it to every part, so that every mosque and house and court has its fountain and everywhere you go amid groves or gardens or public resorts or retired nooks, you may see and hear the murmur of the swiftly flowing and sparkling streams and this abundance of clear, cold water is one of the charms of the city. This is the river of which Naaman spoke with such pride, when he said: "Are not the Abana and Pharpar rivers of Damascus better than all the waters of Israel?" and he was right so far as beauty and usefulness are concerned.

Damascus is mentioned many times in the Bible, both in the Old and the New Testament. In the latter it comes before us in connection with the conversion of St. Paul. Tradition has localized every event connected with the apostle. Outside, on the Damascus road, five miles from the city, is pointed out the place where St. Paul had the vision which so changed the course of his life. There is the gate still standing where he entered the Roman road into the city. This street is today the most principal, being about a mile long, beginning at one end of the city and running right across it from east to west. Damascus is a city of mosques, baths and fountains. Climb on to the roof of any dwelling and you are in a sea of tall minarets, while all around you are rows of what looks like saucers turned upside down. These are the Arab baths. There are 250 mosques in the city, the most important being the great Mosque, great in size and great reputation. The ground upon which it stands has a great history. On this spot stood the church which was erected by Constantine, dedicated to John the Baptist. Then, when the city fell into the hands of the Turks, they converted it into a mosque, obliterating everything that had a trace of Christianity. They closed the door by which the Christians entered and closed up other buildings in front of it.

Some few years ago, however, the Great Mosque, to the whole regret of the civilized world, was burned down in a single day. Strange to say, the old door escaped the fire and no one was more surprised than the moslems to read over its portal these words from the Psalms: "Thy kingdom O Christ is a kingdom of all ages and thy dominion endureth throughout all generations."

The mosque was rebuilt, but the moslems, being superstitious, feared to tamper with the old door and its sacred inscription and so left it and it can be seen to this day, a reminder that Mohammedan rule has not always been supreme in the Mother City of the World.

Midshipmen Now and Then

Something more than a hundred years ago the midshipman was, indeed, the "midshipmite" that he was popularly called, for he was but a mite of a lad, usually receiving his appointment before he reached his teens. Admirals Farragut and Porter were midshipmen, afloat and in pitched battles, at twelve years of age, and Goldborough was appointed when only seven years old. Nowadays, however, the midshipman is quite a different person. He cannot enter the naval academy under fifteen, and is therefore, when on a regular cruising ship, after completing his four years' academic course, usually a well-developed man, physically mature and athletic, and with a trained mind. He is far better equipped mentally than the lieutenants and many of the captains of even seventy years ago.

The old-time middies were mere school boys. All the warships of any size carried in their regular complements a schoolmaster, whose duty it was to give the lads as liberal an education as possible in the odd periods between strictly professional duties. This rating of schoolmaster was abolished, in fact, only about twenty years ago; but after the establishment of the naval academy, in 1841, these officials devoted their energies to the sailor apprentices only, the enlisted boys of the forecastle. Even these now obtain their education on shore.

There is a tradition that the three brass buttons the midshipman wears on the sleeve of his full dress coat during his four years at Annapolis originated a century or more ago, when their presence was needed to discourage the youngsters from brushing their noses with their sleeves. This is probably a base slander, modern research indicating that the buttons are relics of the days when there was a cuff-flap on the sleeve.

At all events, the extreme youth of the midshipmite used to be his most conspicuous characteristic. Instead of the full-sized regulation officer's sword that he now carries, he wore a little straight-bladed dirk about a foot long. He was to a large extent a messenger for carrying orders about the ship, but he also took charge of boats and commanded men, despite his youth. He was frequently placed in charge of a prize captured in war, taking her into port, and not infrequently suppressing mutinies among the prisoners on board. Farragut was a prize-master at the age of twelve, and got his prize safely in.

The title "midshipman" is an ancient one. He is above the seamen and the petty officers forward, and below the commissioned officers in the wardroom aft—hence "midship-man." There was formerly a higher grade called passed midshipman, but this was abolished before the Civil war. Then, about forty years ago, the grade was restored, but called midshipman, the former midshipman being designated as a cadet-midshipman. In 1882 the title of the latter was changed to naval cadet, which it still remains, and the midshipmen were merged with the ensigns. Accordingly, the time-honored title of midshipman no longer exists officially in the United States navy.

While officially a naval cadet, that young officer is still regarded, and often referred to verbally, as a midshipman, for he is the same creature as of old, as far as his duties go. But by the side of his earlier prototype the twentieth century "middy" is a savant. Trigonometry was about as high up in mathematics as the old-timer ever went. The twentieth century lad goes far beyond. He goes through analytical geometry of three dimensions, differential and integral calculus, applied mechanics.

Gunnery a hundred years ago was little more than loading, aiming and firing at short ranges. It now involves metallurgy, theory of the combustion of powder gases, stress and strain, mechanical engineering, manufacture and preservation of complex explosives, and other abstruse subjects, in all of which the midshipman of the present day must be proficient.

Midshipmen were conspicuous in all our early wars, notably those with the Barbary States, with the West Indian pirates and with the British in 1812. They were equally conspicuous during our conflicts with the Spanish and Filipinos. Midshipmen, naval cadets, had charge of the extremely hazardous picket duty in the Santiago blockade, close under the Spanish batteries, and often under musketry fire from shore. Cadet Powell ran his open launch right into the harbor of Santiago, after the Merrimac, remained all night under the menacing guns of the inner batteries, and steamed out again under their fire in the morning.

In One Ton of Coal.

From one ton of ordinary gas coal may be produced 1,500 pounds of coke, 20 gallons of ammonia water and 140 pounds of coal tar. By distillation the coal tar will yield 69.6 pounds of pitch, 17 pounds of creosote, 14 pounds of heavy oils, 9.5 pounds of naphtha yellow, 6.3 pounds of naphthaline, 4.75 pounds naphthol, 2.25 pounds alazarin, 2.4 pounds solvent naphtha, 1.5 pounds phenol, 1.2 pounds aurine, 1.1 pounds benzine, 1.1 pounds analine, 0.77 of a pound toluidine, 0.46 of a pound anthracite and 0.9 of a pound toluene. From the latter is obtained the substance known as saccharin, which is 230 times as sweet as the best cane sugar, one part of it giving a very sweet taste to 1,000 parts of water.

If a ton of coal be used in this way there is a bigger profit in it than if it be sold for burning in a range.

In the Haunts of the Osprey

The most wonderful colony of ospreys in North America, and probably in the world, is on Gardiner's island, New York, where there are not less than 200 nests. The birds apparently mate for life and certainly have a deep attachment for their home. Undoubtedly the same pair returns year after year to the same abode, and each spring the hawks repair the nest or increase the size of it by adding more sticks and debris, until, when it is eight or a dozen years old, it is tremendously bulky and weighs upward of half a ton. As the nest ages, the branches on which it rests seem gradually to die, perhaps from lack of ventilation due to the decaying materials next the bark, and occasionally a limb or a whole treetop gives way and the entire mass of sticks, representing the labor of seasons, crashes to the ground. It would be hard to imagine a more pathetic spectacle in birddom than a pair of faithful ospreys, after hundreds of miles of travel, arriving at the home tree, only to discover that, during their absence of five months, the elements had dislodged the cherished dwelling and hurled it and its support to earth.

Picture Fiends.

According to the Motion Picture Story Magazine, 15,000,000 persons attend the moving picture theaters every day. There are 13,000 theaters in this country in which motion pictures are displayed, exclusive of halls, churches and clubs, where they are displayed occasionally. More than $100,000,000 is invested in the motion picture industry in the United States. There are about 3,500,000 motion picture enthusiasts known as "fans," who are just as interested in the personalities of the photo players as the patrons of the regular drama are of the legitimate actors.

DEVELOPMENT ASS'N

SOUTH STATE BOOSTERS TO FOLLOW LEAD OF THEIR NORTHERN NEIGHBORS.

31 COUNTIES PARTICIPATE

T. G. Bornaille, of Tracy, Elected President.—Next Meeting Will Be Held In June In St. St. Peter.

Mankato.—The Southern Minnesota Better Development association was organized by representatives of forty cities and towns. According to the recommendations of the committee on organization, as adopted by the convention, the association will embrace thirty-one counties across the state south of the Minnesota river up to Dakota county. Neither Ramsey nor Hennepin is included in the number.

Officers were elected as follows: President T. G. Bonnallie, Tracy; first vice president, George R. Thompson, Chatfield; second vice president, Alson Blodgett, Jr., Faribault; secretary, Professor C. E. Ball, North Mankato; treasurer, J. B. Ludlow, Rushmore.

The association voted to meet twice a year and accepted the invitation of representatives from St. Peter to hold the next meeting, which will be in June.

The following counties are eligible to membership:

Rock, Pipestone, Lincoln, Lyon, Murray, Nobles, Jackson, Cottonwood, Redwood, Martin, Watonwan, Brown, Faribault, Blue Earth, Nicollet, Freeborn, Waseca, LeSueur, Steele, Rice, Mower, Dodge, Goodhue, Fillmore, Olmsted, Wabasha, Houston, Winona, Sibley, Scott and Yellow Medicine.

T. G. Bonnallie, the president-elect, is mayor of Tracy and president of the Tracy Commercial club; George R. Thompson is secretary of the Chatfield Commercial club; Alson Blodgett, Jr., is mayor of Faribault, and Professor Ball is a teacher in the Mankato Commercial college and president of the North Mankato Commercial club.

The delegates were taken for an automobile ride by members of the Mankato Commercial club and shown some of the graveled roads, which six years ago were the worst in the county.

H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, made an address to the delegates in the afternoon in which he urged the necessity of the southern part of the state waking up and doing some of the same sort of advertising which is attracting settlers to Montana, Canada and the western states. He frankly told the delegates that this part of the state was far behind the times.

H. E. Hance of Mankato moved that it be the sense of the association that the legislature should appropriate enough money to handle the department on a proper basis, whether it took $100,000 or some other sum. This was carried without dissent.

Mr. Palmer on good roads, said it had been estimated that bad roads in Minnesota alone cost the farmers from $4,000,000 to $8,000,000 a year.

Senator C. A. Johnson of St. Peter urged that the land be cultivated better, instead of attempting to cover too much ground as now.

Furlong Optimistic.

J. J. Furlong of Austin told "what southern Minnesota farmers can do." He was optimistic and said, "We can advance agricultural interests, but never can perfect them." He said he was glad to see this movement, which was intended for the good of all Minnesota.

E. Krueger, president of the Tracy Farmers' club, urged that farmers form clubs and that these clubs and commercial clubs work together for their mutual benefit. Increasing of soil fertility and of corn crop were two things that he urged particularly.

Senator J. E. Haycroft of Madelia spoke on "Relation of the Legislature to Rural Development." He said the present move was timely and important.

Senator C. A. Johnson of St. Peter advocated diversified farming.

River Improvement.

A. B. Kaercher of Ortonville, an advocate of the improvement of the Minnesota river, discussed the three-fold object to be obtained—a navigable channel, the redeeming of wet and overflowed lands, and incidentally the development of water power.

Resolutions urged good roads from congress or legislature, especially the constitutional amendment; urged stopover privileges from railroads; advocated more dairying and soil survey; urged "radical reformation of the public school system," to give proper place to agricultural and other industrial training," investing more state money in state securities; adequate support for immigration department, and co-operation with other development associations.

6 CHILDREN AT WEDDING.

Of Parents Who Thought They Had Been Married Nine Years.

Minneapolis. — Six little children witnessed the marriage of their papa and mamma in the office of Court Commissioner Bates.

Because they believed the marriage license which they secured nine years ago made them husband and wife Peter Odirk and Annie Waddell did not become legally married until they accidentally discovered their plight.

Lindbergh Gets Appointment.

Washington.—Representative Moore of Pennsylvania was elected by the house to minority membership on the foreign affairs committee and his colleague, Representative Olmstead, also of Pennsylvania, was appointed to a similar place on the appropriations committee. Mr. Olmstead was forced by the change to give up his place on the committee on the election of president and vice president and the house named Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota to succeed him.

QUARTEMONT NOT INDICTED

GRAND JURY FINDS NO BILL IN CASE.

Charges Against Man Held in Connection With Mathews Case Dismissed.

Frank J. Quartemont, assistant superintendent of the commissary department of the Soo railroad, who was held in the city jail charged with the murder of Alice Mathews, was released from custody. The charge of first degree murder, placed against him by Detective Hanson, was dismissed by Judge Montgomery of the municipal court on the request of an agent of the county attorney.

The grand jury report contained nothing concerning the charge against him. The only mention of the murder case made in the report was the recommendation the jury made that two policemen of the Sixth precinct station be discharged from the department.

Police officials look on grand jury report as a direct slap. As such they have not forsaken any of their theories of the case and are working as hard as ever on the mysterious death of the young flour mill worker, one hundred feet in front of her home, March 23.

They say that the action of grand jury will make no difference to them in their efforts to bring the slayer of Miss Matthews to justice. They still believe Quartemont is guilty.

UNITE IN BUYING

Merchants and Farmers of Fairmont Adopt Co-operative Plan.

Fairmont.—Business and professional men of Fairmont have formed a co-operative exchange for the purpose of handling under one management, butter, eggs, cream and all kinds of farm produce.

The new plan is working out admirably and after being in operation two weeks practically all opposition to it has been withdrawn. Farmers are patronizing it liberally and are enthusiastic over its future.

Under the system none of the merchants belonging to the company, and who formerly did a big business in butter, eggs, cream and poultry, is allowed to handle these commodities either directly or indirectly, under a penalty of $50 fine, although they still share in the business resulting from the exchange of farm produce.

The farmer brings in his products to the exchange. The manager, in payment, gives him one of the company's checks for the amount due, and the holder can go wherever he chooses and purchase his goods.

The company has a coinage of aluminum money, so that a customer not wishing to trade out the whole amount of his check in one place or at one time, can get his change in the equivalent of real money and that money is good in turn at the place of business of any other member of the company.

The system is calculated to make a better and larger market for farm produce of all kinds, centralizing the business and dealing in large quantities. There are twelve stockholders in the company, of which B. W. Schonweller is president, W. H. Cox, treasurer and W. C. Moulton, secretary.

TURN DOWN PRIMARY.

Minnesota Republicans Reject the La Folette Idea.

St. Paul.—The republican state committee rejected the Roosevelt-La Follette proposition for taking a popular vote on president in the caucuses. The vote was 28 to 7.

The delegate convention was called to meet in the Minneapolis armory Thursday, May 16, at noon. County conventions are to be held Monday, May 13, and district conventions May 15. Caucus dates will be fixed for each county by the county committee.

July 2 was selected as the date of the state nominating convention, and county conventions on Friday, June 28. The state convention will take place in the St. Paul Auditorium. County conventions on June 28.

MISSISSIPPI IS OPENING

Winona.—From the foot of Lake Pepin to the Gulf of Mexico the main channel of the Mississippi river is open and there is a general movement of ice along the entire upper river, with the exception of a few points toward the headwaters, which will probably shed the ice in a day or two. The ice movement is steady and is causing no alarm. Lake Pepin is still frozen over.

Prindeville, Engineer, Dead.

Grand Forks, April 8.—Engineer Prindeville, who was at the throttle the night the Oriental Limited was hurled into the ditch near Doyon, six weeks ago, died at a local hospital here. He was thrown from his cab and had internal injuries.

Winona Fruit Growers Organize.

Winona.—The Winona Fruit Growers' association, which will co-operate with the Central Fruit Gorwers' association of the state in the handling of apples this year, proposes to handle other fruit on its own account. James A. Duffy has been chosen manager of the local association and shipping headquarters established at a downtown location. The plan was tried for a few months last summer and worked well. The local fruit growers have found that co-operation is profitable to them.

Minnesota Awarded Island.

Madison, Wisconsin—The supreme court ruled that no change in the boundary line between Minnesota and Wisconsin was made by the diversion of the main channel in the Mississippi river by the construction of a bridge and dam. Minnesota island, near La Crosse, is therefore, a part of the state of Minnesota. The court holds that it is only where the change in boundary takes place by the slow process of erosion that a change in the boundary is effected.

PRIMITIVE PEOPLE

Something About Inhabitants of Blue Ridge Mountains.

Are Direct Descendants of Scotch and Irish Who Came to America in Colonial Times—Primeval Mode of Living Still Exists.

Hillsville, Va.—The peaks and gulches and underbrush of the Blue Ridge mountains have formed an effective barrier against modern progress around the western ends of Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina and the eastern ends of Kentucky and Tennessee.

The mountaineers of that district are direct descendants of the Scotch and Irish who came to America in colonial times. Their language closely resembles that used in Virginia in Queen Anne's time. And sprinkled freely through their drawling jargon are expressions one finds in Shakespeare. In their isolated life runs a strain of the romanticism of the old Scotch Highlands, the fatherland of most of them. They are today the purest type of American colonists to be found in the nation.

There are whole counties without railroads, telegraphs, telephones or even churches. What roads they have follow the course of a stream up the "holler," over the divide and down the next "holler." They simply ford the creeks and in bad weather they do not travel at all.

Hospitality is the law of the land. It is considered sacrilege to charge a minister for board or room and, although they have but little to offer, you are welcome to a good share of what they have. A Sunday school worker in these hills within two months was charged exactly fifty cents for board, room and washing. He was treated to enough fried chicken, country butter, milk, eggs and vegetables and slept on enough comfortable beds to satisfy any ordinary mortal for some time to come.

The student of folk-lore will find there songs descended straight from the original English of years ago. They are ashamed, however, of these songs and will not sing them before strangers. They are sung with accompaniment by banjo, violin or dulcimer.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

Blue Ridge Mountain Home.

The mountaineer has played many parts before the American public—as moonshiner, as feudist and as the ungainly, but lovable, type of which Lincoln was so good an example. It is interesting to note that per capita the mountains of eastern Kentucky and Tennessee supplied more soldiers to the ranks of the Union army than any other part of the Union, and that during the Revolutionary war the same people took down their muskets and did royal work freeing the colonies from the British.

IMAGES BRING ILL-LUCK

Statuette in London Is Said to Have the Bad Habit of Walking at Night.

London.—Stories of a strange nature are told concerning a carved teak image of a Guatama Buddha recently acquired by the Victoria and Albert Museum. A weird influence is attributed to the figure in question, but since its change of domicile its behavior has been most exemplary, though its past record is undoubtedly a bad one.

It was purchased from a lady whose father, a sea captain, obtained it in Lower Burmah about 1853. On the home voyage the ship caught fire just outside Liverpool and the image was cast overboard by the superstitious crew, who attributed the disaster to it. Eventually the Buddha was washed ashore on the Welsh coast, and the captain, after considerable difficulty, regained possession of it. After his death it passed into the hands of his daughter, and then the malignant character of the god began to manifest itself. The servants declared that it wandered about at night, and friends who stayed there complained of its haunting eyes. When, however, the scare reached the children it was deemed necessary to remove the image, and it has found a resting place in the museum.

Another remarkable story is told concerning a bambino, or Holy Child, lying on a miniature four-poster bed hung with Neapolitan and Burmese charms. It originally belonged to Lady Nevill, whose sons complained that a strange vein of ill-luck pursued them. A series of various mishaps followed in quick succession, and finally the statuette was placed as a loan exhibit in the museum, where it is to be found at the present moment.

The testimony that tips are decreasing, given in court by a waiter, should serve as an incentive to the public to cease the demoralizing practice of giving tips. A large proportion of the people who give them do so because it is the fashion. If it is not so much the fashion as it was, the greater the encouragement to this class of tippers to desist.

PRESIDENT TAFT URGES ECONOMY

RECOMMENDS LEGISLATION DESIGNED TO SAVE OVER $11,000,000 YEARLY.

IN MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Would Consolidate Revenue Cutter and Lighthouse Services—Appeals for $200,000 for Economy Commission.

Washington, D. C. — President Taft today sent to congress his second message of the present year on economy and efficiency in the government service. He recommended the passage of legislation designed to save more that $11,000,000 annually to the people of the United States.

Probably his two most striking proposals were that the local government offices in the treasury, postoffice, justice, interior and commerce and labor departments be placed in the classified service and that the revenue cutter service be consolidated with the lighthouse service in the department of commerce and labor.

By the first charge, the president said, congress could effect a saving of at least $10,000,000 annually and although in this message he gave no figures for the consolidation of the two services of the sea, in a previous message on the same subject early in the year, he predicted economies that would total about $1,000,000 yearly.

The president concluded his message with an appeal to congress to appropriate the $200,000 necessary to support the economy efficiency commission for another year with $50,000 additional for the publication of the commission's findings.

Other recommendations in the message were:

Placing of pension agents in classified service; estimated saving, $62,000 annually.

Abolition of office of receiver of district land offices and transfer of duties to register, assisted by bonded clerk; estimated saving, $20,000 annually.

Transfer of "political appointees" in internal revenue and customs services to classified service; estimate of saving, not given.

Consolidation of auditing offices of the government under one auditory; estimated saving, $200,000 annually.

Discontinuance of mileage allowances for government travel and a per diem allowance for officers and employes, in place of "subsistence," which includes lodging for those traveling; no estimate of saving given.

Improved method of handing correspondence; estimate of saving, not given, but predicted that labor can be reduced 50 per cent.

Centralization of the distribution of government documents; estimated saving, $24,000 a year.

Discontinuance of publication of the official register; estimated saving, $45,000 annually.

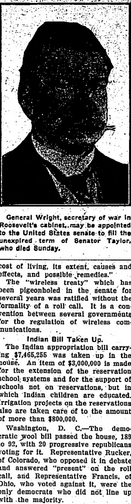
"Directly and indirectly," reads the message, "the changes proposed will result in the saving of many millions of dollars of public funds."

National and state banks to the number of 3,000 or more will be interrogated by the house "money trust" investigating committee. The banks will be asked to furnish lists of their directors with information concerning deposits, trusts and stock holdings with numerous other details of their business.

Senator Crawford's bill looking to an international inquiry into the high cost of living was ordered favorably reported by the senate committee on foreign relations. It would provide for a general conference between representatives of the United States and foreign governments into the "present cost of living, its extent, causes and effects, and possible remedies."

The "wireless treaty" which has been pigeonholed in the senate for several years was ratified without the formality of a roll call. It is a convention between several governments for the regulation of wireless communications.

GEN. LUKE E. WRIGHT.



General Wright, secretary of war in Roosevelt's cabinet, may be appointed to the United States senate to fill the unexpired term of Senator Taylor, who died Sunday.

Indian Bill Taken Up.

The Indian appropriation bill carrying $7,465,255 was taken up in the house. An item of $3,000,000 is made for the extension of the reservation school systems and for the support of schools not on reservations, but in which Indian children are educated. Irrigation projects on the reservations also are taken care of to the amount of more than $800,000.

Washington, D. C.—The democratic wool bill passed the house, 189 to 92, with 20 progressive republicans voting for it. Representative Rucker, of Colorado, who opposed it in debate and answered "present" on the roll call, and Representative Francis, of Ohio, who voted against it, were the only democrats who did not line up with the majority.

The 20 republicans who voted for the bill were:

Anderson, Lindberg, Miller, Nelson, Nye, Steenerson, Stevens, Volsted, of Minnesota; Haughen, Hubbard, of Iowa; Akin, of New York; Jackson, Murdock, Young, of Kansas; La Follette, Warburton, of Wisconsin; Lafferty, of Oregon; Hanna, of North Dakota; Kent, of California, and Norris, of Nebraska.

Supporters of the bill declared it would not cut the government's revenue but would save more than $50,000,000 a year to consumers because of the readjustment of rates. All attempts of the republicans to amend the bill to increase the rate were lost. The tariff board came in for criticism during the speech making.

The senate judiciary committee ordered favorably reported the employers' liability and workmen's compensation bill as recommended by the employers' liability commission. Senators Bacon and Overman opposed it.

Washington, April 2.—Indictments growing out of the Florida Everglades investigation in the department of agriculture were returned by the federal grand jury here against C. C. Elliott, A. D. Morehouse, Ray P. Teele and Frank E. Singleton.

The defendants are charged individually with having approved or presented false vouchers against the government. Elliott and Morehouse have asserted that the charges of technical violation of the law against them and their dismissal from the department were brought about by their opposition to Everglades lands promoters.

The charges against Elliott and the others were made to Secretary Wilson by J. O. Wright, formerly an assistant to Elliott. Wright, according to testimony at the recent congressional investigation, made a favorable report on the Florida Everglades. Elliott did not approve it. Wright resigned and went to Florida, and the report, amended by Elliott, eventually was suppressed by order of Secretary Wilson.

The secretary also suppressed a circular letter prepared by Elliott in which some facts relating to the Everglade lands were presented in answer to the letters of inquiry from thousands of investors in the various land schemes.

Washington, D. C.—Four senators from the two new states of Arizona and New Mexico will this week enlarge the membership of the upper branch of congress to 96. The new men, all lawyers, are Marcus Aurelius Smith of Tucson and Henry F. Ashurst of Prescott, Ariz., democrats, who will be sworn in at the bar of the senate today, and Thomas Benton Catron of Santa Fe, and Albert Bacon Hill of Three Rivers, New Mexico, republicans, who may not arrive from New Mexico in time for installation today.

Bill Hits Shipping Pools.

Washington.—A bill designed to break up foreign shipping pools and combinations and to give to this government greater control over such alleged restraints of trade which originate outside the United States was introduced by Representative Humphrey of Washington. The government now has several anti-trust suits pending against foreign steamship combinations.

The bill would provide that any vessel not of the United States, owned or controlled by any person or corporation adjudged to have violated the Sherman law, and which might be used to carry out the purposes adjudged unlawful, prohibiting from entering any port of the United States or clearing therefrom under penalty of $25,000 for each offense.

The bill would also provide that the postmaster general cancel the mail carrying contract of any vessel owned or controlled by persons adjudged violators of the law. The bill was referred to the committee on merchant marine which is preparing to investigate the alleged shipping combine.

Three Killed, 18 Injured, in Crash.

Chicago, Illinois.—Three persons were killed and eighteen injured today when a Chicago & Alton freight train crashed into a trolley car filled with passengers. The bodies taken from the wreck were those of an unidentified woman clasping in her arms the lifeless form of a 1-year-old baby and an unidentified man.

There were about sixty passengers in the car at the time of the accident. Police ambulances were hurried to the scene and the injured were removed to hospitals.

FIRE AT ATLANTIC CITY

Young's Ocean Pier, Feature of Seashore, Destroyed at Loss of $250,000.

Atlantic City, New Jersey.—Young's Ocean Pier, one of the big features along the sea front of this resort, was destroyed by fire. Six firemen were hurt. The pier was about 2,500 feet long. The loss is estimated at $250,000. Before the watchman could sound an alarm the fire spread to the stage and the land breeze carried it out toward the sea.

Auto Bandit Captured.

Paris, France.—Carouy, one of the auto bandits, who killed a chauffeur at Villeneuve-St. Georges, held up a bank at Chantilly, killing two of the employees, and stole $8,000, was arrested.

Driver Killed by Bandits.

Paris, France.—A gang of four bandits leaped onto an expressman's wagon in the vicinity of Choisy-le-Roi, about six miles from Paris, killed the driver by strangling him, and looted the wagon of a large quantity of valuables.

MISSISSIPPI IS WILD

THOUSANDS OF ACRES IN THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY ARE SWEPT CLEAN.

MORE LEVEES BROKEN.

Tide Swirling Toward Gulf—Walls of Water Surround Cairo—Sympathizers Donate to Refugees.

Memphis, Tenn. — In the wide stretches of the Mississippi's flooded acres there are three striking pictures. The northernmost is the 500 square miles of the Reelfoot lake country of Tennessee where more than 2,000 persons have been driven from their homes by the smashing of a Mississippi levee in southwestern Kentucky. In this district thousands of acres of fertile fields are under water. Scores of persons who have refused to desert their homes now are imprisoned in upper floors and on roofs of flood-menaced houses.

A few miles south in Arkansas three counties are under water. From this rich bottom country hundreds of farmers and villagers have been driven. Flood waters swept over the fertile fields and thriving villages with the breaking of the levee on the Arkansas side, north of Memphis.

Sunday great numbers of persons, marooned on roofs and houses and in trees, were taken out of the flooded districts in boats. Probably many more water-imprisoned are in imminent peril. There are not boats enough to perform the rescue work required. Three counties—Crittenden, Poinsett and Cross—are flooded.

Homes Swept Away.

The scene south of these points impress one with the might of a giant stream on a rampage. Homes that once marked the center of rich bottom farms now float in a torrent that cannot be stayed. Bits of wreckage carried along in the tawny tide reflect the extent of the damage in the valley above.

Reporters Risk Lives.

Attempts to cover the story along the stretch of levees from southern Missouri and Illinois to Arkansas have involved many personal risks on the part of newspaper correspondents.

A daring exploit was successfully tried by a reporter who rode a log on the crest of the tide when the levee broke at Hickman. He made his way to Tiptonville, Tenn., then telephoned his story of the flight from the Reelfoot country to Memphis.

The telephone has been brought largely into play. Patrols stationed at menaced points have watched for crevasses night and day. The moment that a break occurred the patrols hurried to telephone stations and warned the countryside.

Cairo an Island City.

Cairo, Ill.—Cairo is an island city surrounded by an ocean of water, the crest of which is 10 feet higher than the average level of the city. In many places, this wall of water stands 20 feet higher than the streets.

With a bright sun after the severe rain and wind storm Saturday night, hope returned to the fighting levee protectors. For the first time in a week, the workers got a much-needed rest, although the watchfulness along the levee was not relaxed and the men were ready at all times to answer calls to points of trouble. Two thousands levee workers were scattered about the great levee section at sundown to renew their patrol.

Generous donations from all parts of Kentucky are being sent to Hickman to aid the 3,500 flood refugees who have straggled into that city.

A large number of steamboats are lying between this city and flooded towns below in search of stock which is being landed on the hills near Wickliffe, Ky. Express companies are carrying supplies to refugees free of charge.

Wheat Under Water.

Several thousand acres of wheat are under water in Mississippi county, Mo. Many thousand dollars worth of stock have perished and farmers are living in their attics.

For five days, Cairo has been an island city. When the levees protecting the drainage district went out Thursday and rail communication was stopped, and the only entrance to the city now is by boat from Mounds, nine miles away.

Mounds nominally is an inland town, three miles from the Ohio river, but there is now water five feet deep at the Big Four depot.

Almost $300,000 has been spent in the city and three railroad companies in fighting the flood at Cairo and the drainage district. Five thousand men have been paid an average of $1.50 a day for more than a week.

Cairo is protected by three main levees and several small ones.

MINERS HOPE FOR SETTLEMENT

175,000 MINERS AFFECTED BY DISAGREEMENT.

Crux of Situation Hinges on Philadelphia Meeting on Wednesday.

Philadelphia Penn. — One hundred and seventy-five thousand idle anthracite mine workers and numberless thousands of other interested persons will turn their eyes toward Philadelphia this week hoping that the conference to be held in this city on Wednesday, between the representatives of the men and operators will result in a new agreement and speedily end the suspension of mining inaugurated April 1. The eagerness shown by both sides to meet again has caused the miners to feel that with concessions on both sides there will be little difficulty in reaching a satisfactory agreement.

When the suspension began many of the men felt that a compromise increase in wages would be granted, thus ending the troubles, but during the last week evidence has cropped up that the union officers will insist upon some sort of recognition of the organization. If the conference splits on this question a long suspension is likely.

There has been little violence. The suspension of mining has been complete, causing small occasion for the mine workers to do picket duty.

Some friction has developed over the employment of men to do temporary repair work in the mines, but in most cases an amicable arrangement has been reached.

MOTHER SAVES CHILD.

Superior, Wis. — But for the presence of mind of Mrs. J. A. Johnson of this city her little daughter, Lilly, aged 7, might have been burned to death. The child, while playing around the table in the sitting room, knocked over the kerosene lamp. Her dress immediately caught fire. The mother grabbed the blazing child and rolled her in a rug, smothering the flames.

Snyder. She was arrested later and charged with homicide.

OCEAN LINER BURNS

THE ONTARIO CATCHES FIRE OFF MONTAUK POINT, LONG ISLAND.

PASSENGERS TAKEN OFF

Wireless Sends Warning All Along North Atlantic and Life Saving Crew Use the Breeches Buoy Apparatus.

Montauk Point, Long Isl. — Twenty-nine women and children were taken from the burning steamer Ontario of the Merchants & Miners' line off Montauk Point by the tug Tasco from London, Conn. A 8:30 a. m. Captain Reed sent word ashore that the fire was under control. The vessel was then hard aground and apparently in no danger of breaking. The tug landed the passengers at New London, Conn.

A breeches buoy was shot to the vessel from the shore when she first went on the rocks at 3 a. m., but the captain, after transferring the passengers to a tug, sent word by life savers that his crew would remain aboard. Long before daylight they had chopped a dozen holes through the pilot house and water was pumped by the vessel's engines into the hold.

The fire broke out during the night and became so threatening that shortly before 2 a. m. Captain Reed ordered the wireless operator to send "S. O. S." distress signals. An hour later he turned back upon his course and drove the vessel full speed ahead for the reefs off Montauk Point.

Through the early hours the wireless sputtered along the entire north Atlantic coast with news of the vessel's danger. Ten minutes later the men at this station saw the ship on the rocks, hurried off with a breeches buoy apparatus and, later, dragged their surf boat on its truck three miles over the beach to the burning steamer.

The live savers, reinforced by a crew from the Hither Plain station, two miles away, transferred the passengers in small boats to a tug and stood off at readiness to take the crew ashore if need be. Although the flames could not be seen, a great cloud of steam and smoke arose from the burning ship and spread a haze along the waterfront for miles. Captain Reed told the life savers that the fire was confined entirely to the hold.

The Ontario is a vessel of 1,987 tons net. She is 290 feet long, of steel, and was built in 1904. She left Baltimore Saturday.

WILL BE REARGUED.

Supreme Court Orders Rehearing of the Intermountain Cases.

Washington, D. C. — Reargument of the so-called "intermountain rate cases" was ordered by the supreme court of the United States. Chief Justice White gave no reason for the reargument, merely stating that they would be "restored for argument before a full bench."

The reargument will permit Justice Pitney to participate in the decision of the cases. All the other justices heard the cases when they were argued in February.

The cases involve the constitutionality of the "long and short haul" provisions of the interstate commerce law and the power of the interstate commerce commission to make "blanket" rates over a large zone of territory instead of acting merely on rates from specific points.

General Bragg's Pension Raised.

Washington, D. C. — The tendency toward liberality by congress in pension matters was illustrated by an order passed in the committee on pensions of the United States senate to pay a pension of $100 a month to General Edward S. Bragg of Fond du Lac, Wis. General Bragg was one of the commanders of the Iron Brigade during the Civil war, and when he served in congress 25 years ago was one of the most vigorous opponents of liberal pension legislation that ever served in congress.

Train Demolishes Station.

Milford, Indiana. — A freight train on the Big Four jumped the track, demolishing the depot on one side of the track and an elevator and flour mill on the other. One man was probably fatally injured. Twelve cars left the rails, six of them going through the Big Four station and a flour mill and reducing them to splinters. No one was in the building. The train consisted mostly of oil cars and the station grounds are flooded with oil, which in some places is six inches deep.

WOULD SELL BONDS

FIGURES THAT STATE WOULD PROFIT NEARLY A MILLION BY THEIR DISPOSAL.

SECURITIES OF VIRGINIA

Great Demand for Money—Has Bids on Securities Which He Will Lay Before Investment Board Members.

State Treasurer Walter J. Smith at the next meeting of the State Investment board, will lay before the other members a proposal to sell the Virginia State bonds now owned by the State of Minnesota. Mr. Smith has secured quotations on the bonds and figured out what the state will gain by the sale if present interest rates continue. He also has asked Assistant Attorney General Stephenson to draw up the necessary papers so that if the board members agree with him the bonds can be quickly disposed of and the money loaned to Minnesota municipalities.

Could Get More Interest.

The bonds, which have a par value of $2,145,000, were bought in 1899 at a cost of $1,865,062. They pay 3 per cent, but considering that they were bought below par they are returning a little better than 3 per cent on the investment. Mr. Smith has an offer now of .8625 for the bonds, which would bring $1,850,062.50. This could be loaned in a very few weeks to counties, cities and school districts in the state at 4 per cent.

The bonds are to run until 19. They bring about $64,350 annually and would bring the state $5,598,40 in interest in that time. If the $1,85 062 which they will bring were loaned out now at 4 per cent the return to the state would be about $74,000 annually, or $6,438,000 in the eighty-seven years the boards have to run according to figures prepared by Ge Lafond of the treasurer's office.

Saving to Counties.

The gain to the state at large would be still greater, according to Mr. Smith, for the municipalities that would borrow this money from the state at 4 per cent, would otherwise have to borrow money from private parties at 5. This would mean a saving to them at $18,650 annuallyas long as present interest rates continue.

The matter of selling Virginia State bonds was brought up by State Treasurer Block several years ago, but as the sale of any bonds held by the state requires a unanimous vote of the board members and Chief Justice Start opposed the sale on the ground that the demand for money did not warrant the sale, the other members did not push the matter.

The board is composed of the Governor, the state treasurer, the state auditor, the chief justice of the Supreme Court and the president of the Board of Regents of the State University.

EXPERIMENT WITH SILO

Redwood Falls Farmers Watch Silo Filled With Dry Stalks.

Redwood Falls.—An experiment took place at the Sears-Gold stock farm the result of which will be watched with interest by farmers. Two large large silos with a capacity of 400 tons of ensilage were nearly empty and the management decided to refill them with corn stalks that had been in the field all winter. The dry stalks were cut up in the same manner as in the fall when the silos are filled with fresh-cut fodder. A majority of the farmers seem to think the dry corn stalks will prove a failure. The silo is steadily gaining ground in Redwood county. Last year more than twenty were constructed and it is predicted there will be at least fifty to one hundred in another year.

CARRIERS TO ST. CLOUD.

Plans Are Being Made for the State Meeting in June.

St. Cloud.—St. Cloud letter carriers are making plans for the state meeting of their organization which is to be held in this city beginning June 8. On Saturday, June 8, will come the business meeting, at which officers will be elected and details of the organization discussed. A banquet will be served the delegates and a few invited guests. About 150 delegates are expected. Sunday will be the big day, for in the forenoon it is expected that Rev. M. Grannis of New York, the father of the Sunday closing movement and the man to whom credit is given for persuading the government to issue the order allowing mail clerks a rest day, will preach a sermon. First Assistant Postmaster General Canfield will also speak. Sunday afternoon the delegates will be taken for an automobile ride.

Grasshoppers Are Feared.

Redwood Falls.—It is feared in this part of the state that there will be much evidence of grasshoppers in the coming season. The anxiety is general and is based upon the experiments of seed corn by the farmers, who in filling a box with soil and kernels of the corn, and keeping it in the house to determine its germinating quality, find that the soil contains many grasshoppers' eggs that hatch when exposed to the warm temperature of the house.

WHY PEOPLE GO TO CANADA

Those who are wondering why the number of Americans going to Canada year by year increases in the rates that it does, would not be so surprised were they to accompany one of the numerous excursions that are being run under the auspices of the Government from several of the states, and remain with the settler until he gets onto the free homesteads, which, as stated by Speaker Champ Clark, in the U. S. senate the other day, comprises 160 acres of the most fertile soil and with remarkably easy settlement conditions. Then watch the results, whether it be on this free homestead of 160 acres or on land which he may purchase at from $15. to $20. per acre, fully as good as the $100. and $150. per acre land of his native state, and which his means will not permit his purchasing. On the part of the members of the U. S. Senate and Congress there is nothing but praise for Canada. Canadian laws and Canadian lands although the reasonable desire is shown in their remarks, that they pass legislation, (which is very praiseworthy) that will make the land laws of the United States much easier.

It is the success of the American settler in Canada that attracts others, and when experiences such as the following are related to the friend "back home" is it any wonder that increased interest is aroused and a determination arrived at, to participate in the new-found way up in Canada that means wealth and health and all that accompanies it.

William Johnston, who formerly lived at Alexandria, Minn., settled in the Alberg District near Battle River and in writing to one of the Canadian Government agents, located in the United States says: "We have had no failures of crops during our nine years in Canada. I threshed 1208 bushels of wheat and 1083 bushels of oats in 1911, off my 160 acres. This is a beautiful country. I keep six good work horses and milk seven cows, getting good prices for butter and eggs. We get our coal for $2.00 per ton at the mine, about one mile from the farm. Am about one and a half miles from a fine school. As for the cold weather it is much milder here than in Minnesota, where I lived for 21 years. Our well is 35 feet deep and we have fine water. Wild land is selling for $18. to $25. per acre. Improved farms are much higher. I am well satisfied with the country, and would not sell unless I got a big price, as we have all done well here."

Good reasons to account for the number going to Canada.

Two Smiles.

Ezra Pound, the poet, was talking at the Authors' club, in New York, about Shelley's cremation.

"Cremation, although beautiful," he said, "lends itself to ribald jest in a way that sepulture doesn't.

"Who can forbear a smile at the thought of that devoted young matron, who, her front steps being covered with sleet, sprinkled her first husband's ashes over them in order that her second husband might descend in safety?"

Smiling himself, Mr. Pound resumed:

"And who could forbear another smile at the thought of the young widow on the blustery March morning who entered her drawing room to find that the wind had overturned the vase which contained her husband's remains?

"'Pshaw,' she said, 'now isn't it just like George to throw his ashes all over my new Kirmanshah rug!'"

Nothing Lost.

"Mr. Chairman," said the orator, who had already occupied the platform for twenty minutes, amid many interjections from the audience. "Mr. Chairman! May I appeal on a point of order? There is really so much desultory conversation going on in parts of the hall that it is impossible for me to hear a word I am saying."

Some Are So by Nature.

A certain young man, who prided himself on a brusqueness that he mistook for wit, met an eminent, but touchy, sculptor at a studio supper.

"So you're the chap," he said, on being introduced, "that makes mud heads?"

"Not all of them," the sculptor replied, quietly.—Youth's Companion.

NOTES from MEADOWBROOK FARM

By William Pitt

Keep nothing but pure breds.

Peat soils need potassium (potash).

Be careful of caked udders in the ewes.

The natural color of butter is that found in June.

A deep bed will often cause the loss of a number of pigs.

A collar that fits is the best preventive for sore shoulders.

Never whip a horse when he shies. It will increase his fear.

Give the sows plenty of clean water to drink. Take the chill off.

If the fodder is getting scarce, better buy than stint the cows.

A good agitator on the spray pump is as important as a good pump.

Save all the hog manure. You have none on the farm that is richer.

In choosing eggs for hatching, try to get those from the best hens you have.

With three cows you need a cream separator; with ten, you must have a silo.

File the crosscut saw yourself; you will thus soon save enough to buy a new saw.

The churn should be thoroughly scalded and then cooled before cream is put in.

It is a losing proposition to try to raise 200 chicks where there is room for only 50.

A little oil meal or a few potatoes will help the horses get rid of their winter hair.

Before you start your incubator, get out the manufacturers' directions and re-read carefully.

Do not use any ill-formed eggs for hatching, nor any that are unnaturally long, or nearly round.

Keep your fowls on the same footing that you keep your cattle, and you will surely be rewarded.

Most anyone can have a small flock and keep from eight to a dozen hens and feed on table scraps.

Be sure the fenders are in position in the farrowing pens to prevent the sows laying on the young pigs.

Cold, raw winds make chapped teats all the worse. Have a small jar of vaseline handy at milking time and use it.

It costs a good deal of money to buy a satisfactory team. In most cases this can be avoided by the farmer raising his own.

"It is hard for an empty sack to stand straight, but it is still harder for a lazy man to succeed in the dairy business."

Every four years 1,000 pounds of rock phosphate is needed to keep up the phosphorous content of average corn belt soil.

An occasional colt or young horse to sell, even when one is not making a business of raising horses, is a help to any farmer.

Get after the San Jose scale. What a melliferous name this little beast sails under! But cover him with Bordeaux all the same.

The time to plant grape cuttings is in early spring, as soon as the ground can be worked. Slant the cuttings a little and leave only one bud above ground.

If you are a beginner with sheep go slow until you have mastered the industry. As in poultrying or any other like business, experience is the safe, sure teacher.

Sheep that are well kept and fed during the fall season so that they enter the winter quarters in thrifty and vigorous condition will keep easily over winter.

Early peas may be followed by celery or cabbage or potatoes, followed by late beans or corn, thereby getting several crops from the same ground each year.

Young currant canes may be bent over in spring, and the middle covered with earth. Roots will start at these points and in a short time you will have currant plants.

Horticultural inspectors in Washington, Oregon and Idaho report that there are 16,000,000 growing fruit trees in those states—5,744,257 of them bore fruit last year.

If you allow the young stock to rough it with the older and stronger stock, they'll be rough looking creatures when they come through in the spring, and they may be lost entirely.

In preparing land for a new orchard take time to plow it all very deeply before a tree is set, and if there is a hard "plow sole," or a tight sub-soil, loosen it up with dynamite.

Don't forget the water.

Clean out feed troughs daily.

Pekins lay from 120 to 170 eggs per year.

Alsike clover helps out the stand of red clover.

A purplish red comb indicates bad health in a fowl.

Test out infertile eggs on tenth and seventeenth days.

A quart of mixed feed is about right for twelve hens.

If you wish to succeed, know that your hens are comfortable.

Do not make too violent crosses. Select a type and stick to it.

It is not so much the make of incubator as the man who runs it.

Air-slaked lime is a valuable disinfectant in the poultry house.

Variety is always good, but sudden and abrupt changes are dangerous.

It pays in more ways than one to be on friendly terms with the heifers.

The sort of seed corn to select is the kind that produces bushels per acre.

Correct sour or acid soil with one to five tons per acre of crushed limestone.

To maintain normal soil fertility the supply of humus must be conserved.

The business hen is the hen that puts her daily credits in the egg basket.

The only proper way to replenish the flock is to save the best lambs each year.

A common cause of slow churning is an overfilled churn. Half full is about right.

Dirty collars are probably as responsible for sore shoulders as ill-fitting ones.

Keep the horses well cleaned, but remember that you can be cruel with the curry comb.

The hopper system of feeding is a good one, but put only one kind of feed in one hopper.

The fault of too many dairy farmers is failure to make the cows produce up to their limit.

Too much corn has caused the loss of many a fine litter of pigs, and often the loss of the sow as well.

In raising horses for one's own use it should be done as intelligently as if it were to be a regular business.

Spraying is one of the unavoidable tasks of the farmer who would keep his orchard in desirable condition.

Place the bee hives on string supports about eight inches from the ground to prevent dampness and cold.

The man who is producing milk for the city trade should have a clear mind, clean hands and a pure heart.

Arsenate of lead which is held over from the year before will be good if it has not dried out and become a hard lump.

When turkeys are penned up to fatten for market, good results are not obtained if they are cramped for room.

Now and then put a little brine on the straw. It acts as an appetizer, and the sheep clean up the straw better.

A heifer may give as much milk in proportion to the food eaten as a mature cow, and make some growth in addition.

A paint brush that has become hardened with paint can be made soft and pliable by immersing it in boiling vinegar.

It is just as easy to multiply defects in breeding as it is to strengthen good points, and many people are doing the former.

The colt crop on the general farm may be made a by-product that will cost very little, but swell the bank account considerably.

Seed corn? Of course you have it all in good shape and ready for the germination test. Do not plant a grain unless you know it comes from sound stock.

The best medicine in the world for poultry are dry, clean quarters and lots of sunshine. Better lose every other poultry recipe known than to forget this.

The great need of the day is educated dairymen, men who understand the care and feeding of the cow as well as the successful marketing of her products.

Now is the time to set a shallow box of earth in the window and start some cabbage and tomato seeds for early planting, first in the hotbed and then in open ground.

If the dairymen could come into direct contact with the people who eat their butter there would be less need of discussing the subject of making a better grade of butter.

Government reports state that during the last year more up-to-date and modern machinery has been purchased and installed on the farms than during any previous ten years.

Thousands of acres of pasture land in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Iowa are devoted to feeding cows to supply Chicago consumers with milk and cream and other dairy products.

WHEREIN DADDY WAS WRONG

Tommy Resented Injustice Done to Saw, After He Had Proved Its Temper.

Mr. A—, who was planning to build an outdoor sleeping porch at the back of his house, had an expensive new saw sent home from a hardware store. He left his office early the next afternoon, with the intention of getting the porch well under way before dinner; and, as he was very much interested in doing the work himself, he donned a pair of overalls and went at it in good spirits. An hour or so later he came tramping into the house, his face dark with exasperation, and flung himself down in disgust.

"That new saw I bought isn't worth five cents," he stormed. "Why, the thing won't cut butter!"

His small son Tommy looked up in wide-eyed surprise.

"Oh, yes, it would, daddy," he said, earnestly; "why, Ted and I sawed a whole brick in two with it just this morning!"—Harper's Magazine.

Misunderstood 'Gator.

The winter afternoon was like June, and, taking tea under a palm on the lawn of the Royal Poinciana at Palm Beach, a sportsman said:

"This morning I photographed an alligator. My boy, to get him, stripped and waded into the water up to his chin. The boy felt about with his feet in the mud till he found a big 'gator. Then he ducked down, grabbed the 'gator by the nose and dragged him slowly ashore to the waiting lens."

"But," said a girl in white, "wasn't it dangerous?"

"Not a bit."

"But I thought alligators ate you!"

"No, no," said the sportsman. "You are confusing the alligator with the crocodile. The Indian crocodile eats men and women, but the Florida alligator is as harmless, literally as harmless, as a cow."

Remarkable Bible Verses.

The eighth verse of the third chapter of Zephaniah contains every letter, including the finals, of the Hebrew language, while one will find in the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra every letter of the English alphabet except j. Demand for New Alloy.

Although the early expectations of the wholesale substitution of aluminum for steel and iron have not materialized, the demand for the new alloy has grown enormously. From a production in the United States of less than 100,000 pounds in 1883, in 1903 the output had grown to 350,000 pounds, 1903, to 7,600,000 pounds and today it is in excess of 50,000,000 pounds.

Innocent Answer of Quiet Little Wife Got Him Started on Train of Thought.

The husband and wife were on their way to the theater, when the husband began kicking because his wife took such a long time dressing.

"What delayed you this time?" he growled.

"Seeing the children to bed," she responded, quietly.

"What's the nurse for?" snapped the man.

"The nurse is for our convenience—yours and mine, especially mine," she answered. "But the boy certainly takes after you. He asked the same kind of a fool question just as I was kissing him good night."

"Fool question, eh? Well, what was it?"

"I asked him if he had said his prayers. And he said no. And I asked him if he didn't want God to take care of him during the night. He answered: 'What's the nurse for?'"

For the remainder of the way the man pondered on this answer.

Why Should a Chicken Lay a Soft-Shelled Egg?

Because, Willie, the chicken don't know how to create a hard-shelled egg unless it has some food with lime in it.

So chicken-raisers often provide limestone gravel, broken oyster shells or some other form of lime.

Let the chicken wander free and it finds its own food and behaves sensibly.

Shut it up and feed stuff lacking lime and the eggs are soft-shelled.

Let's step from chickens to human beings.

Phosphate of Potash is the most important element Nature demands to unite albumin and water to make gray matter.

There is some question whether or not the eating of fish produces brain power, but there is no quibble over the fact that catching fish produces liars.

We have a nice present for the one who can tell the biggest lie about his first "catch" of the season. We have a still nicer one for the one who can tell the truth.

Local pride is a great business builder,—knocking is the surest way to wipe a place off the map. Let's all be practical boosters for the old town. Let's start today! And let's keep it up all the time.

The three most important crops in Northwestern Minnesota are clover, Folder corn and potatoes. The seed for each of these crops this spring is scarce and high priced, but no farmer should change his plan for seeding them on account of the high price of seed. One dollar invested in seed for any of these crops, may be made to return ten dollars and more in the crops.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adupted to the country.

It's amusing to see how inflated with importance some people become after reading the report of the director of the U. S. Census and find he has padded the population of thier town enough to give it a place on the map for the first time.

To run a newspaper without occasionally publishing an item that is untrue, or without giving offense, is like running a railroad without having accidents and smash-ups. It can't be done.

Every good citizen should take the keenest interest in the welfare of his own town,—the stores, the churches, in fact, everything that goes to make prosperity and happiness. When this is done there is never any need to apologize for a town's existence or for anything it contains.

SPOILS SYSTEM USED FOR TAFT

Machine Hard at Work to Override Will of Republican Voters.

DEBAUCHERY IS THE RULE

Disgraceful Tactics Observed in Indiana, Kansas and Other States to Prevent Real Popular Expression.

Washington.—Outrages more flagrant than any that ever disgraced Republican politics have characterized the fight in behalf of the renomination of William Howard Taft to date.

The brutal force of organization, backed by the tremendous influence of the spoils system and the debauching and intimidating effects of corporation activities in politics, have produced, in a number of recent instances, results which cannot fail to arouse the general indignation of the voters everywhere.

By the sheer force of organization methods, the Taft men are seeking to override the will of the people, obviously believing that the people will submit supinely and fail to resent an open denial of their rights in their own system of government. Some of these instances make plain why the Taft supporters have so persistently and so stubbornly resisted the election of delegates by a direct vote of the people.

Kansas as Example.

This is what happened recently in Kansas. Twenty-seven members of the state committee, which is composed of one hundred and five members in all, met and refused to permit a presidential preference primary in that state—notwithstanding almost unanimous Republican sentiment for the primary—and declared in favor of the renomination of Taft. This action was effected in this way: Fifty-one members of the state committee, less than a quorum, met and without any right to transact business of any kind, held this meeting. The state committee is made up of the chairmen of the different counties who are regularly elected in primaries. Under the law, no member can give his proxy to another member. He must represent his county in person. In the meeting of the committee held, twenty-four of the members present were Roosevelt men. They raised the point of no quorum, and to meet this the Taft men presented several federal office holders, not members of the committee, who presented what they claimed were proxies from absent committee members.

Playing the "Game."

These proxies were without value. Notwithstanding this, the proxy holders were seated by the Taft organization men, until a bare numerical quorum but not a legal quorum was established. Then, they proceeded to take the action set forth. There was not a semblance of legality in the proceedings, yet under the circumstances the public was powerless to prevent the outrage. Its effect is to deprive the voters of Kansas of the right to choose their national delegates, and leaves the selection to the discredited bosses of a machine which was supposed to have been wrecked long ago.

Debauching Oklahoma.

Another illustration is furnished by the third district of Oklahoma. In this district when the convention assembled the Roosevelt delegates numbered 646 and the Taft delegates 170. The Taft men controlled the chairman and other officers of the district committee. When the latter found they were outnumbered they withdrew with the other 170 Taft delegates and held a convention of their own. The Roosevelt men, outnumbering the Taft supporters nearly four to one, proceeded to elect delegates pledged to support Theodore Roosevelt. The bolting minority elected two delegates pledged to Taft. Under no principle of right or justice could the Taft delegates establish the slightest claim to seats in the convention. But under the organization system, merely because the district committee was controlled through federal office holders by the Taft administration, the Taft delegates are heralded to the country as the regularly elected delegates and the men chosen by the overwhelming majority of regularly chosen district delegates and directed to support Theodore Roosevelt must appear before the national committee at Chicago as contestants.

If the national committee pursues organization methods they will be refused admittance to the convention.

Tactics in Indiana.

In the first Indiana district, where former Senator Hemenway directed the Taft forces, the Roosevelt men had fifty-two out of ninety-seven members of the convention. But here again the organization controlled the district chairman and the district committee, proceeded to organize the convention in behalf of Taft, seating arbitrarily and without permitting a vote by the convention, a number of contesting Taft delegates. The Roosevelt men could not obtain recognition and could not make themselves effective except by resorting to physical force. Under these conditions they withdrew from the convention and organized one of their own and elected their delegates. Although holding a clear majority of the convention, they were forced to assume the attitude of bolters in order to escape the Taft steam roller, and the delegates they have chosen are also classed as contestants. The same methods have been pursued in other districts.

Elected by Corruption.

The plain and obvious result of these outrageous proceedings is that of the total number of delegates claimed for Taft in states where the Republican party has a fighting chance in the election, nearly all of them, if not quite all, have been illegally elected by the exercise of the worst form of corruption, that which deprives the voters themselves of any voice in the selection of men who will assume to represent them in naming a candidate for the presidency of the United States. The continuance of these methods will in a short time disclose general political conditions in the United States, more startling and more abhorrent than was ever known before. It cannot fail to become evident that conscienceless men controlled by patronage, by their own greed for power and by the particular special interests they represent are engaged in a great conspiracy to steal from the American people their right of self-government. They are pursuing a rule or ruin policy, the effect of which cannot be limited to the disaster it will certainly bring to the Republican party, but will extend to the nation itself, destroying, as nothing else has done, confidence in public men, in the great business institutions of the country, and in the government itself. Nothing can stop this but the aroused conscience of the voters themselves and their determination to prevent mere political manipulators, backed by money and government influence, from setting aside and overriding the real sentiment of the public.

Taft Approves Methods.

Showing how thoroughly in sympathy with these methods are the Taft managers and the president himself, the former recently made public a dispatch from E. L. Morse, one of the Taft managers in Missouri, respecting the situation in one congressional district of that state. The dispatch says: "Congressional committee which makes roll of convention is evenly divided, we controlling chairman and secretary, which will enable us to elect two Taft delegates."

Here the proposition is so plainly put that it illuminates the whole situation. The control of the chairman and secretary of the district committee, two men out of several hundred, is relied upon by the Taft forces to give them the two delegates from that district of Missouri. The Taft managers attempt no concealment of the purpose in view. They are simply determined that representative government in the United States so far as the naming of a candidate for president is concerned shall be destroyed.

A. O. LETVIG,

Is Leaving The Country Inside of six months.

Anybody wants his line of business should let him know.

HOW TO START SOMETHING FOR GOOD ROADS.

First, get two or three "live wire" men together. Don't bother with anybody that takes unnecessarily long to say "Yes" or to say "No." Recommend the taking of action to hold a good roads conference in your town for the purpose of stirring up a healthier and more definite advancement in your highway improvement problems.

Second, have a special meeting of your chamber of commerce or your automobile club or any progressive business men's organization. If you have no organization of any kind get three or four friends together and form a temporary good roads league. Propose the idea of holding a good roads conference in your county. Learn what can be done financially. Discuss what ought to be done. Decide what you will undertake. Stay with it. Then give all the facts to the newspapers. Keep them posted at every future step. They are 90 per cent necessary to make a success of your meeting. Start it quick.

Obituary.

News reached here early Monday morning of the death of Jacob Frolland which occurred at his home about three miles south of town, death occuring at about 4 o'clock that morning. The funeral services will be held from the residence Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock and the remains will be laid to rest in the cemetery south of town. He leaves two daughters to mourn his death; his wife having preceeded him to the grave. The relatives of the deceased have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

Miss Anderson made many warm friends during her stay here who will be deeply grieved to hear of her unfortunate condition.

The basket ball and dance given by the Athletic Association at the city hall Saturday evening for the purpose of raising funds with which to buy suits for the base ball team, did not meet with the turnout that was expected. Only a very few baskets were prepared and altho these, went at a high price the receipts were not what might have been expected. The amount cleared above expenses from the dance and social amounted to $38. In getting suits and other paraphernalia about $30 at least will have to be expended and the treasury is left a little short of this amount. The prize (?) basket of the evening was a very elaborate affair prepared by the Misses John Norby and Ralph Rice. This basket was sold and resold three times and netted the association about $20 all-told. A most delicious repast suitable to the taste of any well-bred and high-toned libun was neatly tucked away in the basket and consisted of a good sized soup-bone and a dish of French fried potatoes.

The members of the Plummer band are planning a big dance for the 17th of May; Norway's independence day. The fact that the band boys are giving it and the occasion of the Scandinavian holiday should be an assurance of a good attendance.

Negotiations are under way by the Soo Line for the institution of a direct passenger service between Duluth and Winnipeg, through Thief River Falls and Emerson in connection with the Canadian Pacific railroad. The Soo Line officials are considering the matter in such form that a through passenger service from Chicago to Winnipeg, via Duluth, may be instituted.

The natural health and vigor of children reared in the country are superior to city raised children. Country cooking, with fresh vegetables, eggs, milk, butter and bread made by the farmer's wife far surpasses in health attributes style of living in cities. In the country the atmosphere is clear, while in cities it is hazy with coal smoke and clouds of dust sweep up from the macadamized streets by every wind that blows. The country is the ideal place to grow healthful bodies and develop clear, strong minds. The child with a robust body trained to do things has a confidence in himself that cannot be acquired in any other way. The child reared in the country developes the qualities of a leader, and from the farm have come the Hills, Harrimans and Morgans that are now the world's captains of industry. The contact with nature not only installs the principals of honesty and morality in the mind but brings them closer to their Maker without which contact enduring success is impossible.

PLUMMER ....MINNESOTA

After all it is no Sunday afternoon stroll to the south pole.

The speed mania has its dangers in railroading as well is in motoring.

Aeroplane records continue to be broken almost as often as aeroplanes.

Modern railroading gets a sideswipe every time a spectacular wreck occurs.

A man is generally willing to work for nothing at a thing that isn't worth doing.

A club has been organized in New York to boost good plays. It will not be overworked.

Not until the queen tries to cook a meal on the king's new stove will the true test come.

The man who loves old-fashioned winters has been caught studying a seed catalogue.

Persons who clamored for an old fashioned winter are said to have ceased clamoring.

If there is a sleeping volcano under the Panama canal the thing for it to do is to sleep on.

Big feet may indicate a big brain, but most women would rather have beauty than brains.

A French couple made their wedding tour in an aeroplane. An actual case of "fly with me."

A New York highwayman held up a poet. But then mistakes will happen, even in the robbery business.

Railroads propose to advance the rates on hay, but other breakfast foods can be shipped at the old price.

Thus far the announcement of scientists that blondes are doomed has not caused a slump in the peroxide market.

The stoneless plum has been evolved by human science. But as yet the waterless milk is a drama of the future.

A New York woman called a policeman when a man proposed to her on the street. Probably afraid that he'd get away.

A New York legislator proposes an anti-treating bill. If it goes through, how will the native New Yorker get his drinks?

The man who flew from London to Paris the other day went up six thousand feet for the purpose of avoiding snowdrifts.

Vassar girls have formed a fire brigade; but it is supposed that they will dispense with the hook and ladder company.

According to a London professor the most humane way to kill an oyster is to eat him. But suppose one does not like oysters?

The California surgeon who removed his own appendix only proved that some persons will do anything to escape paying a doctor bill.

In view of the threatened baseball investigation, perhaps the umpires will take the hint and not require as much talking to this summer.

A Chicago preacher man urges a school for courtship. It always seemed to us that courtship was a branch of learning that needed no school.

The man who predicted a hard winter is mighty chesty, but there is consolation in the knowledge that he has to pay his coal bill like the rest of us.

It appears that 2,000 fewer books were published in this country last year than in 1910. This is distinctly good news to lovers of good literature.

Among the new fields in education is the proposal of a woman to teach girls to flirt. Before long the appetite to have everything taught will require a course in teaching young ducks to swim.

"If your feet are cold, you are displeased about something," says an eminent authority. It is true also that oft in the stilly night, when your wife's feet are cold, you are displeased about something.

A London magistrate has decided that a cabman cannot recover a fare from an intoxicated person, but probably London's cabmen will go right on recovering several fares at a time from intoxicated persons.

Now a Spanish prince is trying to get the royal consent to his marriage with an American girl. If the royalties only knew the truth of the matter, they would substitute entreaties for the match for mere consent, for the American girl is the queen of creation.

Twenty-five rats, dyed pink, have been let loose in the streets of Seattle for investigation purposes. But the effect of those pink rats suddenly appearing to late convivial citizens going home is likely to cause some hidden tragedies.

No one at present is quite so chesty as the man who predicted last fall a long cold winter. His coal bills, however, come in as regularly as those of the man who guessed the other way.

A London professor of physiology, discussing the prevention-of-cruelty-to-oysters campaign, says that while the oyster undoubtedly has a certain amount of nervous sensibility, it would be hard to find a more sudden or a more merciful way of killing an oyster than by eating him.

GOOD JOKES

PRESENCE OF MIND.

There are symptoms of panic in the theater.

A big man in the front row arises.

"Sit down!" he roars. "There is no danger! Sit down!"

The stampeding audience stops, turns, and faces him.

"Sit down!" he orders.

The people obediently sit down.

"I will go to the entrance and show you there is no danger whatever," the big man says.

He strolls along the aisle, reaches the exit, and rushes out.

"That's what I call presence of mind," he tells himself. "I never could have got out of there if I hadn't stopped that panic."

Poets Without Honor.

"Look here: How did these rhymes about Washington get in the paper?"

"Do you mean the poem by William Cullen Bryant?"

"That's the one. Didn't I distinctly tell you not to use any more of the amateur stuff?"

"Yes. Have you read it?"

"Me! Read it! What for? And, look here, if there's anything to pay this man Bryant for the dope it's got to come out of your pocket, mind that!"

"That's all right. I'll stand it."

And the wheels resumed revolving.

Making Use of Him.

Ruffon Wratz (in box car)—Naw! I didn't git half a night's sleep. How d'you s'pose I could sleep when you had yer cold feet in th' small o' my back all night long!

Saymold Storey—Them wuzn't my feet, pardner; them wuz a couple o' frosted turnips I wuz thawin' out.

Poor Reporting.

"I don't like the way they reported my speech," complained the new congressman.

"Why, they sprinkled in plenty of laughter and applause."

"Yes; but how about all of them gestures?"

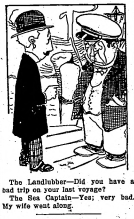
Good Deeds.

Tom—I told her father that I expected to inherit several pieces of fine property.

Dick—What did he say?

Tom—He said that deeds speak louder than words.

WHAT DID HE MEAN?



The Landlubber—Did you have a bad trip on your last voyage?

The Sea Captain—Yes; very bad. My wife went along.

Needless Alarm.

What's that? What's that?
Did someone fire?
Ah, no. 'Twas just
An auto tire.

Well, Hardly.

Bacon—I see in some parts of Australia the telephone is regarded as an amusement rather than a necessity.

Egbert—Well, they can hardly consider it an amusement when central says the line is busy, can they?

Lack of Realism.

"Did you see where some actress says that audiences do not like to see husband and wife acting as lovers on the stage."

"Of course not. It's not natural."

Announcing the Engagement.

"Miss Upperton, are you engaged to be married to Count Nocash?"

"There is absolutely no truth in the rumor. Marie, show the gentlemen the ring and give him a photograph."

Unhappy Jane.

"Poor Jane is in despair."

"What is the matter with Jane?"

"Why, she has just begun to realize that she's too fat for an actress and not fat enough for a prima donna."

Not Necessarily So.

"So Jones has become an actor."

"Has he?"

"You said so."

"No, I didn't. I said he had gone on the stage."

Supremacy.

"There is one state in the Union in which women have the upper hand without the aid of the ballot."

"Which one is that?"

"The state of matrimony."

Its Kind.

"Don't you think this open fire is a big improvement over a commonplace radiator?"

"Certainly; in fact, it is a grate relief."

As He Saw It.

Mother (to Willy, who has been in mischief)—You ought to be ashamed of yourself.

Willy—Well, I won't do it again, but being ashamed won't do any good.—Fliegende Blatter.

Lost Opportunity.

Patrick, Jr.—The book says the first flag we ever had was made from a petticoat.

Patrick, Sr.—Faith, what a pity it was thot the lady wasn't wearing a grane wan.—Puck.

Confidential.

Little Willie—Mr. Jones, do you like lemon pie?

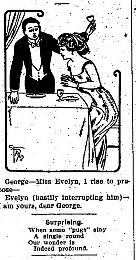
Casual Visitor—Yes, Willie.

Little Willie (anxiously)—You don't like it very much do you?

Casual Visitor (surprised)—Why do you ask, Willie?

Little Willie—Because we've got it for dessert and ma's afraid you'll want a second help.

AN INTERRUPTED TOAST.



George—Miss Evelyn, I rise to propose—

Evelyn (hastily interrupting him)—I am yours, dear George.

Surprising.

When some "pugs" stay
A single round
Our wonder is Indeed profound.

A Sign of Old Age.

"It seems to me that Worthington has been growing old rapidly during the past few years."

"Yes, his hair is becoming rather gray."

"It isn't his hair that makes him seem old to me. A man may have gray hair and still be young in spirit; but Worthington has reached the point in life where he can look at a rosy-cheeked girl and refer to her as a healthy young animal instead of calling her an angel."

Almost Miraculous.

Pierced by the bullet of an unseen foe, the hero had died in great agony.

Ten seconds later he was standing before the curtain, smiling and bowing his thanks to the applauding audience.

Beats the pulmotor, doesn't it!

Holding Him Down.

"Yep," said Silas Hayrick, "we've decided t' send that no-count Reuben t' congress."

"But why?" we asked.

"'Cuz every time we send him anywheres else he gits out on a writ o' habeas corpus."

Warmth.

"Did that investigation develop anything in the nature of the third degree?"

"It went away beyond that. When I left it was in the neighborhood of a hundred in the shade."

His Reasoning.

"Why did the organist play the wedding march so fast that the bride and groom had almost to dance up the aisle?"

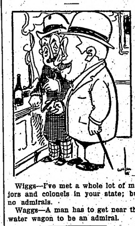
"I suppose he thought that marriage was something of a two-step."

Explanation.

He—Why do they call a wife's allowance pin money?

She—Because the average man thinks it's enough for her if a woman gets the money to buy pins enough to hold her old clothes together.

THE REASON.



Wiggs—I've met a whole lot of majors and colonels in your state; but no admirals.

Waggs—A man has to get near the water wagon to be an admiral.

Uncomplimentary.

His heart was light—
What made him blue.
The neighbors vowed
His head was, too!

A Slight Misunderstanding.

Mrs. Bings—My son in the city has got a ottermobil and he has a grodge.

Mrs. Jinks—Goody gracious! Who's the grodge aginst?

Fitting Fate.

"Why do you want to railroad this man to prison?"

"Why not? Isn't he a train robber?"

A Concrete Example.

Dodds—As one grows older there are certain things in which it is difficult to keep up one's interest. Don't you find it so?

Hobbs—Er—yes—there's the mortgage on my house, for example.

Evaporated.

"I once heard of a bridge that was built with six quarts of champagne."

"Indeed?"

"But the people who expected to profit by that bridge still use a ferry."

REMEDIES FOR RHEUMATISM

Are Many but the Important Thing Is to Enrich the Blood and Cleanse the System of Rheumatic Poison.

There are many remedies for rheumatism. Most of them are considered successful if they relieve the pain and stiffness. That means a temporary suppression of the symptoms while the disease remains in the blood to appear again on the next rainy day.

Mrs. J. W. Rapp, of R. F. D. No. 1, South Omaha, Neb., says: "Several years ago I was a sufferer from rheumatism which followed a general run-down condition and exposure to wet and dampness. The pains started in my hands, which had a sort of pricking sensation like needles were being thrust into them. As the disease grew worse the joints of my fingers became affected. They were swollen and were so painful that I could hardly bear it. Gradually the disease began to affect my limbs in the same manner. They became terribly swollen and I had to give up my work. The pains then spread all over my body and were sharp and shooting. They would suddenly shift from one part of the body to another but fortunately did not seem to affect my heart. For three months I was propped up in a chair and had to be waited on. I could not get any sleep and was losing flesh all of the time. The doctor treated me a long time but did not give much relief as the pains were as severe as ever when I quit taking his medicine. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were brought to my notice while reading a booklet and I made up my mind to give them a trial. A wonderful change came over me as soon as I commenced using the pills. They absolutely cured me from the terrible rheumatic pains and I have never had them since. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People to many persons and always explain that they cannot help giving benefit as they are a blood medicine."

A new edition of our booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free on request to anyone interested. Write for it today.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c. per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

PIMPLES ON FACE 3 YEARS

"I was troubled with acne for three long years. My face was the only part affected, but it caused great disfigurement, also suffering and loss of sleep. At first there appeared red, hard pimples which later contained white matter. I suffered a great deal caused by the itching. I was in a state of perplexity when walking the streets or anywhere before the public.

"I used pills and other remedies but they failed completely. I thought of giving up when nothing would help, but something told me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a Cuticura Booklet which I read carefully. Then I bought some Cuticura Soap and Ointment and by following the directions I was relieved in a few days. I used Cuticura Soap for washing my face, and applied the Cuticura Ointment morning and evening. This treatment brought marvelous results so I continued with it for a few weeks and was cured completely. I can truthfully say that the Cuticura Remedies are not only all, but more than they claim to be." (Signed) G. Baumel, 1015 W. 20th Place, Chicago, Ill., May 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

What She Wanted.

Before the fire on Christmas eve, two old maids were planning for the holiday.

"Sister Mallie," said the younger, "would a long stocking hold all you want for a Christmas gift?"

"No, Elvira," said the older, "but a pair of socks would."

MACARONI IN WELSH RABBIT

By Many, the Combination Is Considered Superior to That in General Use.

A new rabbit mixture for the chafing dish contains macaroni; it is really fine. Cut the macaroni in inch length pieces and boil in salted water as usual. When tender put it in the chafer with a cup of grated cheese to every cup of the macaroni. Add two tablespoons of butter, a teaspoon of salt and half a teaspoon each of paprika and pepper. When this is all hot and creamy and the cheese melted add three well beaten eggs mixed in a cup of rich cream, stir faithfully until the eggs are set then serve hot on fresh-made toast.

For a splendid rabbit without ale use one tablespoon of butter, one pint cup of cheese grated, juice of one lemon, seasoning of salt, pepper, cayenne and paprika (the exact amount will depend on the flavor of the cheese), the yolk of one egg beaten and mixed with four tablespoons of cream. Mix in the order given and at the end, just before serving, and a few drops of tabasco sauce.

MODEST COLORS WILL RULE

Simple Decorative Schemes Are in Order for the Coming Year, According to Report.

Already the question of house cleaning is being debated by thrifty housewives, and the new chintzes and cretonnes are being eagerly anticipated. Last season pattern and color ran riot, and there was a great popularity for black backgrounds on which bright colorings and large, bold designs were the correct taste.

Now we are to return to simpler decorative schemes and to small effects and neat patterns. Light grounds will be favored almost entirely covered by patterns of fruit, flowers and birds.

A new fadeless fabric for curtains is to be one of the specialties of the season. This will withstand the glare of suns and remain impervious to the eccentricities of every climate. It is made in a range of pretty colors, both plain and patterned, and is quite inexpensive.

REPLACE THE PLATE DOILIES

Table Runners, a California Idea, Find Much Favor With Hostesses in the East.

Instead of plate doilies eastern hostesses are adopting the fashion of the table runners of the California women. White Japanese toweling with blue figures or blue with white figures is bought in a roll of ten yards.

Each roll is cut into five strips and the ends hemstitched, with initials facing the hem at each end.

The runners cross one another on the table, and are arranged so each guest has an end under the plate, cup and bread and butter plate. With four at the table two runners are used, crossing at right angles; with six, two strips are used across the table and two lengthwise.

This toweling can be bought at any Japanese importer's and is inexpensive. Sometimes an extra roll is used and square napkins to match the runners are hemstitched. This makes an unusual luncheon outfit.

Chocolate Macaroons.

One ounce of grated chocolate, one tablespoonful of rice flour, a quarter of a pound of ground almonds, half a pound of sugar, three whites of eggs, half a teaspoonful of shredded almonds. Put the ground almonds and half the whites of eggs into a basin and cream well together for 15 minutes. Then add the sugar, rice flour, vanilla, grated chocolate and the remainders of the whites of eggs, and beat all together for ten minutes. Put the mixture into a bag with a plain tube, and force this out into rounds on white paper. Put the shredded almonds on the top and bake in a moderate oven for about twenty minutes.

Roast Mutton, Breton Style.

The Breton way of serving roast mutton is to push a clove of garlic into the knuckle end of the leg and to serve with it a garnish a red beans. The beans are soaked and slowly boiled until tender, then drained and turned into the pan with the meat an hour before the latter is done. Or, after draining, the beans are lightly fried in a little dripping and chopped onion and heaped round the meat as it is ready for serving.

Dried Peach Pickles.

Soak the dried peaches over night and the next day the skins can easily be removed from most of them. Pin together two half peaches of equal size with cloves and bits of cinnamon, place them in cans with an occasional almond to suggest a peach kernel, and pour over them hot, sweet spiced vinegar. Let them stand at least a week before using. Try them. They are fine.

Pineapple-Tapioca Pudding.

Soak over night one cup tapioca; in the morning drain, put in a doubler, add one-half cup water, one and one-half cups sugar, juice of two lemons, one-half pound can of sliced pineapples cut in small pieces, also the juice of the pineapple. Let boil until it looks clear; stir carefully. When done fold in the whites of three eggs, beaten to a stiff froth. Set aside to cool.

To Make Mentholatum.

Buy a ten cent bottle of vaseline and ten cents worth of menthol in the crystal form; put the menthol into the vaseline set in a warm place and stir until dissolved. For cough hold a piece about size of a pea in the mouth until dissolved. When used externally, cover with a warm wool cloth or cotton.

Effective Duster.

For wiping oiled floors, prepare an oiled duster. Ring a cloth out of kerosene and hang it out of doors until perfectly dry. All odor of kerosene disappears, and the cloth is not oily to the touch. This gathers the dust and holds it. It cleans as effectively as a damp cloth and without injury to the wood finish.

125,000 AMERICANS GO TO CANADA IN 1911.

THE YEAR 1912 WILL SHOW A GREAT INCREASE.

In a report of the House Committee (Washington) appears the following: "Canada offers a three-year homestead upon good land, easily reclaimed and cultivated, with six months' leave of absence each year and most lenient regulations."

All of which is true and it is now the part of the careful reader to consider the opportunities that exist in Western Canada which, in addition to the above, are attractive features. The evidence of these is found in the letters contributed by some of the settlers. For instance: A former Minnesotan, writing from Warner, Southern Alberta, speaks of that district, but what he says, applies generally to all of Southern Alberta. He says:

"I have seen six crops, four of them were first class, one of them a very good crop, and the other a poor crop. Government statistics for the last fifteen years show that this country has averaged about fifteen or sixteen inches of moisture. In 1910 there was only seven inches, and in 1911 twenty-two inches. The 1909 crop was about as good as I have seen in this country and we had about twelve inches of moisture, so that I am thoroughly convinced that with normal conditions, that is, from twelve to fifteen inches of moisture, and with the natural increase of population and immigration, that Southern Alberta will be one of the very best mixed farming districts in the world. We have good soil, good water, and a good climate, and altogether just as desirable a country to live in as Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa, or Wisconsin."

Hundreds of letters are on file from former American settlers, which give good reasons why the Western Canada lands are being settled so rapidly. Full particulars can be had of any Canadian Government Agent, who will furnish literature and give low rate certificates. Excursions are being run daily.

Women

From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. Estella Gillispie, R.F.D. FRED GRANT DEAD

SON OF FAMOUS CIVIL WAR CHIEFTAIN IS VICTIM OF HEART FAILURE.

HEART FAILURE IS CAUSE

Had Just Returned From South—Wife and Nurse Alone With Him When Vital Organ Stopped.

New York, N. Y.—General Grant is dead. The news, flashed from the apartments of Major General Frederick Dent Grant, at the Hotel Buckingham sent a shock through the city such as that which startled the whole country upon the death of his father 27 years ago.

The news was far more sudden. It came less than an hour after the first alarm had been sounded that General Grant was seriously ill. The alarm itself had come before it had been generally learned that General Grant was even in the city, as his presence here had been kept a secret.

The cause of death was heart failure following diabetes and attending digestive disturbances.

Mrs. Grant and a nurse were alone with the general when he died, there having been no premonition of his sudden critical illness. The general had been removed to the hotel from St. Luke's hospital where, unknown to the public generally, he had been taken for treatment.

Major General Frederick Dent Grant the eldest son of Ulysses S. Grant the eighteenth president of the United States, was born at St. Louis, Mo., May 20, 1850. He was with his father during a part of the Civil war, witnessed the capture of Forts Henry and Donelson and went with his father's command through the Virginia campaign. He witnessed also the fights at Corinth, Vicksburg, Nashville and Petersburg.

After the war young Grant entered West Point and was graduated in 1871. For a year he served as a civil engineer for the Union Pacific railway and in 1872, accompanied General Sherman on a trip to Europe.

He resigned his commission as colonel in the army in 1881 and for a number of years was engaged in various enterprises. He was appointed minister to Austria by President Harrison in 1888 but resigned on the election of Mr. Cleveland to the presidency. Under the reform administration of Major Strong he was one of New York's police commissioners, but at the outbreak of war with Spain in 1898 he became colonel in the Fourteenth New York infantry and was appointed brigadier general of volunteers on May 27. On February 18, 1901, he was appointed brigadier general, U. S. A., and reached the grade of major general five years later. He served in Porto Rico and commanded the military district of San Juan. He was in command of various brigades in the Philippine islands for several years, returning to the United States in 1902.

GENERAL FREDERICK DENT GRANT

He commanded the department of Texas, 1902-04; department of lakes, 1904; department of the east, 1904-08; and the department of the lakes again in 1908 and finally in the department of the east to which he was last appointed in the summer of 1910 to succeed Major General Leonard Wood.

In 1874 he married Ida M. Honore, daughter of Henry Hamilton Honore, of Chicago.

MISS CLARA BARTON IS DEAD

RETIRED IN 1904 AFTER YEARS OF WORK FOR HUMANITY.

Cared for Soldiers on Battlefields—Made Famous Throughout the World by Her Kindness.

Washington, D. C.—Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross Society, died at her home in Glen Echo, Md. The cause of her death was chronic pneumonia with which she was stricken about a year ago. Her brother, Stephen Barton, of Boston, was with her when she died.

Miss Barton was born at Oxford, Mass., in 1821.

Clara Barton might properly be called "Florence Nightingale of America." Like her British prototype, her works of mercy were not confined to her native land, but were carried even into the Eastern hemisphere. She will be written down in history as the founder of the Red Cross in America, but her powerful personality also made an indelible impression upon the international organization itself through her active participation in the periodical conferences at Geneva, Carlsrube, Rome, Vienna and St. Petersburg.

Miss Barton was 40 years of age when she first turned her attention to the great works of humanity which have made her name famous.

Her experience as a school teacher and the organizer of public school systems in New Jersey taught her methodical habits and gave her the experience in executive work which made her a commanding figure in the direction of Red Cross affairs.

That organization was established in America in 1881 and Miss Barton was its president from that date until 1904. Before that time she had made a name for herself by services on battlefields, beginning in the civil war and extending through the Franco-Prussian war. Congress recognized her good offices in the first case by an appropriation of $15,000 to be disbursed by her in searching for missing men after the various great battles of the war.

Work Becomes Extended.

Miss Barton's work became more extended with the organization of the American Red Cross and covered the new field of catastrophes in time of peace. She distributed relief to the sufferers from the Johnstown flood and went to Russia in 1892 to carry food to the famine sufferers there. In the following year she was ministering to the destitute survivors of the tidal wave which struck South Carolina and Florida. In 1896 she was aiding the Armenian families decimated by the Turks, and when yellow fever appeared among the American troops in Cuba following the battles around Santiago, it was Clara Barton who at the request of President McKinley, organized field hospitals and personally spent her time on the battle lines. Her last work of national importance was in connection with the great Galveston flood relief in 1900.

She resided for the last seven years at her home at Glen Echo, Md., on the banks of the upper Potomac. During her life time she received many decorations from foreign countries in recognition of her services to humanity and her varied experiences have been recorded in various forms in her liberal contributions to literature, mostly relating to the activities of the Red Cross.

EDUCATIONAL AND DEMONSTRATION FARM AT DULUTH.

NEW FARM SCHOOL

WORK ON DULUTH STATE INSTITUTION AND DEMONSTRATION FARM TO START SOON.

OF HOMECROFT TRACTS

Families Will Have to Pay Only 5 Per Cent on Money Invested by State in Land Occupied.

Duluth.—Duluth is to have an agricultural school and a demonstration farm located near the city on a street car line soon to be built. This school will differ materially from the other agricultural schools in Minnesota, in order to meet the conditions that are peculiar to the northeastern part of the state.

The school, which was authorized by the last legislature, has an appriation of $65,000 for the purchase of land and equipment in the next two years. The farm, consisting of 240 acres, has already been purchased at a cost of $12,000, and is in process of development. The plans for the arrangement and conduct of the farm were made by Prof. Andrew Boss, of the College of Agriculture at St. Anthony Park, and, without material change, will undoubtedly be adopted by the board of regents of the State University.

Four Divisions Planned.

The plan, as shown on the diagram herewith, provides for the division of the farm into four separate divisions; a dairy and stock farm of 160 acres, the stock to consist of dairy cows, swine and sheep; a co-operative creamery, sanitary milk plant and home dairy; a truck farm of ten acres, with greenhouse and hotbed equipment, and a twenty-acre combination, poultry, orchard and small fruit farm. The remaining land is to be divided into from one to five-acre homecroft tracts, to be developed by families employed at the farm or elsewhere.

The entire farm, including all the units, is to be supervised and directed by a general superintendent trained in agricultural science, with a broad, practical working knowledge of farm work and rural affairs. The dairy farm is to be under the immediate management of a practical farmer and dairyman capable of demonstrating to those seeking knowledge any phase of dairy management and production.

Creamery to Aid Farmers.

The creamery is to be operated separately from the dairy farm by an expert creamery man under the supervision of the superintendent. It will be the aim of the creamery not only to provide means for handling the milk produced on the dairy farm, but also to be a co-operative creamery at the service of the farmers contiguous to it.

The truck garden will be under the management of an experienced gardener capable of giving instruction in gardening and greenhouse work. The poultry and fruit farm will be in charge of an expert in poultry and fruit raising, and will be equipped and prepared to give thorough instruction and demonstration in these branches.

The main object of the farm will be to educate by experience, to develop the farm and equipment, and to operate it so far as possible with the help supplied by those who enroll as students, and who will be required to work at least part of the time.

Can Choose Line of Farming.

The five-acre homecroft tracts will be developed as family truck gardens, small fruit gardens or poultry farms, according to the inclination of those undertaking their development with a limited capital. The buildings are to be furnished by the state and each unit developed by a family without further aid than supervision and advice. The property is to remain in possession of the state, but will remain the home of the one developing it so long as his services are satisfactory. An interest charge of 5 per cent on money invested in land and equipment will be collected as rental and the party operating the tract is to own all produce grown on the place while he operates it.

On the dairy farm it is proposed to expend this year $5,000 for clearing. Nine thousand dollars will be expended for buildings, $1,000 for fences, and $2,000 for equipment. Next year $3,000 will be spent for clearing and about $16,000 for buildings. Five thousand dollars will be spent to prepare and equip the truck farm; and about $6,000 on the poultry and fruit farm.

It is hoped to have everything in readiness to do full work in eighteen months, though it may be possible to give some service before that time. Dean Woods and Prof. Boss are in Duluth today making final preparations so that active work may be started at once on the preparations for buildings, fences and other equipment.

Dormitory Facilities.

The buildings will have dormitory facilities for those who may attend at the beginning, and as fast as applications warrant and the school grows, the legislature will be asked for additional school buildings and equipment. The peculiar nature of the soil, the problems presented, and the unique method by which it is proposed to handle them, make this school one of the most interesting in the country. The soil in the northeastern part of the state is as rich in agricultural possibilities as its mines are in iron ore. This school will undoubtedly awaken and stimulate the people to see its desirability as an agricultural proposition, and the near future see this section of the state populated as it should be, by a large, prosperous, agricultural community.

FARMERS TESTING.

Countrymen in Southeast Minnesota Awake to Situation.

St. Paul.—Farmers in the vicinity of St. Charles have awakened to the necessity of testing their seed corn. This is indicated by the report of W. E. Gordon, manager of the People's Telephone Company, of St. Charles. Mr. Gordon reports to M. L. Lane, commercial superintendent of the Northwestern Telephone Exchange Company, as follows:

Of the 455 farmers called on this exchange, I find that 385 have already thoroughly tested their seed corn and the remainder, though they have not yet tested, would not think of planting until they have done so.

"However, I found quite a number of farmers whose own seed corn failed to germinate and who were obliged to buy. These are testing the seed purchased."

Mr. Lane issued a second letter to managers of local exchanges and district managers, urging them to take immediate action, if they have not already done so, to comply with his first letter, requesting that each farmer having a telephone be called and instructed to test his seed corn.

BURGLARS FIRE, AND ROB

Fire Prairie at New Duluth and Then Loot Store.

Duluth.—Burglars set several grass fires to the windward of New Duluth, a suburb of this city. When the flames swept toward the town the police and citizens started out to fight them. Then the robbers broke into Frank Brand's general store and stole $800 worth of clothing and jewelry. The fire was put out and the police are seeking the robbers.

OFFERS TROPHY CUP.

State Fair Board Will Give Prizes for Best County Exhibits.

Minneapolis.—Three solid silver trophy cups, valued at $250 each, will be given as extra prizes for county exhibits in the department of agriculture at the state fair this year.

The counties will be divided into three sections, as usual, northern, central and southern, and a cup goes with each first prize.

FLAT FEE SYSTEM.

University Regents Make Fixed Schedule for Students.

Minneapolis.—A flat system of students' fees, with the abolition of special laboratory and other charges, was adopted by the university regents. The annual fees hereafter will be:

Science, literature and art, $30; mines, $55; engineering, $50; chemistry, $55; education, $30; agriculture, $30; law, $65; medicine, $150; dentistry, $150; pharmacy, $82.50.

The diploma fee of $5 also is abolished. Luther W. Parker, University of North Carolina, and Johns Hopkins university, was appointed as instructor in romance languages. A. S. Edwards, of the graduate school of Cornell university, was named instructor of philosophy and psychology, J. Theodore Geissendoerfer of the University of Pennsylvania, was elected as instructor in the department of German.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis.—No season at the Bijou would be complete without a presentation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and that time-honored play will be the offering at that playhouse the week of April 21st.

Winona Aviator Injured.

Winona.—Leon Richardson, a Winona young man who left his position as auditor for the Winona Railway & Light Co. to become an aviator in Chicago, was injured in a fall there, according to information received by Winona friends. The accident occurred on the aviation instruction field at Cicero, Ill., where he had been taking the course. Richardson, who is the heaviest man in the flying business, ascended but lost control of the machine and was dashed to the ground.

Rochester Man Injured on Street.

Rochester.—A. G. Rich, after dodging a large automobile, was run down by a horse and buggy and sustained painful injuries. He was made unconscious by the collision, one wheel passing over his shoulder, the other lacerating his legs.

WASHINGTON GOSSIP

Radium Quest Interesting the Scientists

RADIUM $1,000,000 AN OUNCE

WASHINGTON.—Austria has not, according to the United States geological survey, a world monopoly in the production of radium, as was stated in a consular report from W. L. Loownie of Carlsbad. This report recorded the purchase of the only two mines under private ownership producing the ores from which radium is made. The purchase price was stated to be $600,000, and to complete the world monopoly in radium by the Austrian government.

The geological survey announces that this monopoly is a myth. It is true that the Austrian mines and the Austrian government heretofore have furnished the bulk of the radium salts existing in the world, but at present radium is being manufactured in three other countries, including the United States.

Sweden is producing radium from kolm, the English are producing it from mines in Wales, and it is extracted also from ores brought from the United States. There is a large deposit of radium producing ore in western Colorado, and it is reported that some is being produced in Australia.

The Colorado deposits produce uranium and vanadium, the latter an essential in making some of the new high-grade steel alloys. It is mined for the vanadium, but the ore carries two or three per cent. of uranium. Some idea can be had of the microscopic trace of radium in the original ore from the fact that ten tons of the uranium has to be handled to get between 20 or 30 milligrams of radium.

There are no very exact statistics of radium available, but the whole quantity in the world, according to the geological survey, is probably not over two or three ounces. As to the value, it is largely nominal like that of the biggest diamonds. It is worth whatever the holders can get for it. Sir William Ramsey, the head of the English corporation producing radium, said about a year ago that it was worth £30,000,000 sterling a pound. In his last report on the subject he had knocked off £10,000,000 sterling on this estimate, but a little variation like that was not thought to matter when there was no appreciable fraction of a pound of the stuff in existence.

What is more to the purpose in fixing the value is the fact that there are now several radium banks in the world where tubes containing a microscopic speck of radium are stored and rented out to physicians at $40 a day. Even then there is little known about the medical value of radium. It is known to be of value in treating lupus, which is a form of tuberculosis attacking the tissues, usually of the face.

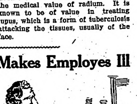
Seeing Much Gold Makes Employes Ill

FEAR of the spread of the white plague and tyhoid fever were relegated to the dusty past the other day, when it became known that a new ailment had seized upon the woman clerks of the treasury. So swift has been the disease in its progress that it has been necessary to establish an emergency room in the basement of the treasury, and an average of five cases a day are treated.

Currencitis is the name of the new enemy that has spread terror among the fair clerks. Its symptoms are an acute attack of dizziness, sharp pains in the neck, followed by a severe headache. So far, the medical profession of the District has been unable to determine whether the ailment is conveyed by germs.

Miss Iva Eichelberger, who is in charge of the new emergency room, has made a study of the cases brought under her observation. Miss Eichelberger was surprised to see the great number of young woman clerks who would stumble into her room, gasp for a bottle of smelling salts and then fling themselves upon a couch, complaining of racking headaches, necks stiff as boards, and a dizzy sensation.

After a brief treatment, they would recover and go back to their desks. It was then that Miss Eichelberger suggested to Chief Clerk Wilmeth the installation of an emergency room, patterned after wards in hospitals, with white enameled cots, nurses' costumes for the matrons, and a full equipment of medicines.



No sooner had the idea been conceived than it was put into effect. The matron's room was converted from a dismal cheerless place into a bright, wholesome appearing ward that any hospital would be proud to claim as its own. Two white enameled cots were placed along the wall. Waterproof paint turned somber walls into attractive ones, and the matrons shone even more splendidly in spotless garbs, topped off with lace bonnets.

Then the attention of Miss Eichelberger was turned toward the disease itself. Test tubes were purchased, with her own funds; a miscroscope was procured, and the midnight oil consumed. And this is what was revealed—that currencitis was caused by the glare of the piles of shimmering gold pieces and dazzling silver present in the treasury.

Green eyeshades now are being affected my many, and a falling off in the disease is noticeable. However, the emergency room will be retained.

Ancient Mummy for National Museum

ANIMALS KILLED BY ROOSEVELT

QUARTERS for the famous African collection of Theodore Roosevelt are to be provided in the National museum at Washington, and work is proceeding at a lively rate. The National museum, together with the Smithsonian institution, will, in a few years, contain the most interesting collection in the world, not excepting that of the famous British museum in London.

Side by side with the regular progress in this field comes the report of an ancient mummy found in a newly opened tomb at Abydos in Egypt; and no sooner had the telegraph news reached Washington than a syndicate was formed to bring it on for exhibition in this country, reminding us of the day when Barnum alone was ready to expend money and effort to secure such curiosities, and discovered "the petrified giant man." Now there is an association of scientists and experts organized to secure these valuable ancient relics for the museum at Washington and those of other large American cities.

The latest mummy is from a tomb of the Twelfth Dynasty, which reaches back to the time of Shishak, who sacked Jerusalem in the time of Rehoboam. The skeleton of a woman is revealed with a necklace of beads about her throat and three scarabs, one of them a superb amethyst, on her left hand. The most remarkable thing is that the head retained its long, black hair, under which were ornaments of every description, including a nose-ring such as is still worn by the princess in British India.

In the land of the Pharaohs the tombs and funereal pomp of mummies give the story of a past civilization such as even the pyramids, the Sphinx and the tablets of countless pylons and statues have failed to preserve.

There is a wizardry and mystery about these "dealings with the dead." This teaching of the living at the hands of the ancient mummies always attracts and rivets the attention of the curious and learned, who love the mysterious lore and infinite variety of the "wisdom of the Egyptians."—News Letter.

Something "Dropped"; It Was a Hammer

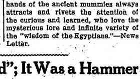
AN ironworker, swinging between earth and sky from a steel beam on the top of the Munsey building, near Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, dropped a heavy riveting hammer shortly after noon the other day, and then had almost an attack of heart failure when he realized what that hammer would do if it hit some one on the street below.

Just as the ironworker dropped the implement, Judge J. A. C. Groner of Norfolk, president of the Benning Sand and Gravel company, was walking in front of the building, talking to his old friend, Judge R. A. Wade of San Francisco. They were stepping briskly along, about a foot and a half apart. Mr. Groner was saying:

"And let me tell you, judge, that when that Chicago convention gets going you're going to hear something drop."

B-i-f-f!

The heavy riveting hammer shot downward so suddenly it appeared to be a solid shaft of black, so rapid was its flight. Just as the last word was out of Mr. Groner's mouth the hammer smacked against the sidewalk. It sounded like a rifle shot, and the two men didn't have a chance to dodge an inch.



The hammer, however, bounded high in the air and leaped into the street, where it broke in two.

A few minutes later a scared ironworker appeared at the front door of the Munsey building.

"You didn't see anything of a hammer, did you?" he asked.

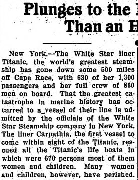
TITANIC SINKS; 1,400 DROWNED

GREATEST MARINE DISASTER IN HISTORY.

Giant Liner Strikes an Iceberg And Plunges to the Bottom in Less Than an Hour After.

New York.—The White Star liner Titanic, the world's greatest steamship has gone down some 500 miles off Cape Race, with 630 of her 1,300 passengers and her full crew of 860 men on board. That the greatest catastrophe in marine history has occurred to a vessel of their line is admitted by the officials of the White Star Steamship company in New York. The liner Carpathia, the first vessel to come within sight of the Titanic, rescued all the Titanic's life boats in which were 670 persons most of them women and children. Many women and children, however, have perished.

When the Carpathia reached the ill-fated vessel no sign of life was to be seen anywhere, the mountainous ocean swells giving much evidence to the stupendous disaster. Early reports stated that all the passengers and the crew of the Titanic had been taken off by the Allen liner's Virginian and the Parisian, and the Carpathia, but wireless message received here discredit these reports in every detail. No hope is held out at the offices of the White Star line that any man on board has survived to tell the story of the final sinking of the levithian, although some of the women in the boats may have witnessed the sinking. Only by a miracle, it is pointed out, could any person who stood by the ship escape the great vessel's powerful suction as she sank to the bottom. The Titanic carried the most notable list of pasengers ever borne across the Atlantic by one vessel. Homecoming American tourists postponed their sailing weeks ago so as to ride the new wonder of the season on her maiden voyage.



The Steamship Titanic.

Dispatches state that the Titanic went down at 2:20 o'clock Monday morning. The delay in the transmission of the news is attributed to the fact that all dispatches have been subject to difficult relays.

The collision of the Titanic with an iceberg is now known to have been a headon crash that occurred while the liner was proceeding little less than her best speed. She was a day ahead of her schedule and it is considered probable that an attempt to make a record-breaking voyage was the hope of her crew when she entered the ice field.

Her forward plates were completely wrecked. A gaping wound opening below her water line and letting the water into her forward compartments.

In the meantime the lifeboats were manned and into them were placed as many of the women and children as they could hold. The boats were put off while there was yet some hope of saving the Titanic afloat until wireless could summon help. Later and more conservative estimates tell of great bravery on the part of the men passengers. There was a minimum of disorder. John Jacob Astor, who, with his bride, was returning from their long honeymoon aboard, saw his bride placed in a life boat safely away. Col. Astor was drowned. The work of getting the lifeboats away, the work of allaying the fears of the great crowd of passengers as much as possible, the work of keeping the pumps in operation and the engines throbbing—these tasks and countless others were directed by Captain Smith, the venerable commander of the Titanic, and before her advent the commander of the Olympic who displayed almost superhuman power of mind and body at the world's most horrible sea disaster, crowned his long and honorable service on the high seas.

A wireless message from the Virginia states that the occupants of the small boats which she picked up have been transferred to the Carpathia which is proceeding to New York.

The Titanic struck the iceberg at 1:25 Sunday night and foundered at 2:20 Monday morning.

At daybreak the Carpathia arrived on the scene and her passengers and crew brought the small boats with their precious human cargo into New York.

The boats which rushed to the Titanic's aid found only the scattered lifeboats and a dismal scene of wreckage.

"Sinking by the head and women are being rushed into the lifeboats," were the last words that sputtered into the wireless room of the Virginian from the Titanic. All through the night and until her wireless station was silenced over hundreds of miles of seas from the antennace of the giant liner flashed the mystic and magic "S. O. S.," the world wide cry of distress on the ocean.

Every wireless operator within range of the doomed vessel dropped other messages to locate and many relayed the fatal message to the world.

The collision occurred in latitude 41.46 North and longitude 50.14 West, 1,150 miles east of New York and 450 miles south of Cape Race, the most westerly point of Newfoundland. Contrary to earlier dispatches there was no storm when the vessel struck. The weather was clear and calm.

Almost as soon as the Virginian picked up the distress signal it was recorded by the operator on the Olympic, the Titanic's sister ship, and next to her the largest vessel afloat. This was at midnight. At that hour the Olympic was 200 miles from New York enroute to Southampton.

MRS. JOHN JACOB ASTOR.

The Olympic forged ahead under full steam, but wireless dispatches indicate that she reached the scene too late to be of any assistance.

The Baltic, famous for her rescue of passengers of the steamer Republic and for her Jack Binns, who sat aloft and braved death to summon help—was the next ship to pick up the brief story of the Titanic's plight.

She was on her way from New York to Livepool but turned about and put on full speed toward the Titanic's position. The Parisian, according to her messages reached the flotilla of rescue ships shortly after the Baltic.

A wireless message from Captain Haddock confirmed the fears of the White Star Line officials that all but the 670 women and children who escaped in the small boat from the $10,000,000 steamship had perished. A part of this message was witheld, but enough was divulged to make certain an appalling account of the catastrophe. Not until Captain Haddock flashed "Horrible disaster — all but 670 lost," would the White Star officials believe the largest ship ever launched had gone down on her maiden voyage. The scene in the White Star Line offices was pitiful. Brought to a realization of the stupenduous wreck—the complete destruction of the fruit of their dreams—gray haired men—many of them veteran seamen, wept.

BILLION TONS OF IRON IN UTAH

JOSEPH SELLWOOD SAYS RESOURCES OF FAR WEST MAY BE NECESSARY IN FUTURE.

GENERAL SUPPLY IS LOW.

Thinks Time Will Come When Steel Plants Will Be Built on Pacific Coast—Army Appropriations Passed.

Washington, D. C. — An estimate that the ores held by the United States Steel corporation would be exhausted within 25 or 30 years and that the natural resources of the Far West would be raised, was made before the house steel trust investigation committee by Joseph Sellwood, an ore expert, who says he has scoured the North American continent in search of merchantable ore.

Mr. Sellwood told the committee that in Utah there were known to be 1,000,000,000 tons of merchantable ore. This ore can be used to make steel just as well as any other ore, but it is not near coke or coal or fluxing material, he said.

Several years ago Mr. Sellwood explored the Utah ores for James J. Hill the late John W. Gates and the late E. H. Harriman.

Mr. Sellwood thought the time would come when it would be practical to build steel plants on the Pacific coast and told of when Gates and others had considered erecting a steel plant at Los Angeles. With the completion of the Panama canal the availability of the Western ore it was said would increase.

Mr. Sellwood said there were deposits of 55 per cent metallic iron ore at Moose mountain, Ontario, aggregating 100,000,000 tons and at Antikocan, Ontario, 10,000,000 tons. In Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, he said, there were similar deposits with which he was not familiar. Ore deposits in Alaska, he said, should be discounted.

From hearsay, he declared, he would estimate the merchantable ores in Alabama at 1,000,000,000 tons.

Senator Bailey Ill.

Senator Bailey is ill and threatened with walking typhoid fever. He sent word to his colleagues that his condition was so much worse as to prevent his participation in the senate's consideration of tariff measures and asked that they proceed without him. The Democratic minority, in courtesy to Mr. Bailey, the ranking Democrat on the finance committee, has been delaying its action.

Army Appropriation Bill Passed.

The senate passed the army appropriation bill carrying $95,314,710 or $1,537,453 more than when it passed the house and $2,726,925 more than last year's bill. Senator Warren said the increase had been made necessary by the economy wave which swept over congress last year and caused unwarranted reductions.

Washington, D. C. — Frank C. Lowery, of the Federal Sugar Refining company of New York, testifying before the senate finance committee on the house free sugar bill, admitted that the company he represented was paying for the free sugar propaganda and was a leading advocate of the measure. He agreed with Republican members, who assert that enactment of the bill would wipe out the entire domestic production of sugar.

W. H. Baird of Detroit and W. K. Winterhalter of San Francisco, for the beet sugar industry, opposed the bill.

Senator Smoot of the senate finance committee is preparing a substitute for the house bill which probably among other provisions will abolish the Dutch standard. It is understood generally that Senator Smoot is responding to a request from the sugar men, for a reduction, fixing a rate which may not soon be disturbed.

In an amendment proposed to the river and harbor bill pending before the senate commerce committee Senator McCumber of North Dakota asks $75,000 for the Missouri river from Kansas City to Lebeau, S. D., and $150,000 for snagging and bank improvement from Lebeau, S. D., to Fort Benton, Mont.

Protest Steenerson Bill.

Washington.—Asst. Atty. Gen. Knaebel and Assistant Secretary of the Interior Thompson have forwarded communications to the house Indian committee protesting against the passage of the Steenerson bill, which directs the secretary of the interior to issue patents in fee to allottments in the White Earth reservation that have been contested by the government. The Steenerson bill was introduced in the interests of persons who purchased land from Indians, purchases that have not been questioned, and against which no charge of fraud has been made. The department officials object to the enactment at this time of legislation such as is reported by Mr. Steenerson. They suggest that legislation of the kind should be deferred pending further inquiry at White Earth.

THOMAS B. CATRON.

After being sworn in as United States senator from New Mexico, Mr. Catron drew a card which determined that his term shall end in 1917.

Washington, D. C. — President Taft and Secretary Stimson are severely arraigned in a sensational report on the Ainsworth case presented to the house by the military affairs committee.

Secretary Stimson is charged with having committed a "great and irreparable wrong" and a "flagrant misuse of official authority" when last February he suspended General Ainsworth from his duties as adjutant general of the army and charged him with insubordination. That the president and Secretary Stimson prejudiced the case, that the accusations against the general were based upon prejudice and that the secretary of war has an "erroneous idea" of his relation to congress, are some of the conclusions reached by a majority of the committee, of which Representative Hayes of Virginia is chairman.

Following General Ainsworth's relief from duty and when a courtmartial seemed probable, the president permitted him to retire from the army because of his long service. The report follows an investigation of General Ainsworth's relief from duty, set afoot by a resolution by Representative Watkins of Louisiana.

Criticising the relief of General Ainsworth the report declares the "worst feature of it was that this officer of long and distinguished service had no tribunal to which he could appeal with any hope of justice or fair treatment."

The majority of the committee conclude that General Ainsworth had been guilty of no act which justified the letter of suspension from Secretary Stimson and "that the charges had origin in a determination to drive General Ainsworth from active service and have nothing to support them but bare assertion, coupled with misrepresentation and suppression of the truth."

Indian Appropriation Bill Passed.

The Indian bill, carrying approximately $7,500,000, was passed by the house. It now goes to the senate where five other general appropriation bills are pending.

Washington, D. C. Government supervision of grain and cotton exchanges as the relief from violent fluctuation in prices of commodities and the safeguard against universal speculation and gambling, was proposed by W. B. Thompson, former president of the New Orleans stock exchange who appeared before the house committee on agriculture in opposition to the anti-option bills.

Chas. B. Pierce of the Chicago Board of Trade declared that speculation in the grain exchange was no more than the speculation a man dealt in when he bought a grocery store.

In concluding the testimony, W. J. McCabe, a Duluth broker, assailed the bucket shop, which he said did not come into competition with brokers' offices, and which, in his opinion, carried on business illegally.

A charge that Wall street and the big corporations are controlling the house "money trust" inquiry was made by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, Republican, in a resolution which would compel every member to disclose his business and corporation affiliations.

Each member of the house would have to file his own bank holdings and those of his family. Names of members who failed to do so would be published in a congressional record "blacklist."

In a statement explaining the purpose of his resolution Mr. Lindbergh declared some committee members are controlled by persons whose personal work is hostile to the public interest.

Advocates Cut in Wool Rates.

Washington, D. C. — Radical reductions in freight rates on wool from western points to eastern destinations were prescribed by the interstate commerce commission. The commission held existing rates on wool were unreasonably high; that the blanket system of making those rates should be broken up and graded rates established; that the rates on wool in bales should be lower by about 15 per cent than those on wool in sacks and that there should be a readjustment on classification.

RESULTS MAKE HIM SURE OF CONTROLLING STATE CONVENTION.

HAS 65 OF DELEGATION.

Woodrow Wilson is Easily Victor in Democratic Race, Getting 74 to Champ Clark's Two.

Philadelphia, Penn. — The primary election in Pennsylvania resulted in a landslide for Colonel Roosevelt. As the returns continue to come in, the victory for the Roosevelt adherents becomes more complete. Of the 64 delegates elected in the 32 districts, 53 are pledged to vote for Roosevelt.

Added to this is the probability that the Republican state convention, which will choose 12 delegates at large to the national convention, will be controlled by the anti-Taft element, insuring at least 65 delegates for Roosevelt from this state.

Taft Men Stunned.

The Republican organization leaders are stunned by the overwhelming defeat of the Taft candidates. The Roosevelt campaign managers are celebrating their victory to the fullest extent.

With the exception of one or two districts in the state, Woodrow Wilson will have 74 of the 76 delegates from Pennsylvania to the Democratic national convention. In this city Taft got seven of the twelve national delegates. In the Twenty-eighth congressional district the two Democratic national delegates elected are favorable to Champ Clark.

Reuben O. Moon, who has been a leader on the Republican side of congress for several sessions, was decisively defeated for renomination. His successful opponent is George W. Edmonds, Republican-Keystone candidate.

Congressman Michael Donahue won the Republican as well as the Democratic and Keystone nominations in the Fifth Philadelphia district.

The Roosevelt delegates in Allegheny county, including Pittsburg, to the Chicago convention have been elected with the possible exception of one.

John Dalzell appears to have been renominated for congress in the Thirtieth district by a small margin, but the renomination of A. J. Barchfeld in the Thirty-second is in doubt.

Senators Penrose and Oliver and Governor Tener, who were confidently slated for delegates at large, cannot now even sit in the national convention. The Progressive Republicans will nominate a state treasurer and four congressmen at large.

BROKER IS LUCKY.

Lichstern Will Clean Up a Million in Wheat.

Chicago, April 15.—After a year's bitter fighting, while awaiting favorable developments in the wheat market, Adolph J. Lichstern now bids fair to reap a million dollars in profits from his manipulation of May wheat.

About a year ago Mr. Lichstern was reported as having approximately 7,000,000 bushels of May wheat. A week ago he is supposed to have had nearly 20,000,000 bushels. His holdings meantime have varied between 10,000,000 and 30,000,000 bushels. On this wheat he has been paying carrying charges that will approximate $7,500 a day and was in the hole $2,000,000. Mr. Lichstern las year was forcing the fighting and giving no quarter. This year he has been on the defensive and has been forced to buy continuously to keep the market at a figure equal to that at which he first contracted for his May wheat.

At a time when it appeared as if nothing except the enlistment of most unusual influences would help Mr. Lichstern, there came the reports of damage to the soft winter wheat in the Ohio valley, and prices started aloft.

The advantage was grasped quickly as it was offered and Mr. Lichstern began unloading the wheat he has been carrying through two seasons, and which it looked as though he would have to carry for still another, for within sixty days the next crop of May wheat will be coming in.

Man in Runaway Balloon.

Cossonay, Switzerland. — The Swiss Aero club's balloon, St. Gothard, is somewhere above the clouds with a man aboard who is totally ignorant of handling the air craft. The balloon was returning from a flight with a pilot and three passengers. During an attempt to land the basket was blown against a rock by a gust of wind and the pilot and two of the passengers were thrown out. Thus lightened the balloon shot up to a height of 15,000 feet and whirled away with the third passenger.

Eastern Millers Buyers.

Winnipeg, Man. — Eastern millers were heavy buyers of Canadian wheat in Duluth. One million bushels were sold by Minnipeg holders to this class of buyers. Sensational news from Chicago of a late winter wheat crop was the cause of a panic and a big business was done on the local exchange. The Canadian Northern railway decided to discontinue grain shipments to Duluth, and lifted the embargo at Port Arthur, and will accept all grain shipments for Port Arthur terminals.

Edward D. Easton, one of the biggest manufacturers of talking machines in the world, has an idea that everybody is as much interested in grand opera as he is. He gives weekly concerts at his home and makes all his servants, who represent various nationalities, listen to them. Once a Swedish housemaid gave signs of intense satisfaction at the hearing a particularly loud and shrill record by the great soprano, Lina Cavalieri.

"So, you like that?" asked Mr. Easton, all puffed up because his grand opera had made such a hit.

"Ay t'ink it bane grand," replied Alma. "It sound to me just lak de way de Ireesh cook she cry las, when hossban' die."—Popular Magazine.

COFFEE HURTS
One in Three.

It is difficult to make people believe that coffee is a poison to at least one person out of every three, but people are slowly finding it out, although thousands of them suffer terribly before they discover the fact.

A New York hotel man says: "Each time after drinking coffee I became restless, nervous and excited, so that I was unable to sit five minutes in one place, was also inclined to vomit and suffer from loss of sleep, which got worse and worse.

"A lady said that perhaps coffee was the cause of my trouble, and suggested that I try Postum. I laughed at the thought that coffee hurt me, but she insisted so hard that I finally had some Postum made. I have been using it in place of coffee ever since, for I noticed that all my former nervousness and irritation disappeared. I began to sleep perfectly, and the Postum tasted as good or better than the old coffee, so what was the use of sticking to a beverage that was injuring me?

"One day on an excursion up the country I remarked to a young lady friend on her greatly improved appearance. She explained that some time before she had quit using coffee and taken to Postum. She had gained a number of pounds and her former palpitation of the heart, humming in the ears, trembling of the hands and legs and other disagreeable feelings had disappeared. She recommended me to quit coffee and take Postum and was very much surprised to find that I had already made the change.

"She said her brother had also received great benefits from leaving off coffee and taking on Postum." "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

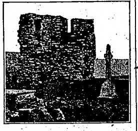
RELIC OF FIFTH CENTURY



On the Island of Bardsey, in the Irish sea, is a ruined tower that is a relic of the fifth century, being a memorial to the thousands of "saints" who are buried there, according to tradition. The island in ancient times had a great reputation for sanctity, and its abbey was the scene of many pilgrimages. To be buried in its soil was a thing much to be desired, and it is believed that more than 50,000 "saints" gained this privilege.

WIGS FROM SPUN GLASS.

One of those mysteries of life which for ages man has, at certain periods, devoted his highest power of thought, concerns the inexplicable loss of that adornment, which, in his youth, nature provided for his head. Innumerable have been the means devised for warding off the inevitable.

Entirely original is the solution lately devised by a Viennese scientist. An almost invisible hook of golden wire, to which is fastened a living hair, is inserted in the bald pate of him who would regain his youthful charm. The hooks are sterilized and the operation is almost painless. About 300 hairs can be inserted in an hour by a skilled operator. Each hair, it is estimated, will remain in perfect state for five years. Thus may one endowed with sufficient patience and cash regain that of which nature has deprived him.

So great has become the demand for hair wigs, braids, puffs and the like, that wig makers are at a loss where to get material for the manufacture of their product. In parts of France wigs have been made from fibers of plants, and from horse hair split and brightened, but the result has not been satisfactory. Spun glass is now heralded as the perfect substitute. Any degree of color or fineness can be obtained. The weight is very small, the luster like that of real hair, and the wigs so made are thoroughly hygienic.

INSECTS AS HUMAN FOOD

Insects, as a group, constitute an important source of food supply for the races of mankind. They have been eaten from time immemorial, sometimes figuring as luxuries, at others a staple article of diet. Perhaps the chief food insect—and a very important one, too—is the locust. It furnishes the favorite food of many numerous African tribes, some nations living almost exclusively upon its teeming hordes. Locusts have been regarded as a luxury from the earliest times of which any records remain to us. In the British museum there is a Nineveh sculpture showing men carrying different kinds of meat to some festival, and among them are some who carry long sticks to which locusts are tied. In Athens of old, locusts and grasshoppers were sold in the markets, and they were then preferred as dainties above the most succulent quails or the best figs. In the law of Moses, as set forth in the book of Leviticus, we find locusts permitted as food to the Jews; and to the present day in Palestine, these insects are fried in sesame oil and eaten. In Arabia Petrea locusts are fried in the sun and ground into a kind of flour for cake-making. In Central Africa certain tribes make them into thick brown soup. In Madagascar they are baked in huge jars, then fried in grease and mixed with rice. In Algeria they are simply boiled in water and salted to taste. The Arabs grind and bake them as cakes, roast them in butter, or crush them with camel's cheese and dates; but it is said that they only resort to this fare in years of famine. In southern Russia, where locusts are still extensively eaten by the serfs, the insects are usually smoked in the first instance like fish. When required for consumption, the legs and wings are broken off, and the bodies are then boiled, roasted, stewed, fried or broiled.

After the locusts, the popular insect food consists of grubs and caterpillars, of which many species are eaten with avidity in different countries of the world. The grub of the common cockchafer (Melolontha), when properly dressed, forms a nutritious and actually dainty food. Twenty years or so ago, a banquet was given at the Cafe Custoza in Paris for the special purpose of demonstrating the excellent qualities of the ver blanc, as this grub is called. The insects were fried to a golden brown color in a paste or flour, milk, and eggs; and of the 50 guests present the majority called for a second helping.

The only butterfly distinguished by supplying food to mankind is an Australian species called by the natives "Bugong." Regularly every year this insect congregates in vast swarms on the rock slopes of the Bugong mountains, and it is said that the natives light great fires beneath the trees upon which the butterflies have settled for the night, thus suffocating them and bringing them to earth.

Among the insects that are eaten it is necessary to include the famous grugru, or palm grub, of the West Indies with the allied species found in Java. These grubs when roasted on tiny spits and richly spiced, are said to surpass all other animal food in flavor.

The ancient Greeks were very fond of cicadas or harvest flies—insects of a very wide geographical range, whose shrill note is a familiar country sound throughout the southern states during the summer season. Cicadas are also eaten today by certain African tribes. The Greeks were also eaters of crickets; nor are these insects neglected at the present day, for the natives of a large portion of southern Africa dig up a subterranean species, and roast it over a bright fire for food.

SHOT STARTS A SNOWSLIDE

Caught in a snowslide that was precipitated by the concussion following the discharge of his rifle, David Davis, thirty-two years old, formerly a Denver man, was carried 300 feet to his death down a mountain side near the quarries of the Colorado Yule Marble company, at Marble, Colo. Davis, who was employed as timekeeper by the marble company, was out shooting. As he was returning to camp soon before dusk, following a trail at the base of one of the Elk mountain peaks, he caught sight of game and took a shot. The concussion started the slide. Davis was in the immediate path of the avalanche of snow and rock. Realizing his predicament, he ran to get beyond the danger zone. His effort was futile. The slide was upon him in less than a minute after it started. He was entombed by the swirling mass and carried down the rocky mountainside to his death.

MOST HYBRID ENGLISH WORD

The most hybrid word in the English language, according to Prof. A. F. Chamberlain of Clarke university, writing in the Popular Science Monthly, is "remacadamizing." Prof. Clarke points out that this word is derived from five languages: Latin, Gaelic, Hebrew, Greek and English. He resolves it into its factors as follows:

1. re, a Latin prefix, signifying a repetition or doing over again;

2. mac, a Gaelic word for son, in common use as a prefix for genealogical purposes;

3. Adam, the representative in many European languages of the Hebrew name of the first man, according to the Mosaic account of the creation as given in the book of Genesis;

4. iz (or ize), the modern English representative, through the French, iser, of the Greek verbal terminal izein;

5, ing, the English suffix of the participle present, verbal noun, etc.

The root of this word "macadam," illustrates in another way the vitality of our English speech and its ability to draw new words into its vocabulary whenever the need arises. The term "macadam" is really the family name of the man, John Macadam, who in 1819 devised the now common method of paving roads with small broken stones, etc. Celtic and Semitic had already combined to produce Macadam, meaning "son of Adam," which the English language then took up and further molded to suit its genius. There are many such hybrids, but this is probably the worst.

Letters from Prominent Physicians addressed to Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. Albert W. Kahl, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have used Castoria in my practice for the past 26 years. I regard it as an excellent medicine for children."

Dr. Gustave A. Eisengraeber, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "I have used your Castoria repeatedly in my practice with good results, and can recommend it as an excellent, mild and harmless remedy for children."

Dr. E. J. Dennis, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I have used and prescribed your Castoria in my sanitarium and outside practice for a number of years and find it to be an excellent remedy for children."

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

The International Pure Food Show held in Paris March 1912, has just awarded Calumet Baking Powder the highest honors, giving them the Grand Prize and Gold Medal.

This, in addition to the Highest Award that Calumet won at the World's Pure Food Exposition in Chicago, gives Calumet the highest honors issued by two of the largest Pure Food Shows ever held and proves conclusively the superior wholesomeness, purity and uniformity of Calumet Baking Powder.

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitly proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an Alterative Extract of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

Mrs. Heyes.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes Mrs. Wm. Heyes, of Ladysmith, B. C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines.

It is announced that gold coins are to be done away with in the transaction of business. It will not worry some of us very much to get in line.

Anyone who don't believe in the wonderful growth of this section should have taken a peep at some of our male population, after the local barber had been absent for a few days last week.

Peary has nothing to crow about, because there are many women in our town who travel from pole to pole every wash-day; and their efforts are of greater benefit to society than Peary's discovery of an imaginary nothing, called the North Pole; and they don't brag about it either.

"Take a dollar bill and fold it several times each way. Then unfold it and you will find it in creases." Keep the "in-crease", but send the original bill to the editor who put you on to the scheme. Then take a silver dollar and drop it on the counter, and notice the ring it makes. Send the ring to your best girl and the dollar to the printer, and everybody will be happy.

The best bit of news we have read in a long time is about the 100 anarchists who were made to kiss the American flag, in a small community near San Diego, Cal., and after the flag-kissing were herded out of San Diego county by armed deputies and citizens of San Diego. The men admitted they were anarchists and stated they belonged to the Industrial Workers of the World. There are a whole lot of anarchists left who do not profess their faith, however, who should be made to go through an ordeal of this kind and driven off from the earth and the world would profit by the act.

It is rumored that Frank A. Day, late chairman of the Democratic central committee, is to return to Minnesota in a short time and again guide the destinies of his old publication the Fairmont Sentinal. It is stated that the return of Day to Minnesota will have no significience and that politics is a discarded issue as far as he is personally concerned. This may or may not be, but we are apt to think if a man of Day's caliber and reputation should undertake to drive the Democratic "donk" in the gubernatorial race this campaign he would have more than a ghost of a show to land the coveted prize. This is just as liable to happen as not unless the present campaign methods of the G. O. P. in this state at the present time is dispensed with.

Railroad men say that the movement of settlers to Northern Minnesota thus far in the regular spring settlers' season has far exceeded that of other years. Owing to the wide dissemination of information by the state immigration department in certain North Central states, the class of farmers coming to settle in Minnesota is said to be better this year than ever before. "We had one party a few days ago, said one of the agents, "consisting of sixty people and twenty cars of movables. This shows that the intending settlers are of the right class, men who are bringing in their stock and equipment and are prepared to make good in Minnesota."

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrins and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

Republican District Convention.

The republican district convention for the Ninth congressional district of the state of Minnesota will be held at the armory in the city of Thief River Falls on the 15th day of May, A. D., 1912, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing two delegates and two alternates to the republican national convention to be held at Chicago on June 18, 1912, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for president and vice president, and for the transaction of any other business that may properly come before the convention.

The county conventions to elect delegates thereto will be held in the respective counties on Monday, May 13, A. D., 1912, at places to be designated by the several county committees.

Representation in this convention will be made upon the following basis: Each county shall be entitled to one delegate for each two hundred and fifty votes, or major fraction thereof, cast for state officers in the year 1910 in such county, and each county shall be allowed in addition thereto five delegates at large. The several counties in the district will be entitled to the following number of delegates in said convention:

The above figure illustrates the amount per year the White Earth Indians get as annuities. This is somewhere near the average for the last ten-year period previous to this year. The annuities this year are in excess of nine dollars, the Indian Bureau having managed to increase it, no doubt, on account of the present agitation of White Earth matters.

This is all the mixed-bloods get. Some of the full-bloods get the rations when the agent thinks they are in need.

The mixed-bloods are self-supporting, absolutely, and have been for many years, and the $5.35 per year is merely an incident. It does not help them much, and the loss of it would not make any difference in their style of living. Most of the full-bloods also support themselves by hunting and fishing, and the $5.35 annuity has usually come in handy to buy some cheap clothes.

So that the theory which prevails that the government supports the Indians is clearly a mistake.

Instead of that the Indians support a horde of officeholders saddled on them by the government.

On the White Earth reservation there are ninety-one government employes drawing salaries at the present time, in the regular establishment and eighteen in the Burch corps. These figures may not be absolutely correct, but are near enough. Many of these are necessary, and many are not. For instance there is a superintendent of a saw mill that has not turned a wheel for three years drawing $125 per month; there is a "farmer" who has not been known to work for months, drawing $100 per month, etc.

Besides the regular force the Burch corps has been on the reservation for three years, headed by Judge Burch, who draws $5,000 per year, and contains among others Judge Burch's nephew, Arthur M. Seekel, who draws $290 per month for doing abstract work that competent help could be secured for at $75 per month. Even the judge's adopted son, a boy of fourteen or fifteen, has managed to connect with the government payroll at $75 per month.

There were NINE MILLION DOLLARS in the Chippewa Indian funds.

AT THE PRESENT TIME THERE IS LESS THAN $4,000,000.

The difference of $5,000,000 represents what has been spent "for the relief and civilization of the Indians."

And right here is the big issue in the fight about White Earth reservation affairs.

No itemized statement of who this money has been paid to has so far been obtained from the Indian Bureau.

Congressman Steenerson has for several years tried to obtain such a statement, but has so far been unable to get it.

The Indian Bureau evidently has serious objections to giving out such a statement. Can it be that this alleged investigation of the Indian Bureau, by confusing the issue, is designed to protect it from the necessity of having to make such a statement?

WHAT HAS BECOME OF THE FIVE MILLION DOLLARS?

No amount of wielding of the slush bucket by the government lawyers; no amount of sensational trembling for his country by the chairman of the committee; no amount of effort to discredit Senator Clapp and Mr. Steenerson by the administration at Washington will be satisfactory as an answer to this question the Indians are asking, and the answer to which they have a right to know.

There is a feeling among the Indians that any of their money that goes into the government treasury will never come out again except in the form of salary checks to white officials. This feeling is justified by bitter experience, and is back of the unanimous demand for such legislation as the allotment acts, the Clapp act, and the present demand for the distribution of the tribal funds.

The Clapp act was not a perfect law. It had a serious defect in that it did not provide for an official roll of mixed-bloods and full-bloods before the restrictions were removed. But it was what the Indians wanted, and had the Indian Bureau kept liquor off the reservation, as the law provides they should do, and for which they are paid big salaries, it would have been a success.

As it is many of the mixed-bloods have spent the money they got for their lands. Others have it or its equivalent in property and some have greatly increased their share. Those who have spent their share have gone to work and are making a living just as they did before. None of them are starving and few of them are doing any complaining. Many of them have braced up and are taking a new start, having learned the value of having money by the loss of it.

After the removal of restrictions and the inrush of land buyers and speculators, and the total abandonment of all restraint upon the liquor traffic, such scandal resulted that the interior department called on the department of justice to furnish government lawyers to straighten out the complicated land frauds in court. Judge M. C. Burch, who had just been displaced as division chief, was given this Indian litigation, as he says as his "last case," and he at once proceeded to so plan things as to make it last for the balance of his natural life. He invented a new definition of "mixed-blood," contrary to the established rule, so as to make it include only persons who had more white than Indian blood. This enabled him to bring several hundred suits which no one had dreamed of before, until he has now instituted more than 1,200 suits in equity, involving as many eighty acre tracts of land. It is true that only one question is involved in all, and that is: Who is a mixed-blood, within the meaning of the act? This litigation and threatened litigation unsettled all titles, stopped all improvement and development, to the detriment of all the people, including the Indians, stopped payment of taxes, and threatened to close the public schools. Congressman Steenerson was appealed to and he introduced bills for remedial legislation. One of these provided for a commission to make authentic rolls of mixed-bloods and full-bloods separately, and was intended to equitably and justly dispose of the apparently endless litigation. But here Mr. Steenerson ran against a snag in the shape of a lot of hungry government attorneys and their assistants whose occupation would be gone if the 1,200 suits were disposed of. Their chief very shrewdly went before the committee to investigate the interior department and asked for an investigation of his own client, the interior department, and when he got it, after revamping the old scandals growing out of the administration of the Nelson and Morris and other acts for the disposal of Indian timber, proceeded to lay all the blame for mismanagement of Indian property to the law and to congress. In this way it was sought to not only discredit Senator Clapp and Mr. Steenerson, but to defeat the proposed remedial legislation, which threatened to cut short the salaries of these hungry lawyers and their dependents.

But Mr. Steenerson, by reason of his independence and fearlessness, had incurred hostility in still higher quarters. By his opposition to administration measures, notably Canadian reciprocity, he had put himself beyond the pale of executive favor, and no doubt these men who are now doing the dirty work were given a free hand in the attempt to destroy the political reputations of Senator Clapp and Mr. Steenerson.

This is the real animus of the whole matter, but the people will understand that this hostility is but an incident of the fight their representative has made in their behalf, and will rally to his support more strongly than ever.

Tribal Funds.

At the present rate it will be only a question of a few years anyway, until the tribal funds of the White Earth Indians will be all spent by the Indian Bureau. The best that could happen to them would be a division of the funds, after enough is set aside to care for the old and the infirm. Then let the capable ones take their place among the ordinary citizens of the republic. The tribal relations are of no value to them, and a sum so insignificant as $5.35 per year is of little value.

And the most peculiar feature of the Graham investigation was the reports sent out of the discovery of disease and destitution among the full-bloods, in view of the fact that the government has 109 employes on the reservation looking after the welfare of the Indians—one for each ten full-bloods. Among these are five doctors. If this little army of Indian protectors could not discover disease and destitution after spending years in the work, could it be reasonably expected that Congressman Steenerson could know of it?

Blind People From Old People's Home.

This is a group of old people kept by the government at White Earth Agency. They are blind, or nearly so, as the result of trachoma.

Trachoma is a disease of the eyelids, which eventually results in total blindness, if not given proper treatment. It is very common among the full-blood Indians, and there are a few cases among the mixed-bloods. The existence of this sickness has been known for twenty years past to the Indian Bureau. Congressman Steenerson, agents at White Earth and others have for years tried to get a hospital established for the treatment of this and other diseases among the Indians, but have always met with the opposition of the Indian Bureau at Washington. Such a hospital is now being established, however.

None of these diseases could possibly be due to any land legislation, but is partly due to the ignorance and uncleanliness of the full-blood Indians themselves and partly to the incompetence of the Indian Bureau at Washington.

A GOOD ROADS EDUCATION FOR NATION'S CHILDREN.

Along with educating our young people to get the most out of farming, good roads are the most important things to develop in this country. There is only one way to get them, and that is to tax ourselves for them. Build good bridges. The stone and concrete bridges are the only ones that are really economical to build. Iron and wooden bridges are too short lived.

When things get adjusted the motorcar will take an important place in the work of the nation. It is a good roads advocate.—Farm Progress.

ASPHALT ON MACADAM.

New York Highway Commission to Improve Newburg Roads.

At the annual session of the Newburg board of supervisors last December the New York state highway commission submitted a proposal for paving Cochecton turnpike with brick at the joint expense of the state and county. This method of improvement was strongly urged by County Engineer Smith. The supervisors decided, however, that in view of the state of the county's finances with respect to good roads they could not afford to obligate the county for half the cost of brick paving, and accordingly they tabled the communication from the state commission.

Now the state authorities have decided to wait no longer for the cooperation of the county in improving the road. The state highway commission has prepared plans for macadamizing two or more miles of the turnpike in the Coldenham section, where the condition of the thoroughfare is worst.

The macadam will be given an asphalt surfacing and the result will be a fine stretch of road. The improvement may be later extended a fine roadway provided all between Newburg and Mo

This is the time of year for prairie fires and the skies have been brilliantly illuminated in every direction for more than a week past. The rain of Monday night put a damper on the fires temporarily at least but the dead grass are in such a dry condition that a small spark is sufficient to start a most destructive fire. The origin of the various fires are hard to explain but are without a doubt due mainly to carelessness in burning refuse, etc., while doing the annual spring cleaning. Not too much care can be taken at this time to protect against prairie fires, which are destroying thousands of dollars worth of property every year. It behoves everyone to be on a keen lookout to protect themselves and others against the fire fiend, and with the cooperation of everybody in this respect the fire hazard can be greatly, if not entirely, eliminated.

According to a dispach from Washington, of March 28, settlers on Indian lands as well as those on the public lands generally, in Minnesota and the Dakotas will be able to secure patents for their entries within 3 years after entry upon the approval of the amended homestead act which had previously passed the senate and was acted upon favorably by the house yesterday. This applies to existing entries as well as those made hearafter. Under the terms of the bill with ordinary weather conditions, settlers will not be obliged to take up residence for six months after they make entry. In case of unusual weather conditions, such as long and severe winters, floods, etc., they will not be obliged to take up actual residence for a year after entry is filed. This twelve month provision was secured by Representative Miller of Duluth who urged it in behalf of the settlers in northern Minnesota. An important factor of the legislation to Minnesota settlers is that permitting settlers being away from the lands five months in each of the three years of residence.

We have heard several complaints from parties living along the river to the effect that the fish are not as plentiful as they might be, and the reason as claimed by many is that there must be parties damming the river somewhere. Not only this but it also thought that dams down the river are not properly provided with fish passes, so that there is no way for the fish to come up from down the stream. It is claimed that fish that inhabits the Red River are very seldom caught here, and would naturally be found in this river if there was nothing to keep them back.

Almost A Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. MANY STATE ROADS

OVER 12,000 MILES REPORTED BY STATE ENGINEER COOLEY.

371 MILES BUILT IN 1911.

Nearly Half a Million Dollars Available for the Various Counties this Year—Detailed Figures are Given.

St. Paul.—Minnesota has designated more than 12,000 miles of state roads, according to the annual report of the state highway commission, soon to be issued by George W. Cooley, the commission's secretary and engineer. State roads are such highways as are approved by the commission, which also pays one-half the cost of the road up to the amount of the allotment for the year in which the road is built.

The report of the commission indicates that there is a wide contrast in the interest shown by the various counties in the efforts of the state to aid in the movement to extend and improve the rural highways. Many of the counties have sought very little aid from the state, while others have taken a lively interest in the enterprise.

Thus Beltrami county, one of the northern tier, has 409.25 miles of state roads and much of this milage already is completed. Douglas county has made good use of the opportunity, with nearly 400 miles of state roads, as has Waseca county. Aitkin, Le Sueur, Swift and Wright counties each has more than 300 miles.

371 Miles in 1911.

The completed work in 1911 aggregated 371 miles and was distributed throughout the state, nearly every county taking a part in the state project.

In addition, there were built 1,726 bridges. It is noteworthy that not one of these was a timber, all being either of concrete or steel construction.

Following is a summary of the state highway work for the year:

1911.
Miles of road constructed	371.67
Feet of road ditching	149,089.50
Acres clearing and grubbing	204.84
Miles of partially graded	84.27
Miles of road graded	152.81
Miles of road graveled	124.225
Miles of clay road	7.05
Miles of macadam road	3.29
Lineal feet concrete culvert	1,074
Lineal ft. corrug. metal culevrt	4,743.5
Number of bridges (steel)	1,508
Number of bridges (concrete)	218

The coming season will see much activity in road work. Every county gets a goodly share from the one-fourth mill road tax, which was allotted to the various counties of the state at a recent meeting of the commission. In addition many of the counties have balances from 1911 allotments. More than $400,000 will be paid to the counties by the state this year, including the balances from 1911.

Following is tabulation of the number and the mileage of the designated state roads and the amounts available for each county from the state road and bridge fund:

Anderson Has a Parcels Post Bill.

Washington, D. C. — Representative Sydney Anderson has introduced a bill providing for a parcels post system based on the zone principle which he believes will form the basis for a more general discussion of the parcels post question and eventually lead to the passage of legislation providing this facility. The Anderson bill is designed to meet the objections of rural route merchants to a parcels post by the establishment of a zone system with rates of postage graduated according to distance.

Mankato Fire Traps Razed.

Mankato.—The old fire traps are rapidly disappearing from this city as a result of the activity of Deputy State Fire Marshal E. A. Simpson of St. Paul, who was in the city to see how well his orders had been carried out. Of eighteen buildings ordered removed he found sixteen torn down. Unless the other two are torn down soon he said that he would start proceedings to have them removed. One of these buildings is the old two-story frame American House, one of the first hostelries in Mankato.

PASTORS IN CONFERENCE.

One Hundred Members of Lutheran Synod Assembled at Delano.

Delano.—The pastoral conference of the Luthern synod of Minnesota was in session here last week. Rev. E. A. Pankow of St. James, president of the synod, was elected chairman, and Rev. Gerhard Hirmenthal, secretary. The basis of the doctrinal discussion was a theological paper on the eighth commandment, prepared by Rev. John R. Bowman of Red Wing.

The conference expressed itself in favor of reducing the number of members of the boards of directors of the educational institutions of the joint synod of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan, from fifteen to seven. The synod at its meeting in June at St. Paul will vote on this question.

The building committee reported that the new $65,000 buildings, at Martin Luther college at New Ulm were now completed. The new dormitory is of fireproof construction, three stories high and has study rooms and sleeping accommodations for 100 students. The system is to have only four students in a room.

The report on home missions showed a flourishing condition of work in Minnesota, the Dakotas and other states. There are nearly 100 pastors present.

BUTTER MEN TO ORGANZE

Permanent Association to be Formed at Meeting in St. Paul April 22.

A circular sent out by G. L. Hubbell to all egg, butter and poultry dealers of the northwest solicits their attendance at a meeting of dealers in St. Paul April 22 to effect a permanent organization to be known as the Minnesota Butter, Egg and Poultry association. The call is issued as a result of a meeting of fifty dealers at the Hotel Radisson, when committees to arrange a constitution and by-laws and to solicit co-operation and membership of dealers were appointed. The meeting will be held at the old capitol building.

The purpose of the organization is to establish uniform methods of handling produce, to collect and distribute information, secure available freight rates, provide for a legislative committee, to adopt methods of grading butter and packing eggs to secure co-operation of dealers and packers for the development of the industry. W. H. Samels is temporary chairman.

AN UNUSUAL SERVICE.

Bishop Edsall Institutes Rector and Confirms His First Class.

Rochester.—A service seldom witnessed in an Episcopal church was seen in Calvary church here, when Bishop Samuel Edsall of the diocese of Minnesota instituted Rev. Arthur H. Wurtele as rector of the church and immediately following administered the rite of confirmation to the first class of the new rector.

Rev. Wurtele came to Rochester from Duluth, where he was dean of the pro-cathedral, preaching his first sermon here the first Sunday in January, taking the place of Rev. W. W. Fowler, rector of the church for twenty-two years. The keys of the church were presented to the new rector by A. C. Goodling, one of the wardens. After administering confirmation, Bishop Edsall preached a sermon.

ITASKA PARK MAP.

Big Print Will Be Supplemented by Collection of Pictures.

St. Paul.—By request of the State Art Board, George H. Hazzard has had a state map prepared, showing the Itasca State Park, the Interstate Park, Dalles of the St. Croix, at Taylors Falls, St. Croix Falls, Wis., Minneopa State park at Mankato, the Alexander Ramsey State park at Redwood Falls, the Pillsbury State forest, the two Burntside State forests, the Minnesota National forest, north of Leech lake, and around Winnibigoshish lake, the three large Superior National forests in the northeast arm of the state.

Around this map will be displayed a collection of photographs of the different preserves. The collection will be shown at the state art exhibit.

Red Wing Man on Titanic.

Red Wing, Minn. — The death of Carl Selander, a brother of Gustaf Selander of this city on his way from Sweden to Red Wing on the Titanic is confirmed. His name appears in the published list of the men who perished.

SEEDING IS ON.

Thief River Falls Planning For More Elevators.

Thief River Falls.—Seeding in Pennington county is general. Wheat will all be in the ground by the end of this week and breaking for flax will then begin. A great acreage of potatoes and corn will be planted, but reliable seed is hard to secure. In case these hopes are fulfilled there will be need for more elevators in this city. Last season 600,000 bushels of grain were marketed here.

DAM IS FAVORED.

Gen. Bixby Recommends $1,500,000 for Lac Qui Parle.

Washington.—General Bixby, chief of engineers, sent to the house a report of the proposed improvement of the Minnesota river. He recommends the construction of a forty-eight-foot dam at Lac qui Parle to cost $1,500,000, by the government engineers, provided the state or local interest pay one-half of the cost.

FAVOR ROAD PATROLS.

Engineer Forbes Finds That Many Counties Are Taking Up the Idea.

St. Paul. — According to C. A. Forbes, division engineer of the state highway commission, who has just returned from a tour of inspection through the northern counties, farmers in that section of the state are preparing to build hundreds of miles of good roads this summer. In many of the towns good roads organizations have been formed to help push the work, and the farmers are displaying great enthusiasm over the movement.

Mr. Forbes reports that the idea of placing road patrols on roads already built is gaining great favor. In Hubbard county a state road patrol was employed last year on the road leading from Park Rapids to the Itasca state park, and during the wet weather last year this road was the only one over which an automobile could travel with safety. Several of the other counties will employ road patrols this summer. Beltrami county, Mr. Forbes says, has let contracts for the construction of thirty-one miles of good roads this summer. Road patrols will be engaged to keep these roads in condition after they have been completed.

While Mr. Forbes was in Bemidji he was presented with a large panoramic picture of the city by the leading citizens of the place. Mr. Forbes, who helped to lay out the townsite of Bemidji, sixteen years ago, was much impressed with the rapid growth of the city, and also with the farming possibilities of the counties he visited.

RIOT AT ELECTION.

Gilman "Wets" Win in Contest to Move School House So Saloons May Operate.

St. Cloud.—After an attempt to break up the meeting, a pitched battle between the two forces which resulted in several injuries and the withdrawal from the hall of the men opposed to the move, the school election at Gilman, held on the proposition of moving the school house in order to allow the saloons to operate within the law, resulted in a victory for the saloons, with forty-six votes in favor of the move and none against.

The anti-saloon element made an early attempt to break up the meeting and several blows were exchanged. Martin Herman, clerk of the district, and Walter Wojciwski, a hardware merchant, were cut by flying glass and were burned when a lamp was wielded as a club. Herman and his crowd then left the hall, leaving the saloon element in control. It is expected that several warrants for assault will be issued by both factions and the election itself will probably be contested.

The saloon men will now apply for licenses at the next meeting of the board of county commissioners, and probably fresh trouble will result.

WILL REDUCE WASTE.

Butter, Eggs and Poultry Men Meet to Discuss New Organization.

Minneapolis.—Ways and means of organizing the Minnesota Butter, Egg and Poultry association were discussed in Minneapolis at a meeting of a committee of St. Paul, Duluth and Minneapolis dealers.

It was explained that the organization was not for the control of prices and that they had not been mentioned. The objects of the organization were summarized as follows: Education of producers to increase production, and preparation for shipment; co-operation with other states' organizations tending toward eliminating waste; better shipping facilities and lower rates.

Within a month another meeting will be called to perfect the organization. The temporary officers as named yesterday are: Chairman, W. H. Samels, Minneapolis; secretary, G. L. Hubbel, St. Paul. Committees were appointed to construct a constitution and by-laws and canvass the state for members.

KNEEL OF CUENCA.

Board of Control Will Ask Funds for Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

St. Paul.—It is probable that the local board of control will ask the county board this summer for an appropriation sufficient to construct a sanitarium for the care of tuberculosis patients unable to care for themselves.

This probably means that the Cuenca sanitarium at Bass Lake, the institution opened about two years ago by the St. Paul Anti-Tuberculosis committee will be closed.

The committee recently announced that it did not have sufficient funds to carry on the institution and asked the city and county board of control to take over the sanitarium. The board refused to do this for a number of reasons, chief among which was the fact that there was no adequate sewage system at the Bass Lake institution.

TO SAIL ON TITANIC.

Duluth Party Expected to Go to Olympic Games on Liner.

Duluth.—A party of sixty or more Duluthians had planned to go abroad on the steamship Titanic when she was to sail on May 11. The arrangements had progressed to plans for arranging the bookings. The party plan to attend the Olympic games, and it is expected now that it will sail on the Baltic May 9.

FALL IS FATAL.

Swanville Woman Victim of Peculiar Accident.

Swanville.—Mrs. Anna Forslin fell downstairs, fracturing the base of her skull and her collarbone in two places, death being instantaneous. The family had retired for the night some time previous and it is believed that Mrs. Forslin, who was 83 years old, was feeling unwell and in crossing to another room slipped at the head of the stairs.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Fourteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elgin, Ill.—"After fourteen years of suffering everything from female complaints, I am at last restored to health. "I employed the best doctors and even went to the hospital for treatment and was told there was no help for me. But while taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use until I was made well."—Mrs. HENRY LEISEBERG, 743 Adams St.

Kearneysville, W. Va.—"I feel it my duty to write and say what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female weakness and at times felt so miserable I could hardly endure being on my feet. "After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your special directions, my trouble is gone. Words fail to express my thankfulness. I recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. G. B. WHITTINGTON.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

Not Resentful.

"Those people say they don't believe you ever reached the pole."

"That's all right," replied the explorer, as he looked up from his manuscript. "The more doubts there are as to whether I landed or not, the longer this rather remunerative discussion is going to last."

Logical Millinery.

"People say there is no reason, no logic, in Easter millinery. What a falsehood."

The speaker was George Ade. He continued (the occasion was an after-theater supper in Chicago):

"Hats, whether Easter or otherwise, are full of logic, full of reason. A little boy said to his father one day:

"'What's a wide-awake hat, pa?'

"That father logically and reasonably replied:

"'A wide-awake hat, my son, is, of course, one without a nap.'"

THANKSGIVING PSALM

A Rhythmical and Grateful Chant.

A teacher in a Terre Haute public school joins in the chorus:

"Teaching is a business which requires a great deal of brain and nerve force. Unless this force is renewed as fast as expended the teacher is exhausted before the close of the year. Many resort to stimulating tonics for relief.

"For 3 years I struggled against almost complete exhaustion, getting what relief I could from doctors' tonics. Then in the spring of 1903 I had an attack of la grippe and malaria which left me too weak to continue my work. Medicine failed to give me any relief, a change of climate failed. I thought I should never be able to go back in school again.

"I ate enough food (the ordinary meats—white bread, vegetables, etc.), but was hungry after meals.

"I happened at this time to read an article giving the experience of another teacher who had been helped by Grape-Nuts food. I decided to try Grape-Nuts and cream, as an experiment. It was a delightful experience, and continues so after a year and a half of constant use.

"First, I noticed that I was not hungry after meals.

"In a few days that tired feeling left me, and I felt fresh and bright, instead of dull and sleepy.

"In three months, more than my usual strength returned, and I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"I finished the year's work without any kind of tonics—was not absent from duty even half a day.

"Am still in best of health, with all who know me wondering at the improvement.

"I tell them all 'Try Grape-Nuts!'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. "There's a reason."

CITY WAS BUILT ON A SWAMP

St. Petersburg of Russia, Most Beautiful Metropolis of Nation, Founded by Peter the Great.

St. Petersburg, Russia.—St. Petersburg, the beautiful and majestic metropolis of Russia, founded by Peter the Great, is constructed on a veritable swamp. It is said that moisture underlying the city can be seen sometimes oozing up between the paving blocks on the Nevsky Prospect, a busy thoroughfare. The city is not only built over water, which often threatens to inundate it, but it is visited by rain and snow at least two hundred days of the year. The city is practically surrounded by water, for swamps abound on two sides, the sea and the river on the other.

At the beginning of the building of St. Petersburg Peter the Great set thousands to work, "under compulsion of the knout," to build dikes and reclaim the land. Everyone, nobles and peasants alike, hated the place, all save Peter the Great, who called the city his "Paradise" and forbade the use of stone in building elsewhere in Russia, ordering all the stone accessible to be brought to St. Petersburg. Any peasant who wished to enter the city could do so by fetching a cartload of stone. This was his passport. Indeed, people did not have to beg to enter St. Petersburg. They were forced by the czar's command to abandon other places and come to dwell in his "pet" city. The consequence was a crowded quarter where the poor herded together like so many rats, living in squalor and misery. Even to this day, the Russian metropolis is the most unhealthy capital of Europe.

Greek Church Architecture.

But, in spite of all the drawbacks, St. Petersburg is a beautiful and majestic city. The Winter Palace is splendid, as are also entire streets of beautiful buildings. It might be called a city of space, for the streets are very wide, and nowhere—save in the slums—does one find crowding. Everything seems on a gigantic scale—cathedrals, public and educational buildings, art galleries, etc. Beautiful statuary is seen in the public squares, the statue of Peter the Great being a magnificent monument to the glory of the ruler who built the city in the face of nature's and man's opposition.

Nevsky Prospect is the fashionable street of St. Petersburg. It is only three miles in length, but it is as celebrated a highway as Regent street, London, or Fifth avenue, New York.

DISORDERED DIGESTION

If Neglected May Develop into a Severe Form of Stomach Trouble.

The Best Safeguard Is to Keep the Stomach Toned Up and the Treatment Should Be Begun When the First Symptom Is Noted.

"A few years ago," says Mrs. George Fallu, of Finlayson, Minn., "I began to suffer from stomach trouble. It came on me gradually and I do not know what caused it. I gave little heed to it at the time, thinking that it was merely a slight attack of indigestion. It finally developed into a severe form of stomach trouble and I suffered terribly for months.

"At the beginning of my sickness I had fainting spells and became unconscious. There was gas on my stomach, my appetite was very poor and what little I ate did not seem to be digested. I was sick at my stomach a great deal and had severe dizzy attacks. I had hot flashes when it would seem as though I was burning up. I could not sleep night or day during these spells unless I took something to ease the pain. I was very weak and was in this condition for six months. I could not do any work and was confined to bed for two or three days at a time.

"A doctor at Duluth said I had gastric fever. He did not give me much help so I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon my mother's advice. I gave the pills a thorough trial and unlike the doctor's medicine, they agreed with me. I took several boxes of the pills and was entirely cured. I think so much of the pills that I always keep them in the house."

The tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by building up the blood so that it can nourish and strengthen the weakened digestive system has made hundreds of cures in the most severe stomach disorders. 44 Bu. to the Acre is a heavy yield, but that's what John Kennedy of Edmonton, Alberta, Western Canada, got from 40 acres of Spring Wheat in 1910. Reports from other districts in that province showed other excellent results—such as 4,000 bushels of wheat from 120 acres, or 33 1-3 bu. per acre. 25, 30 and 40 bushel yields were numerous. As high as 132 bushels of oats to the acre were threshed from Alberta fields in 1910.

STRUCK SUBMERGED LEDGE.

New York, April 18.—It was the submerged ledge of an iceberg of ordinary proportions that sent the White Star liner Titanic more than two miles to the bottom of the Atlantic off the banks of Newfoundland. She was steaming almost full tilt through a gently swelling sea and under a starlit skyin charge of First Officer Murdock who, a moment after the collision, surrendered the command to Captain Smith, who went down with her. The captain was washed from the bridge and was seen to make his way back again. He had been urged to get into a lifeboat, but refused.

The lifeboats that were launched were not filled to their capacity. The general feeling aboard the ship was, even after the boats had left her sides, that she would survive her wound, and the passengers who were left aboard believed, almost to the last moment, that they had a chance for their lives. The captain and officers behaved with the utmost gallantry and there was perfect order and discipline in the launching of the boats and after the hope had been abandoned for the salvation of the ship or for those who were aboard. Just before she went down she broke her back.

New York, April 18.—Lifted from the gates of death, the 745 survivors of the Titanic were landed tonight by the Carpathia which rescued them two hours and a half after the great White Star liner hurled herself against an iceberg last Sunday night. Disfigured by calamity and misery and oppressed by awful sorrow the women and children and the few men who escaped from the world's greatest marine disaster were in better physical condition than the most optimistic had hoped for.

Out of the great company that waited for hours in bitter cold among the grinding bergs, many of them thinly clad, many bruised and hurt by the collision which destroyed their ship, few needed the ministration of a physician when they came out in sight of the vast crowd that had been waiting in almost unbearable uncertainty. Many, it is true, were weak and nervous and hysterical from an experience that had left the world void and empty for them. But—thousands thanked God for it as they watched—the majority of the saddened, bereaved company were well in body.

NO NEED FOR MINISTERS OF DEATH.

Only one of the Titanic's survivors died while the Carpathia was driving through fogs and storms to this port. Four of the Titanic's people had perished trying to get aboard the Carpathia and another Titanic passenger lost his life by the overturning of a boat. One woman, a second cabin passenger who was landed tonight, was suffering from a broken arm. But the general conditions of the hundreds so dramatically saved from death was a cause of inexpressible pleasure to the thousands who saw them land. There was no need, as it turned out, for the ministers of death.

VARYING FIGURES OF LOST AND SAVED.

The Carpathia reported that there were 710 saved out of a passenger list which the White Star line figured at 2,180, making a loss of 1,470 lives. The statement from the Titanic's passengers says there were 745 rescued out of a passenger list of 2,340. The list of names furnished on the Carpathia on her arrived shows 188 first cabin passengers saved, 115 in the second cabin, 178 third class and 206 of the crew, a total of 687 saved. A woman passenger on the Carpathia heard from the ship's doctor that 195 of the passengers and 210 of the crew had been saved, and that thirty-nine women lost their husbands. Six of these were brides.

THEY SIGHT THE CARPATHIA.

Here and there among the passengers of the Carpathia and from the survivors of the Titanic the story was gleaned of the rescue. Nothing in life will ever approach the joy felt by the hundreds who were waiting in little boats on the spot where the Titanic foundered, when the lights of the Carpathia were first made out. That was at 4 A. M. on Monday morning.

The Carpathia, steaming on her way to the Mediterranean, was halted a little after midnight by the desperate calls of Phillips, the Titanic's wireless man. The Cunarder slowed, turned and headed at full speed for the location given by Phillips. Captain Rostron was told that the Titanic struck an iceberg at 10:40 P. M. on Sunday night. He heard by fitful dots and dashes that the ship was in great peril. Rostron swung the Carpathia westward and ordered his engineers to give her every pound of steam they could raise. Then he spoke to his officers, outlining what probably would be required. The chief steward busied himself preparing blankets, supplies of all kinds, getting the surgeries ready, setting the tables and having food cooked. Arrangements were made as the Carpathia stormed onward to take care of 2,000 people.

WIRELESS DIES AWAY.

At that hour, soon after midnight, there was no telling what had happened in the mysterious waters from whence had come the Titanic's last message. The wireless had failed and died away. It left Rostron and his officers blank of details. They did not imagine, even at that time, that the disaster would be as great as it turned out to be, for they, like most people, believed that the Titanic would be a hard ship to sink. The wireless failed at 12:17 A. M., after only a hint of what was taking place.

At the Carpathia's best speed it was not until 4 A. M. that she made out the fleet of small boats lying over the scene of the wreck. The night had been clear—so clear, indeed, that passengers of the Carpathia had stayed up unusually late to enjoy its beauty. So there was no difficulty in sighting without glasses the little boats that were waiting in such suspense. Captai Restran stopped his ship while still a good distance from the boats. He lowered rope ladders as well as the ordinary wooden gangways, and waited for the boats to come up to him.

SOME IN EVENING DRESS.

The sailors of the Titanic who manned these boats rowed hard and it was only a few minutes when the first of them came alongside. The appearance of the survivors in them was pitiable. Women were clad only in nightgowns and thin kimonos and many were wet through. A few of the women wore hats, hastily and unconsciously donned, no doubt, although they had no heavy clothing. Some had on evening dress and slippers. There were a number of children. In the first boat that came up was a child fast asleep in its mother's arms.

The boats had waited two hours and a half, their occupants half crazy from grief and uncertainty. Herded separately into the all too few boats and put over the side, it was the fate of the little more than 700 to sit helpless and watch the death of their relatives and friends. As the survivors have described it, the picture is clearly lined.

STAGGERING TO HER END.

With what calmness the crisis allowed, the officers of the ship assisted by brave men who had presently to die, placed most of the women and children in the boat and with them seamen and volunteers to labor at the oars. Then with all the boats overboard, and nothing more could be used but rafts, two-thirds of the ship's company had to wait to see what brief time would hold for them. It was apparent that the Titanic was staggering toward her end. The only hope was that her last feeble calls for help had been heard by a liner that could sweep up in time.

NO FRIENDLY DARKNESS.

No tale has ever been told more pitiful, more choked with horror than the plight of the women and children who waited there, oblivious to the bitter cold, to see whether the wireless would bring relief in time to their loved ones that showed clearly on the Titanic dark mass. For they could see on this clear night what was going on on the ship. That was, perhaps, the worst of it all. There was no friendly dark to veil the Titanic and her hopeless company.

The night was so bright, as some of the survivors said last night, that it seemed as if the faces of individuals could be made out, and the illusion of the water made it appear that the foundering ship was closer than she was.

And there for two hours and a half a third prayed or clung with faltering hearts to hope that the signals had been heard in time. There were cries sounding over the waters, men calling from the Titanic to their wives or children in the boats, answering replies. In those dread hours counsels of good cheer and hope sped over the sea.

CLING TO WRECKAGE.

And then at 2:20 A. M. the end came suddenly. The riven ship, her starboard side shorn deeply, her back broken, water filled from bow to stern, staggered, lurched and went down. Men leaped from her and lingered briefly on top of the waters. Bits of wreckage floated in the brightness and many clearly were seen clinging desperately and striving to draw themselves out of the ocean.

The watchers in the boats carried away many such pictures that are indelibly imprinted. It was said last night that most of the men passengers of the Titanic who were brought here last night jumped from the sinking ship and were hauled into the lifeboats. A few managed to find a place in the boats when they were lowered.

One of these was J. Bruce Ismay, the managing director of the White Star line. Some of those that jumped described their experience by saying that the Titanic sank slowly and easily and that there was no suction. Once in the water, they were buoyed up by the life belts until they could get to the boats.

London's Long Roads.

One street, at least, in Greater London can compare in length with Argyle street, Glasgow, and, in so doing, outdistance Old Kent road, Old Ford road, Mile End road and Cromwell road—the last named more than four times over. Forest road begins at Tottenham and runs to the edge of Epping forest at Woodford without interruption, the highest number in the road being 1050 odd. This, surely, is the longest road in London. But Garrett lane, Wandsworth, runs it close. An observant South Londoner has found No. 998.—London Chronicle.

Saved by Beer Barrels.

If Felix Madell, a five-year-old patient in a New York hospital, lives he can thank a pyramid of beer barrels in the rear yard of his tenement house home. He fell five stories from the roof last night while playing leapfrog and struck the apex of the beer barrel pyramid. The barrels rolled away under him, breaking his fall, and he slid down gradually.

DANGER NOT SEEN TILL LAST MOMENT

Londoner Among Rescued Says Passengers at First Believed Accident Trivial.

CALL TO DECKS FIRST WARNING

Asserts Men Stood by Calmly as Women Were Put in Boats.

New York, April 18.—Following is the account of Mr. Beasley of London:

"The voyage from Queenstown had been qito uneventful; very fine weather was experienced and the sea was quite calm. The wind had been westerly to southwesterly the whole way, but very cold, particularly the last day. In fact, after dinner on Sunday evening it was almost too cold to be out on deck at all.

"I had been in my berth for about ten minutes when at about 11:15 P. M. I felt a slight jar and then soon after a second one, but not sufficiently large to cause any anxiety to anyone, however nervous they may have been.

"However, the engines stopped immediately afterwards and my first thought was—'She has lost a propeller.' I went up on the top (boat) deck in a dressing gown, and found only a few people there, who had come up similarly to inquire why we had stopped, but there was no sort of anxiety in the minds of any one.

NONE KNEW DANGER.

"We saw through the smoking room window a game of cards going on and went in to inquire if they knew anything; it seems they felt more of the jar, and looking through the window had seen a huge iceberg go by close to the side of the boat. They thought we had just grazed it with a glancing blow, and the engines had been stopped to see if any damage had been done. No one, of course, had any conception that she had been pierced below by part of the submerged iceberg. The game went on without any thought of disaster and I retired to my cabin to read until we went on again.

"I never saw any of the players or the onlookers again.

WONDER AT STOPPING.

"A little later, hearing people going upstairs, I went out again and found every one wanting to know why the engines had stopped. No doubt many were awakened from sleep by the sudden stopping of a vibration to which they had become accustomed during the four days we had been on board.

"Naturally, with such powerful engines as the Titanic carried, the vibration was very noticeable all the time, and the sudden stopping had something the same effect as the stopping of a loud ticking grandfather's clock in a room.

"On going on deck again I saw that there was an undoubted list downward from stern to bows, but, knowing nothing of what had happened, concluded some of the front compartments had filled and weighed her down. I went down again to put on warmer clothing and as I dressed heard an order shouted:

ORDER ALL ON DECK.

"'All passengers on deck with life belts on.'

"We all walked slowly up with them tied over our clothing, but even then presumed this was a wise precaution the captain was taking, and that we should return in a short time and retire to bed. There was a total absence of any panic or any expressions of alarm, and I suppose this can be accounted for by the exceedingly calm night and the absence of any signs of the accident. The ship was absolutely still, and, except for a gentle tilt downward, which I don't think one person in ten would have noticed at that time, no signs of the approaching disaster were visible.

MAKE BOATS READY.

"She lay just as if she were waiting the order to go on again when some trifling matter had been adjusted. But in a few moments we saw the covers lifted from the boats and the crews then standing by and coiling up the ropes to lower them into the water.

"We then began to realize it was more serious than had been supposed, and my first thought was to go down and get more clothing and some money, but seeing people pouring up the stairs I decided it was better to cause no confusion to people coming up by doing so.

"Presently we heard the order:

MEN STAND BACK.

"'All men stand back from the boats and all ladies retire to next deck below'—the smoking room deck or B deck. The men all stood away, and remained in absolute silence leaning against the end of the railings of the deck or pacing slowly up and down. The boats were swung out and lowered from A deck. When they were to the level of B deck, where all the ladies were collected, the ladies got in quietly, with the exception of some who refused to leave their husbands. In some cases they were torn from them and pushed into the boats; but in many instances they were allowed to remain, because there was no one to insist they should go.

SLIP AWAY INTO DARKNESS.

"Looking over the side one saw boats from aft already in the water, slipping quietly away into the darkness, and presently the boats near to me were lowered with much creaking as the new ropes slipped through the pulley blocks down the ninety feet which separated them from the water.

"An officer in uniform came up as one boat went down and shouted:

"'When you are afloat row around to the companion ladder and stand by with the other boats for orders.'

"'Aye, aye, sir,' came up the reply, but I don't think any boat was able to obey the order.

"When they were afloat and had the oars at work the condition of the rapidly settling boat was so much more a sight for alarm for those in the boats than those on board, that in common prudence the sailors saw they could do nothing but row from the sinking boat to save at any rate some lives. They no doubt anticipated that suction from such an enormous vessel would be more than usually dangerous to a crowded boat mostly filled with women.

CALMNESS PREVAILS.

"All this time there were no traces of any disorder, panic or rush to the boats and no scenes of women sobbing hysterically, such as one generally pictures as happening at such times; every one seemed to realize so slowly that there was imminent danger. When it was realized that we might all be presently in the sea with nothing but our life belts to support us until we were picked up by passing steamers it was extraordinary how calm every one was and how completely self-controlled.

"One by one the boats were filled with women and children, lowered and rowed away into the night. Presently the word went round among the men. 'The men are to be put in boats on the starboard side.'

MEN CROSS DECK.

"I was on the port side and most of the men walked across the deck to see if this was so. I remained where I was and presently heard the call:

"'Any more ladies?' Looking over one side of the ship, I saw Boat No. 13 swinging level with B deck, half full of ladies. Again the call was repeated:

"'Any more ladies?'

"I saw none come and then one of the crew looked up and saw me and asked:

"'Any ladies on your deck, sir?'

"No," I replied.

"Then you had better jump."

DROPS IN BOAT.

"I dropped in and fell in the bottom, as they cried, 'lower away.' As the boat began to descend, two ladies were pushed hurriedly through the crowd on B deck and heaved over into the boat and a baby of 10 months was passed down after them. Down we went, the crew calling to those lowering, which end to keep her level. 'Aft,' 'stern,' 'both together,' until we were some ten feet from the water and here occurred the only anxious moment we had during the whole of our experience from leaving the deck to reaching the Carpathia.

"Immediately below our boat was the exhaust of the condensers, a huge stream of water pouring all the time from the ship's side just above the water line. It was plain we ought to be kept away from this not to be swamped by it when we touched water.

IN PERIL WITHOUT OFFICER.

"We had no officer aboard, nor petty officer or member of the crew to take charge. So one of the stokers shouted:

"'Some one find the pin which releases the boat from the ropes and pull it up.' No one knew where it was. We felt as well as we could on the floor and sides, but found nothing, and it was hard to move among so many people—we had sixty or seventy on board.

"Down we went and presently floated with our ropes still holding us. The exhaust was holding us away from the side of the vessel and the swell of the sea was urging us back against the side again.

UNDER ANOTHER BOAT.

"The result of all these forces was an impetus which carried us parallel to the ship's side and directly under boat 14, which had filled rapidly with men and was coming down on us in a way that threatened to submerge our boat.

"'Stop lowering 14,' our crew shouted, and the crew of No. 14, now only twenty-five feet above, shouted the same. But the distance to the top was some seventy feet, and the creaking pulleys must have deadened all sound to those above, for down she came—fifteen—ten feet—five feet—and a stoker and I reached up and touched her, swinging above our heads. The next drop would have brought her on our heads, but just before she dropped another stoker sprang to the ropes with his knife.

ESCAPE IS NARROW.

"'One,' I heard him say: 'two,' as his knife cut through the pulley ropes, and the next moment the exhaust stream had carried us clear, while boat 14 dropped into the water into the space we had the moment before occupied, our gunwales almost touching.

"We drifted away easily as the oars were got out and headed directly away from the ship. The crew seemed to me to be mostly cooks in white jackets, two to an oar, with a stoker at the tiller.

ELECT STOKER CAPTAIN.

"There was a certain amount of shouting from one end of the boat to the other, and discussions as to which way we should go, but finally it was decided to elect the stoker, who was steering, captain, and for all to obey his orders. He set to work at once to get into touch with the other boats, calling to them and getting as close as seemed wise so that when the search boats came in the morning to look for us, there would be more chance for all to be rescued by keeping together.

"It was now about 1 A. M.; a beautiful starlight night with no moon and not so very light; the sea was as calm as a pond, just a gentle heave as the boat dipped up and down in the swell; an ideal night except for the bitter cold for any one who had to be out in the middle of the Atlantic ocean in an open boat; and if ever there was a time when such a night was needed, surely it was now when hundreds of people, mostly women and children, afloat, hundreds of miles from land.

TITANIC STRIKING SPECTACLE.

"The captain-stoker told us that he had been at sea twenty-six years and had never yet seen such a calm night on the Atlantic. As we rowed away from the Titanic we looked back from time to time to watch her, and a more striking spectacle it was not possible for any one to see.

"In the distance she looked an enormous length, her great bulk outlined in black against the starry sky, every port hole and saloon blazing with light. It was impossible to think anything could be wrong with such a leviathan, were it not for the ominous tilt downwards in the bows, where the water was by now up to the lowest row of port holes.

"Presently—about 2 A. M., as near as I can remember—we observed her settling very rapidly, with the bows and the bridge completely under water, and concluded it was now only a question of minutes before she went, and so it proved. She slowly tilted straight on end, with the stern vertically upwards as she did, the lights in the cabins and saloons, which had not flickered for a moment since we left, died out, came on again for a single flash, and finally went out altogether. At the same time the machinery roared down through the vessel with a rattle and a groaning that could be heard for miles—the worst sound surely that could be heard in the middle of the ocean, a thousand miles away from land. But this was not yet quite the end.

"To our amazement she remained in that upright position for a time, which I estimate as five minutes, others in the boat say less, but it was certainly some minutes while we watched at least 150 feet of the Titanic towering above the sea and looming against the sky.

TAKES FINAL DIVE.

"Then with a quiet, slanting dive she disappeared beneath the waters and our eyes had looked for the last time on the gigantic vessel we had set out on from Southampton last Wednesday. And there was left to us the gently heaving sea, the boat filled to standing room with men and women in every conceivable condition of dress and undress above the perfect sky of brilliant stars with not a cloud in the sky, all tempered with a bitter cold that made us all long to be one of the crew who toiled away with the oars and kept themselves warm thereby—a curious deadening, bitter cold unlike anything we had felt before.

HEAR CRIES OF DROWNING.

"And then with all these there fell on the ear the most appalling noise that human being ever listened to—the cries of hundreds of our fellow beings struggling in the icy water crying for help with a cry that we knew could not be answered. We longed to return and pick up some of those swimming, but this would have meant swamping our boat and further loss of the lives of all of us.

"We tried to sing to keep the women from hearing the cries and rowed hard to get away from the scene of the wreck, but I think the memory of those sounds will be one of the things the rescued will find it difficult to efface from memory. We are all trying hard not to think of it.

DECEIVED BY AURORA.

"We kept a lookout for lights and several times it was shouted that steamer lights were seen, but they turned out to be either a light from another boat or a star low down on the horizon. About 3 A. M. we saw faint lights showing on the sky and all rejoiced to see what we expected was the coming dawn, but after watching for half an hour and seeing no change in the intensity of the light, we realized it was the northern lights.

"Presently low down on the horizon we saw a light, which slowly resolved itself into a double light, and we watched eagerly to see if the two lights would separate, and so prove to be only two of our boats, or whether they would remain together, in which case we should expect them to be mast headlight and a deck light below of a rescuing steamer.

SINGLE SHIP COMES.

"To our joy they moved as one, and round we swung the boat and headed for her. The steersman shouted: 'Now, boys, sing!' and for the first time the boat broke into song with 'Row for the shore, boys,' and for the first time tears came to the eyes of all of us as we realized that safety was at hand. The song was sung, but it was a very poor imitation of the real thing, for quavering voices make poor songs. A cheer was given next, and that was better—you keep in tune for a cheer.

"Our rescuer showed up rapidly, and as she swung around we saw her cabins all a-light and knew she must be a large steamer. She was now motionless and we had to row to her. Just then day broke, a beautiful, quiet dawn with faint pink clouds just above the horizon and a new moon whose crescent just touched the horizon.

"'Turn your money over, boys,' said our cheery steersman, "that is if you have any," he added. We laughed at him for his superstition at such a time, but he countered very neatly by adding: "Well, I shall never say again that thirteen is an unlucky number, boat 13 has been the best friend we ever had."

"As we neared the Carpathia we saw in the dawning light what we thought was a full-rigged schooner standing up near her and presently behind her another, all sails set, and we said:

"'They are fisher boats from the New Foundland bank and have seen the steamer lying too and are standing by to help,' but in another five minutes the light shown pink on them and we saw they were ice bergs towering many feet in the air, huge glistening masses, deadly white, still and peaked in a way that had suggested a schooner.

"We glanced round the horizon and there were others wherever the eye could reach. The steamer we had to reach was surrounded by them and we had to make a detour to reach her, for between her and us lay another huge berg. We rowed up to the Carpathia about 4:30 A. M., and were hoisted or climed up the ship's sides with very grateful hearts.

"We were received with a welcome that was overwhelming in its warmth, and I should like to say here that there is not a member of the Titanic on board who feels capable of expressing in adequate terms his gratitude for the attentions showered upon us by the captain, officers, crew and passengers on board the Carpathia.

READY FOR 3,000.

"They were called upon suddenly in midocean to receive, they thought, 3,000 passengers and crew, and although this was not to be, they made every arrangement for so doing. Hot meals, blankets and berths were provided for each as we came on board. Clothing and money were supplied individually by passengers. Berths were given up by men who slept on the smoking room floor or anywhere else that a corner could be found.

"The ship had sent off hundreds of Marconigrams free of charge to anxious relatives. The catering arrangements in charge of the purser and stewards have been so admirably organized that it would not be possible to be better served had we been regular passengers aboard our own ship.

PRIVATE MESSAGES FIRST.

"The captain has placed all private messages to friends in front of press messages—in fact, he has refused to send any press messages, beyond a bare twenty words to a press association, and the names of all those saved, placing the needs of the private passengers of the Titanic in front of any 'copy' for the press. There is this morning, April 18, a Marconigram from Marconi on the Seine, saying no press news is coming through and asking that some be sent by navy boats or Siasconset."

THREE OF FAMILY DIE

Woman About to Jump Into Life Boat Discovers Husband Is Missing—Search Is Fatal.

New York, April 18.—Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Allison of Montreal and their daughter were drowned. Their 10-months-old baby, a boy, and his nurse were saved. Mrs. Allison was about to jump into a lifeboat, where the nurse and baby were, when she discovered that her husband was not with her. She went back on the ship to look for him and did not return.

Many of the stronger women in the boats helped at the oars. Several insisted upon it on the ground that actually doing something kept them from worrying so much. Mrs. Fred Joel Swift pulled an oar for five hours.

Captain Defied Rescuers.

New York, April 18.—G. W. Whitehead, a steward on the Titanic, said he saw Captain Smith pushed by officers on to the last raft which left the wrecked ship. He said he saw Captain Smith struggle with other men on the raft, finally force his way into the water and swim back toward the Titanic.

TOOK SAILOR'S PLACE

North Dakota Farmer Helped to Man Life Boat—Explosion Reminded Him of Hopper.

New York, April 18.—Oscar Hetman, a farmer of Bauman, N. D., helped man one of the boats when a sailor, who was supposed to take a place, fell overboard and was lost. Hetman was in the last boat to leave the ship, he says, and pulled away five minutes before the Titanic went down. Hetman also says that when the boiler explosion occured a scene followed which reminded the farmer of what occur in a hopper on his farm.

The steerage deck, he remembered, was jammed about him with steerage immigrants, and immediately after the explosion the deck gave away in the middle and the people standing there fell to the bottom of the hold. The sight that followed was too awful, he said, to put into words, other than to repeat that he thought again and again of his hopper.

Most of the steerage passengers were killed, the farmer said, when the deck broke asunder.

"I do not believe," he said, "they lived long enough after that fall to suffer a great deal. As I remember it, the water rushed in on them immediately. For a moment the cries of the steerage men and women came up from the hold, but only for a moment."

MEN WERE ORDERLY

Max Frolicher-Strehli Says Only Commotion Caused by Women Parted From Husbands.

New York, April 18.—Max Frolicher-Stehli, who, with his wife and his daughter, Margaret, was on the way to this city to visit a brother, said:

"My wife and two women entered one of the first boats lowered. Twelve men, including myself, were standing near by, and as there were no other women passengers waiting we were ordered to get in. The sea was calm. We were rowed by four seamen, one of whom was in charge.

"The order maintained on the Titanic was what I would call remarkable. There was very little pushing, and in most cases it was the women who caused the commotion by insisting that their husbands go with them into the lifeboats. As a rule the men were very orderly. It was not until we had left the ship that many of the women showed fright. From that time on, however, they filled the air with shrieks."

JUMPS IN AS BOAT PASSES.

Attache of Swedish Legation Saw Chance and Took It.

New York, April 18.—H. B. Stephenson, one of the survivors, who, it was said, is attached to the Swedish legation at Washington, made the following statement:

"At the time of the collision a Mr. Woolner and myself were seated in the cafe. There was only a slight jar, and we thought nothing of it until we heard the excitement on deck. There was an order issued for all women to come on deck. Woolner and myself went two decks down and saw water rushing in there. A lifeboat was lowered with several woman and children from the steerage and as it passed where I was I jumped in. I grabbed an oar and assisted the two men in the boat to row away from the steamer. We were about 200 yards away when the Titanic went down. There was hardly any suction. We were picked up about five hours later, suffering from the cold."

BELIEVE ELY MAN PERISHED.

Friends Received Word He Would Cross Ocean on "New Ship."

Duluth, Minn., April 18.—Joseph Kelsel of Ely, a weighmaster for the Duluth & Iron Range road, is supposed to have perished on the Titanic, for only a few weeks ago he wrote friends in Ely that he was delaying his return for a week in order to cross the ocean on a "new ship" that was about to make her maiden voyage.

A Dane named Ever Vandlen was coming across in the Titanic as stocker helper in order to save his passage money. He was on the way to South Superior, Wis., where he had employment in view. It is presumed Vandlen had not less than $300 on him, according to some of his recent correspondence. He left a young wife behind him. No hope is held out that either Kelsel or Vandlen was rescued.

Case of the Bitter Bitten

Amusing Transaction in Counterfeit Bills and Smuggled Opium Takes Place in Manila.

The city secret service is still zealously investigating the operations of the gang of counterfeiters recently gathered in, and each day brings a new discovery of some activity of the gang and the uncovering of more of their paraphernalia.

Behind the story of the arrest is a tale, told by one of the alleged counterfeiters, which contradicts the old saying about there being honor even among thieves.

The counterfeit money was not a particularly good imitation of the 20 peso bills turned out by the government, and realizing its deficiencies, its makers hit upon the plan of buying opium with it, instead of distributing it around promiscuously.

When asked the other day by the detectives how the scheme was worked, one of the counterfeiters told the detectives.

"Opium, you know," he began, "is generally sold at night. Neither we nor the ones who sell it to us are taking any chances, so when we buy it the transfer of course is completed as quickly as possible. I have bought lots of the drug with phony money and I never yet saw the Chinese count it, and you can be sure I never take time to analyze the dope when I get it. The main idea is to get away with the goods without being caught.

"Just before you got us I went out aboard a steamer and bought a can. I had the money wadded up—200 pesos it was, in phony money. I pushed the wad to the Chinee and he as quickly handed me the can."

Here the man smiled at the recollection. "I suppose he examined the money afterward. I know I examined what was in the can."

Here he paused, and one of the sleuths asked. "What was in the can! Did you get stung, too?"

"Seguro. The can was filled with sirup!"—Manila Times.

Fortune in Rare Coins

Fat Picking for Watchful Cashiers in Stores, Bartenders and Street Car Conductors.

Cashiers in stores and restaurants, ticket agents at theaters and railroad stations, bartenders and conductors on cars are in a fair position to become collectors of rare coins, as they handle every kind of money piece from foreign coins to old-time money of the United States. A saloonkeeper in Harlem declares he has made a small fortune during the last few years by saving the rare coins that are taken over the bar.

"I have a tin box filled with rare United States pieces," he related, "and I could have a collection of foreign coins if I so desired. You would be surprised to see how anxious some men are to get a drink at the expense of spending a rare old coin for its face value. Silver and paper currency that pay a good premium are given to my bartenders for face value. I have often noticed a reluctance on the part of the holder before parting with the coin. He will give a last look at the money and then place it on the bar for the refreshing beverage. One man told me that a coin had been in the the family for nearly a century. He wanted only one drink and was afraid I would not take the coin because of its age. I gave him the drink and change for the piece at its face value, and he was overjoyed."

Game All Right.

While playing an engagement in St. Louis a couple of seasons ago, Tom Lewis struck up an acquaintance with a wealthy Texan living in the same hotel. There was a ball game scheduled that day between the Browns and a visiting club and Lewis invited his new friend to go out and see it. The battle was a particularly hot one, the game going to an eleven-inning tie. When they got back to the hotel the Texan, who had become imbued with some of Lewis' enthusiasm, began to recount the scenes and close plays of the game to the hotel clerk.

"Well," said that worthy, "I'm glad you saw such a good game."

"Wall, now," said the Texan, "I reckon as how it was a good game all right. Why, sir, them two passel of youngsters just played and played till plumb dark and nary one made ary

HEROIC CREW GIVE UP THEIR LIVES

Colonel Astor, Henry B. Harris, Jacques Futrelle and Other Notables Go to Their Death With Equal Heroism.

New York, April 18.—Seventeen hundred and twenty-six lives were lost on the Titanic which struck an iceberg at 11:45 P. M. Sunday and were at the ocean's bottom two hours and thirty-five minutes after. Of the Titanic's 341 first cabin passengers 212 were saved; 154 of them were women and children, and of the 262 second cabin passengers 115 were saved, 102 of them were women and children.

Of the third-class, 800 in number, 136 were saved, 83 of whom were women and children. Of 985 officers and crew, 199, including 22 women, were rescued.

No survivors can question the courage of the crew, hundreds of whom gave their lives with a heroism which equaled, but could not exceed, that of John Jacob Astor, Henry B. Harris, Jacques Futrelle and others in the long list of first cabin passengers.

The bulk head system, though probably working, prevailed only to delay the ship's sinking.

EXPLOSIONS BREAK SHIP IN TWO

The position of the ship's wound on the starboard quarter admitted icy water which caused the boilers to explode and those explosions broke the ship in two.

The crash against the iceberg, which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile, came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated from the bridge which stopped the engines and closed the air-tight doors.

Harold Cotton, the marine operator of the Carpathia, did not go to bed at his usual time Sunday night, and as a result caught the first message of the Titanic's plight. He had been relaying messages to the Titanic on Sunday night, and shortly after 11 o'clock bade the Titanic good night.

Just as he was about to take the receiver off his head the C. Q. D. call sounded. This was followed by the words "We've hit something; come at once."

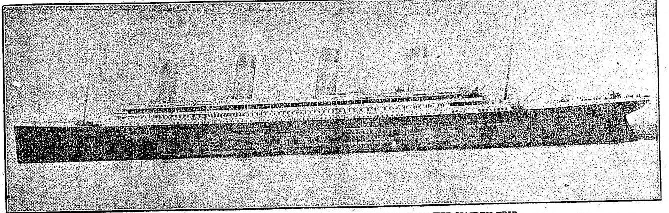
Cotton at once communicated with the Carpathia's officers and her course was at once changed in the direction of the Titanic at full speed of eighteen knots for the full distance of sixty miles intervening between the two ships.

"I'M AFRAID WE ARE GONE."

Before Cotton could make reply to the C. Q. D. the Titanic's "I'm afraid we are gone," Cotton sent word of the coming of the Carpathia. No further communication was had with the doomed ship.

The Titanic's speed of twenty-three knots an hour was never slackened, and she was going at that speed when she struck.

S. V. Silverthorne of St. Louis was one of the three or four saloon passengers on the Titanic who saw the deadly iceberg just after the collision.



THE TITANIC, LARGEST VESSEL EVER BUILT, WAS SUNK ON HER MAIDEN TRIP.

CAPTAIN ORDERS LIFE BOATS LOWERED.

Captain Smith was on the bridge a moment later. He summoned all on board to put on life preservers and ordered the lifeboats lowered. The first boat had more male passengers as they were the first to reach the deck.

ENFORCE "WOMEN FIRST" RULE WITH DRAWN REVOLVERS.

When the rush of frightened men and women and crying children to the decks began, the "women first" rule was rigidly enforced. Officers drew revolvers, but in most cases there was no use for them.

Revolver shots were heard shortly before the Titanic went down, caused many rumors, one that Captain Smith had shot himself, another that First Officer Murdock had ended his life, but members of the crew discredit these reports.

CAPTAIN SMITH ON THE BRIDGE AS BOAT GOES DOWN.

Captain Smith was last seen on the bridge just before the ship sank, leaping only after the decks had washed away.

What became of the men with life preservers was the question asked by many since the disaster. Many of those with life preservers were seen to go down, despite the preservers, and dead bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away.

It is stated positively the ship's string band gathered in the saloon near the end and played "Nearer My God to Thee."

Mrs. Isador Straus refused to leave her husband's side and both perished together.

NONE WAS ALARMED AT FIRST.

"I was in the smoking room reading near a bridge whist game at one of the tables. When the crash came I said, "We've hit something," and went on the starboard side to look. None of us was alarmed. It occurred to me that we might have bumped some small craft.

"I went back in the smoking room with the others. One of the bridge players had not left the smoking room at all and was waiting impatiently for the others to come back and resume the game. They returned and took up their hands and we were all about to settle down when an officer ordered us on deck and told us to get into the boats."

NOT ENOUGH WOMEN TO FILL THE FIRST BOAT.

"There not being enough women on deck to fill the first ones, we did not like the idea of leaving the ship then, but did as we were told. Had we been in our rooms we would have had to stand aside as other men did then."

MR. HURD'S STORY.

New York, April 18.—The Morning World tomorrow will publish Mr. Hurd's story in detail. In addition to the foregoing Mr. Hurd says in part:

"Facts which I have established by inquiries on the Carpathia, as positively as they could be established, in view of the silence of the few surviving officers, are:

OFFICERS KNEW ICEBERGS WERE NEAR.

"That the Titanic's officers knew, several hours before the crash, of the possible nearness of the icebergs.

"That the Titanic's speed, nearly 23 knots an hour, was not slackened.

"That the number of the life boats on the Titanic was insufficient to accomodate more than a third of the passengers to say nothing of the crew. Most members of the crew say there were sixteen life boats and two collapsibles; none say there were more than twenty boats in all.

The 700 who escaped filled most of the sixteen lifeboats and the one collapsible, which got away, to the limit of their capacity.

"Had the ship struck the iceberg headon at whatever speed and with whatever resulting shock, the bulkhead system of watertight compartments would probably have saved the vessel. As one man expressed it, it was the impossible that happened when, with a shock unbelievably light, the ship's side was torn for a length which made the bulkhead system ineffective.

WAS SPEEDING FOR RECORD.

"The Titanic was 1,799 miles from Queenstown and 1,191 miles from New York, speeding for a maiden voyage record. The night was starlight, the sea glassy. Light were out in most of the state rooms, and only two or three congenial groups remained in the public rooms.

"In the crows' nest, or lookout, and on the bridge, officers and members of the crew were at their places, awaiting relief at midnight from their two hours' watch.

"At 11:45 o'clock came the sudden sound of two guns, a warning of immediate danger.

"The crash against the iceberg, which had been sighted at only a quarter of a mile came almost simultaneously with the click of the levers operated by those on the bridge, which stopped the engines and closed the water tight doors.

"Captain Smith was on the bridge a moment later, giving orders for the summoning of all on board and for the putting on of life preservers and the lowering of the life boats.

"The first boats lowered contained more than passengers than the later ones, as the men were on deck first, and not enough women were there to fill them.

CREW DIDN'T HAVE TO USE REVOLVERS.

"When a moment later, the rush of frightened women and crying children to the deck began, enforcement of the women first rule became rigid. Officers loading the boats drew revolvers but in most of the cases the men, both passengers and crew, behaved in a way that called for no such restraint.

RUMORED THAT CAPTAIN SHOT HIMSELF.

"Revolver shots, heard by many persons shortly before the end of the Titanic, caused many rumors. One was that Captain Smith shot himself, another was that First Officer Murdock had ended his life. Smith, Murdock and Sixth Officer Moody are known to have been lost. The surviving officers, Lightoller, Pittman, Bothall and Lowe, have made no statement.

CAPTAIN JERKED AWAY FROM WOULD-BE RESCUERS.

"Members of the crew discredit all reports of suicide and say Captain Smith remained on the bridge until just before the ship sank, leaping only after those on the deck had been washed away. It is also related that when a cook later sought to pull him aboard a lifeboat he exclaimed: 'Let me go,' and, jerking away, went down.

DEAD BODIES ON SURFACE.

"What became of the men with life preservers is a question asked since the disaster by many persons. Dead bodies floated on the surface as the last boats moved away.

"To relate that the ship's string band gathered into the saloon, near the end, and played 'Nearer My God to Thee' sounds like an attempt to give an added solemn color to a scene which was in itself the climax of solemnity. But various passengers and survivors of the crew agree in the declaration that they heard the music:

> "'So by my woes I'll be > Nearer my God to thee,
> Nearer to thee.'

"WOMEN FIRST" WAS ORDER.

"In the loading of the first boat restrictions of sex were not made, and it seemed to the men who filed in beside the women that there would be boats enough for all. But the ship's officers knew better than this, and as the spreading fear caused an advance towards the suspended craft the order 'Women first' was heard and the men were pushed aside.

COURAGE OF MEN ASSERTED.

"To the scene of the next two hours on those decks and in the waters below, such adjectives as "dramatic" and "tragic" do but poor justice. With the knowledge of deadly peril gaining greater power each moment over those men and women, the courage of the greater part of the men, both among cabin passengers, officers, crew and steerage, asserted itself.

MRS. STRAUS REFUSED TO LEAVE HUSBAND.

Isidor Straus, supporting his wife on her way to a life boat, was held back by an inexorable guard. Another officer strove to help her to a seat of safety, but she brushed away his arm and clung to her husband, crying, "I will not go without you."

Another woman took her place and Mrs. Straus, clinging to her husband, became part of a picture now drawn indelibly in many minds.

ASTOR AND HARRIS SIDE BY SIDE.

Colonel Astor, holding his young wife's arm, stood decorously aside as the officers spoke to him and Mrs. Astor and her maid were ushered to seats. Mrs. Henry B. Harris, parted in like manner from her husband, saw him last at the rail, beside Colonel Astor.

Walter M. Clark of Los Angeles, nephew of the Montana senator, joined the line of men as his young wife, sobbing, was placed in one of the craft.

"Let him come. There is room," cried Mrs. Emil Taussig, as the men of the White Star motioned to her husband to leave her. It was with great difficulty that he released her hold to permit her to be led to her place.

George D. Widener, who had been in Captain Smith's company a few moments after the crash, was another whose wife was parted from him and lowered, a moment later to the surface of the calm sea.

SAW NOTHING OF BUTT OR STEAD.

Of Major Archie Butt, a favorite with his fellow tourists; of Charles M. Hays, president of the Grand Trunk; of Benjamin Guggenheim or of William T. Stead no one seems to know whether they tarried too long in their state rooms or whether they forebore to approach the fast filling boats; none of them was in the throng which, weary hours afterward, reached the Carpathia.

CHECK RUSH OF STEERAGE MEN.

As they reached the water, those in the boats saw what those on the decks could not see—that the Titanic was listing rapidly to starboard and that her stern was rising at a portentous angle. A rush of men steerage passengers toward the boats was checked by officers with revolvers in hand.

NO PROVISIONS IN BOAT.

Some of the boats, crowded too full, drifted for a time. None had provisions or water, there was lack of clothing, and the only lights were the still undimmed arcs and incandescents of the settling ship.

STEWARD'S GREEN LIGHT KEPT THEM TOGETHER.

On one of the boats a steward, who explained to the passengers that he had been shipwrecked twice before, appeared carrying three oranges and a green light. That green light, many of the survivors say, was to the shipwrecked hundreds as the pillar of fire by night. Long after the ship had disappeared, and while confusing false lights danced about the boats, the green lantern kept them together on the course which led them to the Carpathia.

PASSENGERS AND SAILORS LEAP OVERBOARD.

As the end of the Titanic became manifestly but a matter of moments, the oarsmen pulled their boats away and the chilling waters began to echo splash after splash as passengers and sailors in life preservers leaped overboard and started swimming away to escape the expected suction.

Only the hardiest constitution could endure for more than a few moments such a numbing bath. The first vigorous strokes gave way to heartbreaking cries of "Help, help," and stiffened forms were seen floating, relaxed in death.

Revolver shots were heard in the ship's last moments. The report spread among the boats was that Captain Smith had ended his life with a bullet.

SAY CAPTAIN JUMPED AT LAST MOMENT.

Then it was said that a mate had shot a steward who had tried to push his way into a boat against orders. None of these tales has been verified, and many of the crew say the captain without a preserver leaped in at the last and went down, refusing a cook's offered aid.

The last of the boats, a collapsible, was launched too late to get away and was overturned by the ship sinking. Some of those in it—all, say some witnesses—found safety on a raft or were picked up by a lifeboat. In the Marconi tower, almost to the last, the click of the sending instrument was heard over the waters.

MUSIC OF ORCHESTRA GROWS FAINTER.

As the screams in the water multiplied, another sound was heard, strong and clear at first, then fainter in the distance. It was the melody of the hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," played by the string orchestra in the dining saloon. Some of those on the water started to sing the words but grew silent as they realized that for the men who played the music was a sacrament soon to be consummated by death. The strains of the hymn and the frantic cries of the dying blended in a symphony of sorrow.

TITANIC DISAPPEARS.

Led by the green light, the boats drew away, and the bow, then the quarter, then the stacks and last the stern of the marvel ship of a few days before passed beneath the waters. The great force of the ship sinking was unaided by any violence of the elements, and the suction, not so great as had been feared, rocked but mildly the group of boats now a quarter of a mile distant from it.

WOMEN WEEP; MEN CHOKE BACK TEARS.

Sixteen boats were in the procession which entered on the terrible hours of rowing, drifting and suspense. Women wept for lost husbands and sons and the men choked back tears and sought to comfort the widowed. They strove, though none too sure themselves, to convince the women of the certainty that a rescue ship would appear.

CARPATHIA'S SMOKESTACK APPEARS.

Early dawn brought no ship, but not long after 5 o'clock the Carpathia, far out of her path and making eighteen knots instead of her usual fifteen, showed her single red and black smoke stack upon the horizon. In the joy of that sight griefs were forgotten for the moment.

Soon afterward, Captain Rostron and Chief Steward Hughes were welcoming chilled and bedraggled arrivals over the Carpathia's side.

The silence of the Carpathia's engines, the piercing cold, the clamor of many voices in the companion ways had caused me to dress hurriedly and awaken my wife at 5:40 A. M. Monday. Our steward, meeting me outside, pointed to a wailing host in the rear dining room and said, "From the Titanic. She's at the bottom of the ocean."

WOMEN FALTER AS THEY ARE HELPED ABOARD.

At the ship's side a moment later I saw the last of the line of boats discharge their loads and saw women, some with cheap shawls about their heads, some with the costliest of fur coats, ascending the ship's side. And such joy as the first sight of our ship may have given them had disappeared from their faces and there were tears and signs of faltering as the women were helped up the ladders or hoisted aboard in swings. For lack of room to stow them, several of the Titanic's boats were set adrift.

PART BRIDAL COUPLES

Only One of Ten Was Not Separated Before Titanic Went Down.

Special to the Pioneer Press.

New York, April 18.—There were ten bridal couples aboard the Titanic, and only one of them was not separated. This fortunate young couple, in an interview given on the pier, said they were the only ones who did not become separated, all of which, they maintained, was due to the fact that there was no panic at first. The bridegroom, therefore, was allowed to enter the boat with his bride. The lucky couple got away from the pier shortly after their experiences had been told to the reporter by a man on the pier. He said he believed they were Mr. and Mrs. George Harder.

"The groom," said the reporter's informant, "related an incident to me of a man less fortunate than himself. This man, the groom told me, just before the panic set in was standing at the gangway where the women were being loaded into a boat and made a move as though to enter the boat. An officer approached and ordered the man away. Not moving quickly enough to satisfy the officer, the latter walked to the man and knocked him down. The man, instead of falling to the deck, fell head first into the boat, and, though stunned by the fall, he soon revived and found himself still in the boat, which by that time was being lowered. The man was saved as a result.

His Creed a Selfish One.

The philosophy of the man in the street is to get through life with a minimum of self-sacrifice and a maximum of self-indulgence.

Last Minstrel of Ireland

Thomas Smith, Aged Wandering Singer and Story Teller, Died Recently in County Meath.

An aged wandering singer, rhymster and story teller, who was said to be a descendant of one famed in the days of minstrelsy, died recently in the hospital in County Meath, Ireland. He was the last of the old school of so-called poets who lived by story telling and verse making at farm house firesides. His name was Thomas Smith, and according to report one of his ancestors wore cap and bells and served as a jester to a prince. In his boyhood Smith wore a faded doublet of alternating stripes of yellow and blue which had been handed down to him as a relic of his great-granddaddy's fame as a countryside funmaker.

His stories for the most part had to do with the fairies, and always presented the good fairy in the part of straightened tangles and easing the path of happy marriage. His visits throughout the country were made with scheduled regularity, and an evening with the poet was the occasion for a gathering of young folks. Like most poets, he was not thrifty, and died poor.

Mean Man.

Professor John Dewey of Columbia was talking about a legislator who had turned traitor to the suffrage cause. "A man who could be so mean to woman," he said, "must be the original of the Clayton jail story.

"A convict in the Clayton jail, you know, managed to do a little flirting over the wall. He flirted for some weeks with a buxom girl who milked the cows in a field adjoining the jail; and one evening he called to her and they struck up a conversation. Every day after that for a year or more, the girl came to the wall. Then the convict, getting tired of her, told her it was no use waiting for him, as he was in for life."

Air Needed in Human Lungs.

In one minute, in a state of rest, the average man takes into his lungs about eight liters, or 48.8 cubic inches, of air. In walking, he needs 16 liters, or 97.6 cubic inches; in climbing, 23 liters, or 140.3 cubic inches; in riding at a trot, 33 liters, or 201.3 cubic inches; and in long-distance running, 57 liters, or 347.7 cubic inches.

Useful Agent for Show.

Al. G. Field, the minstrel man, has another story which he is telling. He says that not long ago an attache of his show was sent out in an Iowa town to give some handbills, or heralds, to boys for distribution. The man found only one boy willing to work. He didn't deem it necessary to explain to the boy that the bills were to be distributed about town. He took it for granted that the boy knew. The youngster took the printed slips of paper and the man gave him a quarter and left. Half an hour later the showman chanced to pass along the street and saw the boy standing on the sidewalk, crying.

"What's the matter?" asked the man.

The boy gave a couple of final sobs and, wiping his eyes on his sleeve, said:

"A man jist come along an' took one of my bills."

PAPER BAG COOKING

WONDER-WORKING SYSTEM PERFECTED BY M. SOYER, WORLD'S GREATEST LIVING CHEF

FOR VARIOUS MEATS.

By Martha McCulloch Williams.

Every manner of meat, even the humblest, may be made tender and palatable by means of paper bag cooking, if only the cook knows how and is willing to take the pains. Even the humble pig's head and feet. An extreme example, you say! Try it—and see if you incline to gainsay further.

Scrape the outer skin very clean, cut off the ears and nose of the head, scalding both head and feet well and removing all removable integument outside and in. The brains, of course, will have been removed. Break off any sharp projecting bones from either head or feet, blanch them by pouring boiling water upon them, taking out and dropping in very cold water, then drain and season lightly with salt. Lay in a large well-greased paper bag with a stalk or two of celery if at hand and a single slice of onion. The pepper and herbs come in later. Add half a pint to a pint of cold water, according to the bulk of the meat, seal bag tight, lay on trivet, set in hot oven for five minutes, then reduce heat two-thirds and cook for five or six hours. Take up, empty into a bowl, and as soon as it can possibly be handled, pick up, removing all bones. The gristle will have dissolved. Now add the seasoning—pepper, powdered herbs, especially sage, a bare dash of tarragon vinegar, and a bare suspicion of garlic. If there is much liquid, add either sifted cornmeal or bread crumbs, both browned in the oven. Pack smooth in an earthen mould and let get cold. There will be headcheese worth eating.

Nor is stuffed pork tenderloin, which is as full of relish as either goose or turkey, or even the lordly baron of roast beef to be disdained. Get large fat tenderloins, have them split, but the halves left together down the side, lay a good breadcrumb or mashed potato stuffing, highly seasoned with butter or drippings, pepper, sage, and onion, in the split, skewer the edges together over the stuffing, and cook in a well greased bag with a very little water until well done. This is specially economical, in that there is no bone to be thrown away.

Either a fresh ham or shoulder, boned, stuffed and cooked in a paper bag, will furnish a mighty satisfying dinner meat. The oven ought to be very hot and stay so for seven to ten minutes, depending on the size of the meat. Then slack heat one-half and cook until thoroughly done.

A square of rib-pork, the skin cut in checkers, well seasoned and baked in a paper bag with apples or sweet potatoes about it, will need no water, only a well greased bag. Spareribs can be paper bag baked if care is used in handling them to see that the rib-ends do not go through the paper. Loin-roast, cooked thus with either apples or potatoes, or white potatoes with a slice or two of onion, will make any hungry soul rejoice.

Perfect capon is none so plenty in the markets, but if to be had is the best of all poultry. Get a big bird—eight to nine pounds. Stuff, but not too tight, putting a handful in the crop-space. Truss extra firmly, fastening thin slices of bacon over the breast and thighs underneath the trussing strings. Grease all the rest of the body liberally with soft butter, put a little butter under the bacon on the breast, then pop into a loose-fitting well greased paper bag, lay on a trivet, set on broiler in hot oven, let cook till bag corners turn very brown, then slack heat half, or even a little more if the heat is fierce, and cook for an hour and a half to an hour and three-quarters.

Choose your goose young and fat, even though you know the paper bag will make a tough bird tender. Singe, wash and drain the same as capon, and hanging in a cold place a day and night improves it. For the stuffing boil mild onions very tender, slicing them and letting them lie in salt water half an hour before cooking. A medium goose will take two to six onions, according to size, and two or four apples. Peel and slice them, cook soft with the onions, adding a very little chopped celery. Mash all together, then add to mashed potato enough to fill the goose, but not too full. Season with salt and pepper, also a tablespoonful of powdered sage and a tiny pinch of mixed herbs. Add a large spoonful of lard or butter, stir it well through the hot mass, let it cool a bit, then stuff the goose, which has been seasoned inside and out, truss very firmly, rub over well with lard, butter or drippings, put into a thickly-greased bag of generous size, add a tablespoonful of cold salt water, seal, and set in hot oven for ten minutes. Slack heat half and cook done, allowing twenty-two minutes to the pound.

Stuffed Tomatoes, Milanaise.—Cut out freely the stem ends of six large tomatoes, scoop out the seed and part of the pulp, dust the insides well with pepper and salt and put a bit of butter in each. Fill with finely minced cold meat—beef, veal, lamb or chicken, mixed with minced raw bacon and seasoned lightly with salt and pepper. Sprinkle fried bread crumbs thickly over the top, put in a well-greased bag and cook in a quick oven ten to twelve minutes. Serve on a very hot dish.

BAKING FAVORITE CAKES.

Paper bag cooking betters cakes as much as it does meat or pastry. Please to keep this fact in mind. Also the fact that you should never try to make cakes at haphazard. Instead, take a day or several days off from bridge and shopping and give your whole mind to the matter in hand. Decide first what cakes you care to make, then reckon up what you will need to make them of. Many a good cake has been saddened past all remedy through waiting at the wrong minute for some essential ingredient, overlooked in the general buying.

Never melt butter unless melted butter is specifically called for in your receipt. Set the butter crock outside the refrigerator for several hours before you need its contents—the kitchen temperature will make the butter just right for creaming. Keep eggs cool—they beat light the quicker for it. Always add a tiny pinch of salt to the whites in beginning to froth them—it makes the frothing easier and improves the taste. Eggs, it is needless to say, must be above suspicion. Sift flour and set it where it will get warm and dry without scorching, then sift it again before using it. Measure it after the second sifting, and if baking powder or soda and cream tartar are to be put in it, add them to the measured bulk, and sift a third time.

Cake must be beaten well, and thoroughly, if you want it firm, yet light, and of fine, close texture. Sweet milk helps to this fine texture. Sour milk or cream, contrarywise, tends to a coarse, bubbly grain.

Prepare fruit over night, if possible. Two such flavors as lemon and vanilla, vanilla and rose-water, or rose-water and almond, give to cake a tang as delicious as it is unusual. A spoonful of brandy or even a good corn whiskey, beaten well through the cake just before the flavoring—which should be put in the very last thing—will make the cake lighter, better colored, and of better keeping quality.

Sift spices through part of the flour, adding the spiced flour alternately with what is left plain. Always sift sugar, and more than once if it is clammy. Warming it gently helps to make light cake. It should be sifted afresh after the warming.

As I have said, paper bag cooking betters cake as much as it does meat or pastry. It can be done in the bags, but I advise using in conjunction with the bags either paper souffle-cases or very thin tin moulds, square, oblong, or round, or cases made from the bags themselves.

Paper bag baking is a little quicker, and ever so much more certain.

Small patty pans, or fancy-shaped muffin moulds, filled with cake batter and baked inside bags, will afford an almost infinite variety of ornamented good things.

Sweets for the Sweet

By Nicolas Soyer, Chef of Brooks' Club, London.

Beignets a la Portugaise: Wash well six ounces of Caroline rice, place it in a clean stew pan, adding four ounces of powdered sugar, two ounces of butter, half a stick of cinnamon and a strip of lemon peel or a very little grated rind of lemon. Allow the butter to melt, shaking the pan to avoid burning, then add a pint of milk. Cover closely and bring gently to the boil. Then draw the pan to the side of the fire and simmer slowly for rather more than a quarter of an hour, when the rice should have absorbed all the milk and be perfectly tender. Withdraw the pan from the fire and allow the mixture to cool a little. Then add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs and the whites, whisked to a firm froth with a tiny pinch of salt and a little lemon juice. Mix lightly, but very thoroughly, and then form into balls about the size of a small tangerine. Make an aperture in each as carefully as possible, and insert a small spoonful of either apricot jam or marmalade in the middle. Close up neatly, then dip in egg and breadcrumbs. Have ready a well-greased bag, put in the beignets, and cook for fifteen minutes. Take out and serve at once.

Felt Case Was Desperate

Driver's Advice to His Passenger Probably the Best Thing Under the Circumstances.

A colonel who happened to be in a great hurry to catch a boat at Dublin accosted a jarvey and offered him 10s. if he could drive him to the North Wall in ten minutes. The jarvey said his horse was too old, it being an old war-horse.

At this the colonel said: "If it is an old war-horse, why, I'll drive it myself," and getting into the driver's seat he waved the whip in the air and roared "Charge!"

The animal ran as hard as it could go, and when it arrived at the North Wall the colonel shouted "Halt!" The horse stopped, and he caught the boat.

A few weeks later a minister happened to be catching the same boat as the colonel, and having only about ten minutes to do it in, he accosted the same jarvey, stating that if he could drive him to the North Wall he would give him 15s. The jarvey jumped at the offer, and after the minister had ascended into the car he waved the whip in the air and cried "Charge!"

The animal again ran as hard as it could. But, alas! when nearing the boat a look of consternation was plainly seen on the jarvey's face. Then, yelling with all his might at the minister, he cried: "Jump, yer riverence, jump! I've forgotten the password!"

Chicago's Traffic Problem.

Tunneling beneath the Chicago river at all points where drawbridges are now operated is the only solution to the traffic problem which is being faced by Chicago, according to Col. George A. Zinn, government engineer stationed there. Properly constructed tunnels, the engineer contends, have every advantage over the bridges now in operation, and comparing the upkeep cost with the bridges the submarine passages would prove a real economy to the city of Chicago.

GREATEST LESSON OF LIFE

The One Thing Above All That a Woman Should Be Quick to Learn and Remember.

The woman who makes good must be blessed with strength and health, and an ambition to learn and take advantage of every opportunity that comes her way. She must work with all her heart and play with all her heart; above all things avoiding indifference.

Hers is the temperament that recognizes that encouragement is all nice and pretty, but if one is going to do the thing that counts one doesn't need it; that refuses to be dismayed by repeated failures and that has a certain faith that what has been done by many may be done by another; that nobody goes through life without disappointments, heartaches and the breaking of pet illusions; that there is nothing more common than trouble, but that it is the wise ones of earth that keep it in the background. That's the great lesson of life.—Exchange.

ALMOST CRAZY WITH ECZEMA

"I, the undersigned, cannot give enough praise to the Cuticura Remedies. I had been doctoring for at least a year for eczema on my foot. I had tried doctor after doctor all to no avail. When a young girl I sprained my ankle three different times, paying little or no attention to it, when five years ago a small spot showed upon my left ankle. I was worried and sent for a doctor. He said it was eczema. He drew a small bone from the ankle about the size of a match and about an inch long. The small hole grew to about the size of an apple, and the eczema spread to the knee. The doctors never could heal the hole in the ankle. The whole foot ran water all the time.

"My husband and my sons were up night and day wheeling me from one room to another in the hope of giving me some relief. I would sit for hours at a time in front of the fireplace hoping for daybreak. The pain was so intense I was almost crazy, in fact, I would lose my reason for hours at a time. One day a friend of mine dropped in to see me. No more had she glanced at my foot than she exclaimed: 'Mrs. Finnegan, why in the world don't you try the Cuticura Remedies!' Being disgusted with the doctors and their medicines, and not being able to sleep at all, I decided to give the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment a trial. After using them three days that night I slept as sound as a silver dollar for eight long hours. I awoke in the morning with but very little pain, in fact, I thought I was in heaven. After using the Cuticura Remedies for three months I was perfectly restored to health, thanks to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I will be sixty-four years of age my next birthday, hale and hearty at present." (Signed) Mrs. Julia Finnegan, 2234 Hebert St., St. Louis, Mo., Mar. 7, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley was asked the other day if he had heard anything about the recent invention which gives to new wine all the properties of old wine.

"No, I haven't," Doctor Wiley replied. Then, with a smile, he added: "But, by Jove, I attended a musical comedy performance the other night which certainly must have been treated with that invention."

WOMEN AND HEALTH.

Women are beginning to realize more fully that good health is not to be found in the use of cosmetics and face powders. The appearance of health may follow facial treatment, but health itself lies much deeper than the surface.

Most important to the health of every woman is regularity of the bowels and digestive organs. The weary eyes, bad breath, frequent headaches, pimples and general air of lassitude, is in most every case due to constipation or indigestion, or both. There are various remedies prescribed for this condition, but the easiest, most pleasant and certainly effective, is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. This simple remedy is far preferable to harsh salts and cathartics and violent purgative waters that disturb the whole system without affording more than temporary relief.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a tonic laxative, mild in its action, pleasant to the taste and positive in its effect, strengthening the muscles of stomach and bowels so that after a short time these organs regain the power to perform their natural functions without assistance.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If you have never tried it, write for a sample to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 201 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.; he will gladly send a trial bottle without any expense to you whatever.

Story of a Bible.

A case that had to do with the theft of a Bible was before the grand jury some time ago and after it had been disposed of, George W. Seibert, foreman of the jury, related a story in which a Bible figured prominently. Mr. Seibert said that his mother had given him an old-fashioned family Bible when he married. About two years after his marriage Mr. Seibert needed money, he said, and had almost decided to dispose of the Bible. When such thoughts were occupying his mind, Mr. Seibert picked up the Bible one day and began turning over the leaves of the book. He had passed over several pages when his eyes fell on two $50 bills. His mother had placed them in the Bible when she had presented the book to him. Mr. Seibert still has the Bible.—Indianapolis News.

Needn't Kiss Husband.

Supreme Court Justice Mareau in Brooklyn, dismissed the suit of Samuel Markowitz, a New York real estate broker, for the annulment of his marriage to Mildred Markowitz.

"It is absurd to frame such issues," Justice Mareau said. "Practically the plaintiff asks an annulment of his marriage to the girl because she refused to kiss him."

The young woman was eighteen years old when she married Markowitz, who, as alleged, had already had four wives, of whom two had died and two were divorced.

Why Uncle Eph. Refused Information He Felt to Be Altogether Superfluous.

When Robert H. Davis was young and loose in the feet he once wandered into a little Mississippi town. It was a bright day in the early spring and he walked down one street. By and by he came to the county jail—a two-storied affair, standing flush with the sidewalk. "There was a negro pressing his face against the barred window on the second floor," said Mr. Davis, "holding on to the bars and yawning. By and by an old negro came limping along the street toting a whitewash bucket.

"'Hello, Uncle Eph'm,' says the one in the window.

"'Howdy,' says Ephraim, limping on.

"'Wait a minute, uncle,' says this lonesome negro in the window. 'What time is it, uncle?'

"Uncle Ephraim limped right on. He hardly looked up.

"'What diffunce does it make to you, niggeh?' he asked. 'You ain't goin' nowhere.'"—New York Letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star.

HAPPY THO' MARRIED?

There are unhappy married lives, but a large percentage of these unhappy homes are due to the illness of the wife, mother or daughter. The feelings of nervousness, the befogged mind, the ill-temper, the pale and wrinkled face, hollow and circled eyes, result most often from those disorders peculiar to women. For the woman to be happy and good-looking she must naturally have good health. Dragging-down feelings, hysteria, hot-flashes or constantly returning pains and aches—are too great a drain upon a woman's vitality and strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores weak and sick women to sound health by regulating and correcting the local disorders which are generally responsible for the above distressing symptoms.

MRS. DICKOVER.

"I suffered greatly for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that life was a misery to me," writes MRS. B. F. DICKOVER, of Utica, Ohio, Route 4. "The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than ever before. At each period I suffered like one in torment. I am the mother of six children. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. R. V. Pierce, telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-Weed,' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything else or any one else."

The Medical Adviser by R. V. Pierce, M. D., Buffalo, N. Y., answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know. Sent free on receipt of 31 stamps to pay for wrapping and mailing only.

A mighty good bill is that which Congressman Steenerson has introduced in Congress, which if passed, will prevent corporations from transferring cases involving less than $10,000 from the state to the federal courts. Railroad corporations nearly always transfer damage cases and consequently cripples, widows, and orphans somehow seem to nearly always lose out. If Steenerson means business with this bill and can get it passed, it will be a great feather in his cap.—Battle Lake Review.

An Illinois paper very truly remarks that this is the regular biennial period when newspaper publishers are receiving big jobs of invitations to boom the candidacy of numerous and divers individuals who offer themselves as sacrifices on the alter of public service, the fact that there is a fat salary attached somewhere around the outskirts of the object of their seeking being carefully ignored while presenting their interesting matter for publicaaion. From pound-master to governor, down both sides and through the middle, the number of candidates who "would appreciate any publicity given my candidacy", and in whose election is the only salvation of the country, is unusually large this year of grace 1912. If the country is to be saved by the smearing of kind words in the interest of any candidate for any office anywhere, this is one newspaper at least that will insist on receiving a remuneration at so much a smear, you bet your boots. And we want the money in advance. We don't claim that our kind words or the lack of them will elect or defeat any candidate for any office, whether it be a merchant seeking profits or a candidate seeking salary.

Titanic Disaster Story

In this issue of the Plummer Pioneer you will find a complete story of the sinking of the Titanic. In order to give our readers the autsentic facts told by survivors of this great maritime disaster we rum the details received from New York on arrival of the Capathia, the vessel that brought to land the only people rescued.

Following our usual policy to always give our subscribers the authentic facts concerning news events we are pleased to be able at additional expense to give the true story of this appalling tragedy of the sea.

Typewriters are now made for use in nearly a hundred different languages, and they are sold all over the world, but there is still one great nation which, for a very simple reason, has no typewriters that write its tongue. That nation is China.

The English alphabet has twenty-six letters, the Russian thirty-six. The typewriter produced for the Russian market is the largest made, but no typewriter could be made that would begin to be big enough for the Chinese language, which has no alphabet, but is represented by sign characters, of which there are about 50,000. Of the great number of words found in the English language only a small proportion are used for the ordinary purposes of speech, and the same would be true as to the characters used in the Chinese language, but the number of Chinese characters commonly employed is still far greater than could be put on any typewriter. So this nation of 400,000,000 people has no typewriter in its own tongue.

But that doesn't mean that no typewriters are sold in China. More and more Chinese are learning other languages besides their own, and Chinese merchants and resident foreign merchants use typewriters, and they are used in legations and in consular offices and in banks and shipping offices and colleges and by missionaries, by various people. Altogether there are sold in China a good many typewriters.—Washington Post.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrins and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people, now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

Head Chief of White Earth Chippewas.

MAY-ZE-KE-GE-SHIG.

The Chippewa chief was born in 1825 in what is now Crow Wing county, Minn. He is therefore eighty-seven years old, is still in fairly good health and takes an active interest in public questions affecting his people.

The old chief is progressive in his ideas, and believes that the interests of his people will be best served by them adopting the white man's ways. He can see no future for them as old-style Indians, and has strongly advocated all progressive legislation, such as the allotment acts and the Clapp act, and also all measures for the education of the Indians.

Five million dollars of the funds of the Chippewa Indians have been expended by the Indian Bureau without any accounting to show who received it.

The Indians have been trying to secure an accounting for several years past and Congressman Steenerson has been very active in the matter.

But in spite of their efforts the Indian Bureau has so far been able to avoid an accounting of these funds.

It is the idea of the Indians that the attacks on Congressman Steenerson by Judge Burch and Congressman Graham are for the purpose of discrediting him and preventing him from forcing an accounting for the $5,000,000 of Indian money spent by the government officials.

Origin of the Steenerson Act.

Under the treaty of 1867, establishing White Earth reservation, each Indian was to have 160 acres of land whenever he had cultivated forty acres, or forty acres whenever he had cultivated twenty acres, or twenty acres whenever he had cultivated ten acres. This is what is called the cultivation clause, and only about 200 Indians ever secured their full 160 acres under this clause. The Nelson act of Jan. 14, 1889, provided for allotments of only eighty acres each, but that law was not to take effect until approved by two-thirds of the male adult Indians of each tribe or band. When the commissioners, Senator Rice, Bishop Marty and Mr. Whiting, held the council with the White Earth Indians they refused to agree to the law, under which it was proposed to cede 4,000,000 acres of land in Northern Minnesota to the government, unless they were promised the 160 acres mentioned in the treaty of 1867. They promised, and thereupon, in consideration thereof, the Indians signed the agreement, and the Nelson act went into effect. The land was ceded to the United States in trust to be disposed of; the agricultural land to homesteaders at $1.25 per acre, and the timber land to the highest bidder. When the secretary of the interior proceeded to allot the land to the Indians of this reservation under the law he issued instructions and directed that each Indian should only have eighty acres. The White Earth Indians went to Washington and made a protest, and invoked the promises made by the representatives of the government. The secretary of the interior and the commissioner of Indian affairs asked the commissioners, Senator Rice, Bishop Marty and Mr. Whiting, if they had promised 160 acres to each, and they wrote back and said that they had so promised, and referred to the printed council proceedings, and said further that they thought they had the right to so promise and waive the cultivation clause of the treaty of '67. The secretary then, in 1892, wrote a letter to the senate committee on Indian affairs requesting that a law be passed authorizing him to carry out the promises of 160 acres of land made to the Indians, and Senator Dawes of Massachusetts, then chairman of the senate committee on Indian affairs, introduced and secured the passage through the senate of a bill which is exactly the same proposition as was afterwards passed and which is now known as the "Steenerson act" of 1904. The Dawes bill failed of consideration in the house. It was again introduced in the senate in 1897, and on motion of Senator Nelson was again passed, but it again failed of consideration in the house. Later on it was three times introduced in the house in three different sessions of congress by Congressman Eddy, but failed to get consideration until Mr. Steenerson took hold of it soon after his first election. The honor of the United States was pledged to the Indians to pass the "Steenerson act," giving them the additional eighty acres. That promise was the consideration for the ratification of the Nelson act, under which more than 4,000,000 acres of land was ceded, and no one can justly criticise congress for enacting the law, but a great deal of criticism can be laid against the administration of it by the department.

Administration of Steenerson Act.

The commissioner of Indian affairs now admits that these provisions of the act were so violated that there are four or five hundred Indians entitled to additional allotments who cannot receive them because there is not enough land to go around. There was ample authority in the department to cut down the additional allotments to forty acres of agricultural land, and they could have reserved from allotments all the pine timber for the common benefit of the tribe; but they saw fit to so administer the act that the valuable timber was not only unequally disposed of, but four or five hundred Indians entitled to additional allotments were left without possibility of securing even a part of the same.

The Allotment Incident.

In recognition of Mr. Steenerson's services the Indians held a council and elected him a member of the tribe. They also decided he could have an allotment on the reservation, and the old chief wanted to give him his own allotment. Mr. Steenerson refused at the time, in the presence and within the hearing of thousands who had gathered to witness the ceremonies, but later he was visited by a delegation of Indians who explained that a refusal to accept the gift would be regarded, according to Indian usages, as an insult to the tribe, and he consented to sign an application on the condition that if anything came of it he would return the value of it to the tribe by establishing a hospital, or in some similar way. The Indian council proceedings proposing the enrollment of Mr. Steenerson were certified by the Indian agent to the secretary of the interior and he held that the White Earth band alone could not authorize the enrollment, but that it required the favorable action of all the Chippewa bands of Minnesota, and as soon as Mr. Steenerson was notified of this he requested that his application for allotment be withdrawn and nothing more was done with it. The facts in regard to this episode were extensively published in the newspapers throughout the district at the time and were referred to in Mr. Steenerson's official biography. Mr. Steenerson has been elected to congress three times since and the whole matter was forgotten by nearly everyone until now resurrected for political purposes. This is all there is to the allotment matter. The newspaper reports of the Graham investigation have sought to create a wrong impression by insinuation and inference, so that many good people got the idea that Congressman Steenerson received an allotment and sold it for $12,000, and it is proper that they should be set right on that point, for the insinuation is utterly unfounded.

Of course Mr. Steenerson's political opponents will question his sincerity in stating what he expected to do with the allotment if he got it.

That is politics.

But Mr. Steenerson has a record of thirty years of honorable dealings with the people of Northwestern Minnesota that will not be forgotten; dealings that will stand the test. Thirty years during which he has fought for the laborer, for the farmer, and the small business man, as against the more powerful railroad and other corporations; and he has fought for the rights of the Indians against the bureaucrats at Washington, who are eating up the Indians' funds, in the same way that he fought for the lumberjack and the laborer as an attorney.

QUEER TITLES.

Bestowed on His Favorites by an Emperor of Haiti.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history few are more apparently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade and the Earl of Brandy. They are or were, however, real titles bestowed by a genuine monarch on three of his favorites, and that, too, during the last century.

In 1811 a revolution occurred in Haiti, and Christophe, a negro, declared himself emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pageantry of a royal court and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character.

In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the middle ages.—Pearson's Weekly.

The dates for the Red Lake County Fair has been set for Sept. 16, 17 and 18. This is the second annual fair and preparations are already under way to make the fair a bigger success than ever. Every resident of the county should make it a point to bring one or more exhibits to the fair, and now is a good time to make preparations for it. The object of the fair is to stimulate a greater interest in agricultural pursuits and to encourage the effort to make the products of the farm the best possible, to encourage the raising of good live stock and other industrial work.

Ernidas Reindeau, living three miles east of Plummer, was in town Monday and was required to explain why he did not send his children, ten and twelve years old, to school, and was given an opportunity to show cause why he should not be arrested for violating the truency law. Mr. Reindeau offered in explanation that it was quite a distance to school and he told of sicknesses in the family. But it was not shown that there was any reason why the children should not be in school. However no arrest was made. Mr. Reindeau promised there would be no more violations of the law and since it was the first attempt to secure legal enforcement of the law, it was decided that a fine should not be imposed. However, it is expected that this incident is to serve as a warning. Others have been guilty of violations of the law and unless there is a change arrests will follow.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

This issue of the Pioneer is printed noadless patents. This we think, and we hope our readers will think, also, is great improvement over the patents used here to fore that have consisted mainly of patent medicine advertisements and other objectionable matter. The present service is free from any advertisements and are composed purely of reading matter.

Mrs. Bergeson came up from Detroit Monday night to remain a short time with her husband and to become acquainted with her new home. She returned to Detroit Tuesday evening. The Bergesons are undecided as to where they will reside and if they are unable to make arrangements for any quarters may decide to camp out this summer.

Make your rural house beautiful Lay out spacious grounds around the farm house, plant shade trees, lay gravel roads and plant flowers. Don't lay up all your net earnings for the benefit of your heirs and lawyers, but spend most of it in beautifying your home. The farmer who always shuts his eyes to the aesthetic features of his life and screws himself down to the task of making money, loses a large portion and the biggest portion too, of his existence. His home should be an attraction to himself, to his wife and above all, to his children. Unpleasant homes in too many instances drive the sons of farmers to the towns, to excitement and dissipation, and to wreck. Such sons do not generally leave pleasant and beautiful homes.

Did you ever stop to think what a great labor saver the home paper is as a means of communication with absent friends? "Write to me often," is the last command the one breaking away from home ties so often gives to those left behind. In the rush and hurry of every day very few people nowadays have time to devote to correspondence of the leisurely kind the people of other days kept up with such unvarying punctuality. And here is where the home paper saves a world of trouble. It is better than a letter, to, for it contains much that a letter would not. Items of interest are in it that the writer might not know or overlook. It is wonderful how eagerly one devors a home paper when a stranger in a stranger in a strange land. Even the people you do not know intimately while at home become of absorbing interest to you when you read that they have died or married or figured otherwise prominently in the home affairs. If there is someone of your family away from home, try sending them this paper regularly and a letter occasionally and see if they do not appreciate the favor of the paper.

GETS THE FIRST GAME

Local Ball Tossers Get Away Easily With The First Game of the Season.

The base ball season for this vicinity at least was formally opened here last Sunday when a team from south of her, composed of a fast bunch of ball tossers and old time rivals of the home team, met the latter in an argument on the local diamond. The rain of Saturday night and Sunday morning had every indication of putting a lid on the game for the day, but the reappearance of "Old Sol" towards noon dried things up enough at least to pull off the "stunt" in the afternoon. It was a gala day for the locals and the sturdy sons of the soil went down to defeat with a great big thump. Hit and run was the slogan and ten scores were piled up by the locals in the merry-go-round that followed. The visitors tallied four scores when the game came to a close.

Both teams played good ball and the game was an interesting one thruout. Frank Follwell sustained a badly damaged finger which necessited medical attendance, while catching for the local team.

For a starter the locals are showing up admirably well and with continued practice should be in a position to take on some of their old time rivals and give them a run for their money.

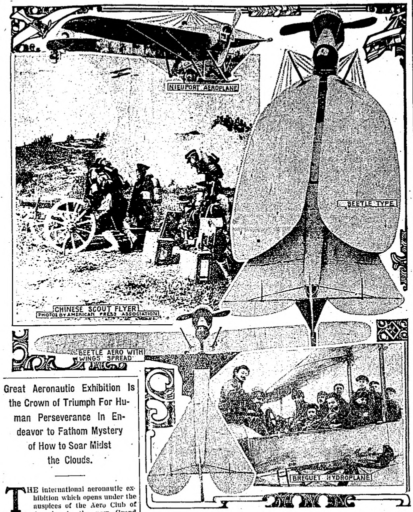
Man's Flying Dream Come True

Great Aeronautic Exhibition Is the Crown of Triumph For Human Perseverance In Endeavor to Fathom Mystery of How to Soar Midst the Clouds.



THE international aeronautic exhibition which opens under the auspices of the Aero Club of America in the new Grand Central palace, New York, May 9, continuing to May 18, again turns public attention in the direction of the subject of aviation. Of interest,, therefore, is a glance at the art of human flight, a tedious progress indeed until recent years. For centuries man had been ambitious to fly like the birds of the air, and we read that Simon the magician, at the beginning of the Christian era, was the first "aviator" to meet with mishap in attempting to fly. It is recorded of Simon that after endeavoring to bribe St. Peter to disclose the secret of the descent of the Holy Ghost he made a flying machine when, after being immortalized in verse and in bronze, he smashed himself to pieces on the Roman pavement.

Ollvier of Malmesbury, an English monk, is said to have constructed a set of leg and arm wings which cost him a broken leg in 1000 A. D. Jean Baptiste Dante also broke a leg with a pair of wings he built in the fifteenth century. In fact, broken legs were quite fashionable among early aviators. General Andre Guillaume Resnier, who wanted to affix wings to Napoleon's soldiers, got the flying mania in 1800, when he was seventy-one years old, and in sailing over a castle wall he broke a limb.

Recent Headway Is Marvelous.

Looking backward at the history of aviation the ludicrous side of the efforts to fly being in constant evidence until a comparatively late date and the tragic side still adding to its toll of human life, it seems a quick and hardly credible jump to the success of present times, when bird men circle around the tops of big cities' tallest buildings and fly over the heads of pedestrians. This, of course, is not of daily occurrence, but the spectacle is so frequent that it is no longer marked by gasps of astonishment. Great distances are covered by our day bird men (one has crossed the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific), a mile a minute has been left far behind as a speed record, and the modern flying device obeys the human will, going this way or that as the aviator may wish.

Army experts have been convinced that the aeroplane is destined to play an important part in future wars and some believe that they will effect a complete revolution of war methods. In Hamburg, Germany, the finishing touches have been put on an airship harbor, the most important structure of the kind in the world. It will be used by Count Zeppelin for making training trips to the English, Swedish, Danish and Norwegian coasts, and if Germany has another war this structure will be utilized as the base from which airships will do scouting duty for the German squadron on the North sea.

By special act of congress the foreign machines shown at the new Grand Central palace enter the United States free of duty. The purpose of the exhibition is to show what designers, builders and aviators have accomplished. Various makes of aeroplanes, motors and propellers will be tested for their efficiency and as much attention will be given the technical as the spectacular features of aviation. The show probably will become an annual institution, like the horse show.

The exhibits will include three of the latest French models, the Breguet biplane, Paulhan-Tatau torpedo and the Nieuport monoplane. A peculiarity of the Breguet is that, while it is a biplane, it is equipped with a monoplane fuselage and novel landing device. The Paulhan-Tatau monoplane has upturned wings without ailerons, the motor being in front and the propeller in the extreme rear. The 1912 Nieuport is a development of the Bleriot type and has an inclosed fuselage, which tends to reduce air resistance and allows a motor lighter than the motors usually used.

Various Experiments.

The contrast is striking between aviators' achievements up to 1903 and since that time. Between 1885 and 1889 the Lilienthals made experiments in Germany and Otto Lilienthal was killed in his first effort to use a motor with a gliding machine. In 1892 Ador, a French inventor, made an aeroplane with a steam motor which flew 500 feet. In 1894 Sir Hiram Maxim built an aeroplane the engine of which was wonderfully light for a steam motor and was the basis for the mechanism of the steam automobile. But the machine was too heavy to fly. It weighed two tons.

In 1896 Percy S. Pilcher, an English engineer, was killed in trying to use a four horsepower oil engine on his glider.

In 1898 Octave Chanute in America made the first biplane glider and was able to travel at the rate of twenty-four miles an hour on a thirty pound machine down an incline of about ten degrees. He made hundreds of such flights safely, and his work was carried on by the Wrights.

In 1899 Lawrence Hargrave, an Austrian, invented the cellular or box kite, and his invention, according to Charles C. Turner, was the foundation of the earlier models of Farman and M. Santos-Dumont.

Henson announced that he had designed a steam carriage that would travel through the air at great speed and would carry passengers. The pictures of this machine, which were common in the scientific and pictorial press of the time, have several strikingly familiar characteristics to the modern monoplane.

First Real Aeroplane Flight.

The first successful flight in an aeroplane or by a heavier than air machine was that achieved by Wilbur Wright in his biplane, the Kitty Hawk, on Dec. 17, 1903, when a flight of 852 feet was successfully achieved. Three years later M. Santos-Dumont entered his "flying machine" for the Archdeacon cup, to win which it was only necessary to rise clear of the ground for a distance of but twenty-five yards. To the astonishment of the spectators, he flew eighty yards at a height of about three feet. A month later he created a world's record by flying 230 yards. H. Farman, one year later beat this record by a flight of 311 yards at eight feet above the surface.

A full mile was not completed until January, 1908. In April of that year Delagrange remained in the air for ten minutes. But in 1911—only three years later—many sensational feats were accomplished.

On Oct. 7, 1903, after a long series of experiments, Professor S. P. Langley of the Smithsonian institution, with Charles M. Manley, his assistant, as a passenger, launched his large aerodrome, as he called it, from a houseboat on the Potomac river. The flight was brief and its failure was due to the weight of the machine—two tons—and the fallibility of the balancing tests that had been made with smaller models.

Professor Langley had put into practice an idea that had been hinted at by one William Samuel Henson in 1841, who became known throughout the United States and in England as the man who probably had solved the problem of aerial navigation. His fame was unrealized. Excepting the flights or gliding flights of Lilienthal there had been no man carrying machine that was heavier than air put to practical test until Langley's aerodrome.

On Sept. 13, 1906, Santos-Dumont made his first official flight in a "heavier than air" machine. He was in the air for twelve yards. He followed his first flight with one of 230 yards. Leon Delagrange also was an object of attention by reason of his success in leaving the ground. Henry Farman on Oct. 26, 1907, flew 820 yards in 51½ seconds, thereby capturing the record.

In 1908 the real fliers, the "heavier than air" machines, reached a point of satisfactory achievement. On July 6 of that year Farman stayed in the air twenty minutes, setting a record. Orville Wright remained in the air for an hour. But the Wright brothers' records were scoffed at in Europe until Wilbur Wright went abroad late in 1908 and began a series of flights that astonished the world. On Dec. 31, 1908, he remained in the air two hours and nineteen minutes.

Glenn H. Curtiss in the same year at Rheims, France, did some splendid flying. Farman was the first man to take to the highways with his machine. On Oct. 31, 1908, he flew from Chalons to Rheims, sixteen miles, in 20 minutes.

Dirigible Balloons.

One of the principal attractions at this month's show will be a dirigible balloon of the Parseval type, which will make scheduled trips after the show, carrying about twenty passengers each time. According to Charles C. Turner in Aerial Navigation of Today, Henry Giffard, a Frenchman, made the first successful dirigible in 1852. It was 130 feet long and could make four miles an hour with a three horsepower engine when there was no air movement.

By 1905 the air was full of dirigible balloons. Baldwin, Lebaudy, Gross, Parseval, Zeppelin and Santos-Dumont were great names. For a time being the aeroplane was discounted, and the gas bag seemed about to become the successful method of flight.

Various dirigibles Count Zeppelin had built reached what was regarded as a high state of perfection in the Deutschland, which made several trips in 1910 with as many as twenty passengers in addition to a crew of twelve. On June 28 of that year the machine, caught in a storm, was driven into a forest, where the balloon was destroyed. Fire, caused by an explosion, wrecked the Zeppelin VI, Sept. 24, 1910. This airship also had done a passenger carrying business.

A Sister's Greeting

A Pleasant Episode on Returning From a Lengthy Stay Abroad

By FRANCES KENDALL COOK

WE had had a cold, stormy passage from Southampton, but the morning we sailed up New York bay was warm and light and beautiful. I had been abroad studying and was coming home to settle down to my profession. When the steamer was docked I stood near the ship's end of the gangway waiting for a chance to get ashore. In one hand I held a suit case, in the other a bundle of strapped rugs. On the dock I noticed one of the ship's officers standing beside a young lady very prettily and tastefully dressed. He was pointing my way. I thought nothing of the incident, though I was especially struck with the appearance of the young lady. As soon as the crowd thinned I started to go ashore. At the foot of the gangplank I was astonished to feel two feminine arms thrown about my neck and a shower of kisses rained upon my face by the young lady I had noticed from above.

"Oh, Will," she said. "I'm so glad you've come! We've been watching for the steamer ever since yesterday afternoon."

"H-how—did you—recognize me?"

"One of the ship's officers pointed you out. I asked him if he would let me know when you came ashore."

"W-w-who did he say I was?"

"Why, William Brown, of course." She looked at me in semisurprise, then, drawing slightly away and scanning me critically, "Aren't you?"

"Of course I am. And you?"

"Alice Brown, your sister. Who else should I be?"

"Nobody else. How did you know I was coming?"

"By your letters. What makes you act so funny?"

"I—I haven't been well."

"You bad boy! You said nothing in your letters about having been ill. Why didn't you let me know?"

"I mean seasick."

"Oh, that's nothing!"

Meanwhile we were moving along the dock and reached a carriage before which the girl stopped.

"Put your baggage on the front seat," she said.

I stood irresolute. It was evident that the young lady had made a mistake. So far I had not been culpable, but if I continued to leave her uninformed I would deserve to be keelhauled. Besides, at the end of the drive somebody would be likely to recognize me as being the wrong William Brown. Nevertheless she was so pretty, so affectionate, so rejoiced to see me after my long absence, that I could not bear to break the spell. And when she discovered that she had been kissing a strange man it might break her heart. I got into the carriage.

It was a long enough drive up town, but it seemed very short to me. I found it difficult to keep up appearances and only succeeded in doing so by excusing myself for my lack of memory and my blunders by the great length of my absence. I discovered in the course of the conversation that I had been abroad ever since I was fourteen years old, that our mother was not living and our father had married again, we being the only children by his first marriage.

"Ah, here we are!" she said as we turned a corner. "We'll be at home in a few minutes."

I shuddered. "Alice," I said, "let us drive in Central park before going home. There is something I want to tell you."

She took fright at once. "Anything unpleasant? Have you got into any trouble?"

"No: I've had a very pleasant episode."

"Oh, Will, you're engaged! I know you are. And I was so in hope that you and I would be together."

"I am not engaged."

We were in the plaza. I called to the coachman and told him to take us for a drive in the park, and in a few moments we were bowling along over the smooth roads of this fairyland, with its wooded lawns, its terraces, its grass grown rocks, its lakes, all gleaming in the sun of a bright summer morning.

"Now, Will," said my self constituted sister eagerly, "what is it?"

I had passed numberless pitfalls in my time, but they were nothing in comparison with the present situation.

"Suppose," I said, "a young man meets a young lady who at their first meeting wins his heart by her innocence, her beauty, her gentleness, her womanly qualities."

"I knew it! You're in love!"

"Suppose that this girl mistook the man for some one she had long known—a father; no, not a father—a brother. He, charmed with her sisterly affection, having no real sister, permits her to continue in her mistake. What punishment should he receive?"

"Why didn't you tell her at once?"

"I couldn't bear to break the spell."

"Who is she?"

"You. You have made a mistake. I am Will Brown, but not your Will Brown."

* * * * * * * *

We drove to her home in silence, and on reaching it she alighted before I could arrest her and ran without a word of adieu to me into the house. She rushed into the arms of a young man, the right William Brown, and I drove away as he was smothering her with kisses.

I found a mutual friend who pleaded my cause with Alice Brown, and at last I secured permission to call upon her. Since her brother had returned with a love story similar to the one she had expected me to tell I devoted myself to consoling her for their separation. I have been consoling her ever since.

The Sunday School Lesson

SENIOR BEREAN FOR MAY 5.

Golden Text.—A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of things which he possesseth.—Luke xii, 15.

Luke vi, 20-23.—Possessors of blessedness.

Luke places before the reader two ideals of life. They are opposed to each other and appeal to two different classes of people. He leaves us to infer which is the better of the two ideals. * * * "Ye poor" must be taken literally. It refers to those who have little of this world's goods. Jesus did not mean to say that penury is a desirable thing for its own sake and that those who live in poverty are better off spiritually than those who enjoy riches. The thought he desired to emphasize was that in spite of poverty they could enjoy the kingdom of God. "Ye shall be filled." The testimony of the psalmist is worth considering: "I have been young and now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread" (xxxvii, 25). Compare also Phil. iv, 19. "Ye that weep now." The reference is to Christian mourners. The causes of their sorrow will not necessarily be removed, but grace will be given them to bear it, just as Paul received strength to endure the thorn in the flesh (II Cor. xii, 7-10). "Laugh," because comforted. "Hate you." Persecution has been one of the inevitable penalties visited upon the faithful followers of Jesus. * * * "Rejoice ye in that day." The first epistle of Peter is an exposition of the service of suffering for Christ. Compare ii, 20-26; iii, 13-18; iv, 12-19.

Luke vi, 24-26.—Heirs of misery.

These words are not a denunciation, but an annunciation. Just as the first section was an encouragement, this is a warning. The class of people here mentioned need counsel just as much as the others. "Rich" was practically synonymous with godless in the days of Jesus. They were the oppressors of the poor and were tempted to find "consolation" in their wealth (Luke xii, 19). But there were noble exceptions, like Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea. * * * "You that are full"—those who are self satisfied, who have reached a state in life beyond which they do not care to advance, who are opposed to improvement and extension, who have neither vision nor faith. "Laugh," in the spirit of the cynic, who does not understand the marvel and mystery of human life. They are shallow and superficial, selfish and blased, shortsighted and ignorant * * * "Mourn and weep" in the time of dissolution and disappointment. "Speak well of you." These words were addressed especially to the disciples, lest they should be tempted to seek popularity at the cost of principle. * * *

Luke xvi, 19-31.—Dives and Lazarus.

The purpose of this parable was not to illustrate the compensations in life, but to emphasize the necessity of taking advantage of the opportunities of life. * * * "A certain rich man." The type was common in Palestine. He enjoyed all conceivable comforts that money could obtain. "A certain beggar." This style of humanity was no less common. The distress and discomfort of his condition were pitiable to a degree In a country where no hospitals existed and where medicine was at best only an apology we can realize how dreadful must have been the afflictions of the sick. "Abraham's bosom" The figure was suggested by the custom of reclining on one's elbow and leaning on the bosom of the person to the left (John xiii, 23). From a place of obscurity and pain on earth he was translated to a position of honor and privilege at the feast of paradise. "The rich man also died." He met with the fate common to the human race, whatever the station in life. "In hell"—"hades." "Tormented in this flame." This is a strong expression for the pain and anguish that were torturing the man who had been living for himself when on earth. "Moses and the prophets." The two parts of the Hebrew Bible contained sufficient guidance for those who desired to regulate their lives aright by its teaching. If the present opportunities are not availed of there will be little use of providing greater benefits. The rich man was not a violent offender. He was selfish and indifferent and did not realize that he had responsibilities toward others. At his very door there were occasions to exhibit benevolence, but he turned away from them. When it was too late he lamented lost opportunities, but regrets were now of no avail.

RESOURCES OF THE FRENCH.

Why the Country Recovered From Its Severe Trials In the Past.

The resources of the French people have always been a surprise to the rest of the world. The country has repeatedly recovered from most exhausting wars, apparently through the very small savings accumulated by its lower classes. The peasants of France are land owners to an extent hardly equaled in any other country. The saving system known as the credit foncier, which is sanctioned and directed by the French government, is to a certain extent responsible for the thrifty spirit shown throughout France.

The plan provides that a man may borrow on his land very close to the complete value by arranging in advance the number of years that he will take to pay back the loan. His interest payments are then arranged at so much per year, the amount being greater or less, depending on how soon he intends that these payments should completely pay off his debt. If the payments are to continue for fifty years the payments are very small. If the whole mortgage is to be paid off in a shorter period the yearly payments are larger.

There is an added feature, which would not be considered possible in this country—viz., an occasional lottery drawing by which the man who draws the lucky ticket has his mortgage entirely canceled. The system provides an absolutely safe means of saving and is an encouragement to buy and pay for real estate. Against these bonds and mortgages the credit foncier issues its bonds in small amounts bearing interest at 3 per cent or less, which are sold in large quantities to investors of moderate means. We have had nothing like it in America and as a result our people have grown up to a very careless scale of expenditure.

The Peril of Overstudy.

The suicide of a promising young college student and the recent breakdown of a young girl who had come from a distance to Boston to acquire higher education are instances which serve to call attention to the peril that lies in overstudy. To be studious is admirable, but to devote one's energies to the acquiring of book knowledge with such application that the mind collapses and judgment is dethroned, is pitiful.

There is middle ground between indifference and extreme seal that every pupil should endeavor to attain.—Boston Globe.

DOCTORING IN 1687

Letting Nature Effect a Cure Was Regarded as Public Offense.

THE GERM THEORY SCOUTED.

Surgeons Were Regarded as Physicians' Inferiors, Whose Lower Station Permitted Them to Go to Law to Collect Bills.

The legal minds of the seventeenth century were of the opinion that any one engaging in the practice of medicine and yet who allowed nature to effect her own cures should get no credit for his common sense, but really ought to be ostracised from the learned profession. This was the gist of a charge to the jury given in 1687 by Sir Thomas Street, knight, justice of the common bench, which is quoted in the Medical Journal.

The case was that of a knight who refused to pay the bill of a surgeon who had cured the knight of a dangerous sword wound, on the ground that the surgeon did absolutely nothing to bring about the cure, merely keeping the wound clean and allowing nature to do its work. The surgeon sued, making the knight the defendant. In his charge the justice told the jury to find for the plaintiff if his mode of cure was acknowledged by the medical profession, and if not to find against him. The justice's opinion was that the surgeon's mode was not standard.

The charge also brought out the fact that in those days people regarded with suspicion any one who mentioned the possibility of germs causing disease. The court held the plaintiff's plea that pus had been caused by the presence of a small animal or plant in the wound was ridiculous and that any one who spoke of microscopic bugs was liable to be condemned by the holy church, as no mention of any such bugs had been made in the Bible.

A distinction which the justice drew was between so called physicians and surgeons. The latter belonged to an inferior class, and consequently it was not beneath their dignity to demand payment for services. But if the plaintiff had been a physician he could not legally sue for pay.

The justice in the course of his remarks said:

"The plaintiff saith through his witnesses that there is no influential operation of magnetical remedies, but that the consolidation of wounds is the sole and entire work of nature performed by the proper balsam of the blood flowing to the part wounded and that therefore those who employ sympathetic unguent or powder are grossly ascribing the whole arm of the energy to that unconcerned principle which indeed hath not so much as a finger in the business.

"He saith that the pus which all others admire and desire as showing that nature hath armed herself for the fight is not to be desired, but that it is itself an impurity which should be avoided. He hath even in his mind some crotchet that pus is engendered by some small animal or plant, some bug or gnat or beetle or fungus belike, though he saith openly that he cannot prove the existence of such creatures. This, however, he contendeth is because his glasses do not magnify sufficiently to enable him to see them. And he meaneth not the glasses or spectacles for weak or aged eyes, but the microscope which hath a rare and admirable faculty of making small things appear large.

"It might be well for the plaintiff to take heed lest he be condemned by holy church, for we are told in the Scriptures that God created grass and the herb and the fruit tree, the moving creature and fowl to fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven, great whales and every living thing that moveth which the waters brought forth abundantly, cattle and beast of the earth and everything that creepeth upon the earth, but nowhere are we told of such a bug or gnat or fungus as this man hath dreamed. He saith, forsooth, that the true treatment is to keep all extraneous matter away from the wound and even the air which he imagineth to be full of his bugs and gnats and beetles.

"We know that the contagion of the smallpox and plague is frequently started from one brother or sister to another at a distance of many hundred leagues by invisible emissions or pestilential atoms without all excuse of intelligence or mutual commerce by interveníent messengers, as also of fear and imagination, so immensely long is the arm of sympathy. And how carefully good housewives avoid the boiling over of their milk lest the atoms thereof subtiliated by the intense heat of fire should be attracted by the cow's udder (for the source or fountain of every effusion acteth a magnetical part and draweth to itself the subdivisions of that same effusion situate within the orb of its alliciency) and so an inflammation be caused by the opposition of the atoms of fire concomitant.

"So it is vain if not wicked of the plaintiff to deny the operation of sympathetic powder or unguent—and he is wrong in being puffed up in his own conceit and setting himself above those who are older and wiser than himself.

"Yet he sayeth that his method of cure is one which is well known in the profession, though that is denied by other surgeons. That is the question ye are to try."

The verdict was for the defendant.

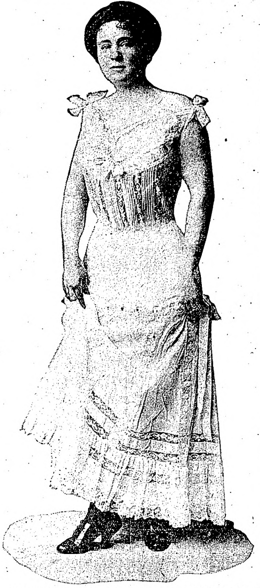
FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

New Idea In Spring Lingerie



The perfectly fitted and boned corset cover is a necessity nowadays for wear under the new spring gowns. The model seen in the cut is somewhat like a brassiere, but is even better adapted to a slight figure than the brassiere, as it gives more fullness.

When desired the corset cover may be attached to the lingerie petticoat, and in this way a slim silhouette is assured the wearer.

GIVING LEAP YEAR PARTIES.

Original Entertaining In Which the Usual Order of Things Is Reversed.

Leap year affords an opportunity for original entertainments and is a welcome arrival to the barassed hostess trying to think up something new. There are many ways in which the clever entertainer can assign the usual masculine role to the girls. For instance, one hostess showed her guests into a man's room. On the other hand, the men were given a dressing room in which there were plenty of mirrors, pins and powder.

During the evening each man was presented with a needle, thimble, darning thread and two socks to darn. All the socks were judged by women, and the man whose pair was mended best was awarded a sewing bag. The girls received masculine souvenirs.

At a leap year dance the girls called for their partners in carriages, the expense of which they paid beforehand. Each girl sent the man she was escorting a boutonniere of his favorite flowers. At the dance the girls filled out the men's cards, and they were obliged also to ask the men for their own dances and to write out their names on the cards of all partners. The cotillion leader was a girl.

There are the usual leap year dinner parties in which each man is assigned to a girl, who must put him into his chair and pay the usual assiduous attentions to his comforts that a dinner partner is supposed to give.

Gift That Will Please the Men.

Silk handkerchiefs make a useful birthday gift for men. Charming letters can be made by using very pure silk net, and it adds materially to the value of the gift if it is tastefully decorated by one of these letters.

GRANDMOTHER'S ECONOMIES.

One of These Was a Better Method of Taking Care of Her Wardrobe.

Discussions often arise over the exaggerated economies of our grandmothers. We are by no means inclined to yield the palm to them for every perfection in the arrangement of their household. The modern girl has profited by her course in domestic science. She questions the superiority of her grandmother's methods, says the Philadelphia North America.

When the question of caring for her wardrobe is considered the present day girl must concede the palm to grandmother. She had the art of keeping her clothes in good condition. She had the patience and practical common sense necessary to renovate a last year's wardrobe.

The silk gown was an absolute necessity in those days. It was made to last for years. Today the gown only lasts a season.

An infallible remedy for cleaning black silk or satin was a mixture of gin and water. A sponge was dipped in this and used to remove the shine from the silk. It was then pressed with a warm iron while damp.

To keep woolen dresses and skirts free from dust they were thoroughly beaten. A cat-o'-nine-tails was kept for this purpose. This was a short stick to which strips of leather were attached.

An old fashioned method of cleaning the first soil from white kid gloves is quite worth repeating. Pure white soap was moistened in water. After the gloves had been tightly drawn upon the hands the soap was applied. The soap must not be wet, just softened. A piece of flannel is used to rub the soiled spots clean.

THE COOKING SCHOOL.

It is said that if you are stewing a chicken that is particularly tough and you are rather uncertain about its becoming tender, if while the chicken is stewing you add a very little pinch of soda not sufficient to make it taste, this will surely make the chicken tender. If a small amount of soda is used it will give rather a good flavor than an undesirable one.

Wash one pound of mushrooms. Put three tablespoonfuls of butter in the chafing dish. When hot put in the mushrooms, add a seasoning of salt and pepper, then add one cupful of milk. Cover the chafing dish, cook slowly for a few minutes and stir twice. Moisten one heaping tablespoonful of flour with a little milk, add this to the mushrooms, stir till boiling and serve hot.

In making cookies take the whole batch of dough, form it in a long roll about an inch in diameter and cut in one inch slices with a sharp knife. Place them in the pan two inches apart, flattening each slice slightly with the hand. The heat from the baking melts the slices to the required thickness, and the cookies are absolutely round.

The Nurse's Reward During the Civil War

By PETER BURTON-NEW

A ROW of Union soldiers stood in line within the walls inclosing a prison yard. A Confederate officer approached and, standing some twenty paces from them, thus addressed them:

"Three Confederates taken in what your Yankee general over there (pointing) calls illegitimate warfare are to be shot this evening at sunset. In retaliation I am ordered to shoot three of your number. You will begin to count from right to left, and every fifth man will step four paces to the front."

A shudder passed along the line. All understood that those men who were to step to the front must die.

"Begin, you man on the right there," said the officer.

A young girl emerged from a door leading from the commandant's quarters and came toward the soldiers. She wore an apron and a cap, denoting that she was a nurse. She had made both herself, for in those days there were no uniformed nurses. Lucia Clarke was a northern girl who had gone south to find her brother, Allen Clarke, who was an invalid prisoner of war. Having gained permission to nurse him, she had devoted herself to the sick in the hospital attached to the prison, including Confederates, for in this case the blue and the gray were mingled, till she had won the admiration of all and the love of the Confederate commandant. She came forward with a quick step. She had just heard of the order and knew what was going on.

"One," "Two," "Three," "Four." No. 5 said nothing, but tottered forward.

"Six," "Seven," "Eight," "Nine." No. 10 stepped forward with as steady a tread as if ordered to meet a human enemy.

"Eleven," "Twelve," "Thirteen," "Fourteen."

While the men had been counting Lucia Clarke had glanced ahead and had seen that her brother Allen would be the fifteenth man. He was only discharged from the hospital the day before and now, infirm and with one in five chances of death before him, could scarcely stand.

"Fifteen."

A feminine voice rang out firm and clear. Lucia, who had wedged herself in between No. 14 and her brother, stepped four paces to the front. Allen, seeing what his sister had done, moved forward to contest the place with her, but, overcome by his infirmities, fell on the ground behind her. Lucia stood rigid while two Confederate attendants carried him away.

As Major Clarence Fitz-Hugh, the commandant, looked at the girl standing there in the rank of death his eye was wet with sympathy.

"Miss Clarke," he said gently, but firmly, "all must appreciate the sacrifice you would make, but it cannot be permitted."

"Then I will die with my brother if I cannot die for him."

"What can you do?"

"I will stand before him when he is shot, and the same bullet will end this fearful struggle for us both."

"Sergeant," said the officer, "march the prisoners back. Separate those who are to be shot from the rest."

"You on the dead line," said the sergeant, "right face!"

The five men and the woman turned to the right.

"Miss Clarke," said the major, "you can't go to the men's prison."

"I will," she said firmly. "I take my brother's place. Where he would go I go."

A vexed look crossed Major Fitz-Hugh's face.

"Sergeant," he said, "send Miss Clarke to my office under the care of a corporal and two men." With this he turned and went into the building. A few minutes later Lucia Clarke was escorted into his presence. He directed the men who brought her there to withdraw. Then he said to her:

"If I promise you that when your brother is led out to die you shall be notified and permitted to go out with him, will you go to your room and remain there till you are called?"

"Yes."

"Very well; you have my word."

Lucia left the office and, going to her room, threw herself on her couch and buried her face in a pillow. Gradually her sufferings gave place to a sort of stupor. How long she was there she did not know. She was roused by a knock at the door, and Major Fitz-Hugh's orderly told her to come. She started up with a moan, but gradually mustered strength to go with a firm step to the prison yard with her guide. There, standing in line, were the three men who had been drawn by lot for execution, among them her brother. She was about to spring toward him when Major Fitz-Hugh called to her to wait. Then, drawing a paper from his pocket, he began to read:

"Special Order No. ——:

"In recognition of the services of Miss Lucia Clarke in hospital and her kindness to many sick and wounded Confederates, the lives of those Union prisoners drawn for execution in retaliation are spared.

"Sergeant," added the officer, "march the prisoners back."

When the sergeant and the three men entered the prison and the door closed behind them the major turned to the girl, who stood mute beside him.

"Lucia Clarke," he said, "it was the happiest moment of my life when I secured that order from the general commanding."

"How can I show you my gratitude?" asked the girl after several unsuccessful efforts to speak.

"By permitting me reverently to love you."

The girl stood as if swayed by the wind. Then, extending her hand, she said:

"Come to me with the return of peace."

A PLACE FOR THE GIRLS AND BOYS

FACTS ABOUT THE DAISY.

It Really Is a Chrysanthemum—Pilgrims Named It.

Daisies aren't really daisies at all; they're chrysanthemums. But when the pilgrim fathers that you study about in school came over here to America they couldn't find any little pink tipped daisies like the ones they had in England. But after awhile the seeds of the big white ones came over from England mixed with grain, and they called those daisies so they wouldn't get too homesick.

The word "daisy" means "day's eye," because the little pink English daisies always close their petals when the sun goes down. An American woman found that out once when she was in England. She thought the English people didn't appreciate their little pink daisies. They rooted them all out of their lawn with big knives and said they were just weeds. So the American said she was going to wear some at dinner. They said nobody but babies wore daisies. But she picked a bunch of them and wore them. And in the middle of dinner she looked down and found they'd all gone fast asleep, says the New York Sun.

Do you know how to make daisy babies? Quite close to the yellow center cut off with a pair of scissors all the petals adjoining except two. On the center draw a face with pen and ink. The little frill of white petals is the baby's cap, and the two long ones are the strings under the chin.

Getting Plenty of Sleep.

Some children wonder why it is that they must always be sent to bed so much earlier than grown folks and many of them make all kinds of excuses to stay up a little later.

Sleep is nature's provision to enable the body and brain to rest and grow, and most of the growing is done by children while they sleep, so that if they do not go to bed early and get plenty of sleep they must lose some of their growth, both bodily and mentally.

In the old days some parents were very careless about their children's sleep, but people understand such things better now.

Master Freddy Newman, an English lad, is perhaps the youngest chauffeur in the world. In a miniature automobile built by his father he "speeds" in the vicinity of his home in London at the limit of his one and a half horsepower motor—four miles an hour. He is here seen taking a "joy" ride with his little sister.

DRUG STORE SIGNS.

Every one has noticed the beautiful colors in the large glass jars that stand in the drug store windows, but every one does not know why drug stores use that sign.

In the old days apothecaries and alchemists were the only druggists, and they made up their own nostrums, the composition of which was supposed to be a great secret. They used to leave their retorts and jars and stills and bottles in the window to impress upon the passerby the mystery and importance of their business.

The modern drug store has no use for retorts and stills, all the processes being handled by the big chemical factories, but the large jars full of bright colored liquids are still left in the window, just as they were hundreds of years ago.

BIRDS AS SHEPHERDS.

Few know of the shepherd birds of South America. They belong to the crane family and are known as yakamiks. These curious birds take care of large flocks of sheep, leading them to pasture early in the morning and caring for them all day unaided. If any stray animals approach the flock the yakamik attacks them with beak and wings. They are said to be much stronger than dogs.

Religious Work

Seventeen hundred churches are reported to have been abandoned in Illinois within the last ten years. Perhaps a thousand churches are on the inactive list in Missouri and a proportionate number in Kansas and Iowa.

These startling statistics, made in a talk by President Henry J. Waters of the Kansas State Agricultural college before the Bible institute of the Congregational church in Tokepa, have startled the church people of Kansas.

Dr. Waters declared that "doubtless many of these abandoned churches represent misdirected denominational enthusiasm and are churches that should never have been built and which from the outset were doomed to die. The facts are that the church has not held its own in the rural districts."

Dr. Waters expressed a sentiment that is taking root in scores of communities in Kansas. In the early settlement of the state every little village and town struggled to keep up two or three church organizations and maintain as many church buildings. Beginning with this year, a dozen small towns have turned to the unionization of these churches. This sentiment was cemented among the membership of all churches through union revival services, in which the local ministers and choirs joined. In every one of these towns the people are pleased with the new plan, and one preacher is ministering to all the church members who formerly separated into two or three little denominational flocks. This growing movement will see in another year 1,000 abandoned churches in Kansas.

"One educated minister to every 600 to 1,000 souls is all we can afford, and we work him to death and starve his family," Dr. Waters said. "Is it any wonder that the attendance in the theological seminaries is continually falling off in number and in quality, while in the schools of engineering and agriculture and other so called productive occupations the attendance has doubled on an average of once every ten years? And yet, who dares to say that having our young men and young women carefully instructed in the basic principles of moral uprightness, individual and social, is of less importance than is instruction in the things that will serve to keep them out of the almshouses?"

What will become of the abandoned country churches in Kansas is a question that is being discussed. Already they are mentioned as suitable for stockbarns, and farmers and stockmen are considering their purchase as soon as the struggling congregations decide to give them up. In a half dozen communities in the state such negotiations are being considered.

Church and Public Health.

"We are accustomed to estimate the state of Christianity by the number of church members and not by the figures of the bureau of vital statistics," said Robert Fulton Cutting recently in speaking of the church and public health. "Can it be that a community where the death rate is suspiciously high is at the same time one in which Christianity languishes? The afflictions of humanity, which are largely preventable, make it unnecessarily difficult for Christianity to fulfill its spiritual responsibilities to the world. Single handed, even with all its abundant resources, the church could not adequately sweep these obstacles from its path, but government, clothed with authority of the whole people, if supported by the co-operation of the church, can wrestle successfully with the problem. Thus, although Christianity has established its hospitals, its asylums, homes, dispensaries and its children visit and minister to the sick and suffering, there remains a multitude of accidents and diseases with which she is as yet little acquainted and over which she is not sufficiently exercising herself."

Mr. Cutting told of the sanitation triumph won by the government in the canal zone. He said the achievement had given us an ideal within the reach of official capacity and new hope for the health and happiness of the race.

"What philanthropy can compare with a beneficence which touches 100 per cent of the population?" he asked.

"The Christian stands by," he continued, "and watches this splendid work with sincere gratification. But it does not occur to him that what has been done in the canal zone may be done in his neighborhood in stamping out tuberculosis, in preventing the spread of typhoid fever and other infectious diseases and in saving infants' lives.

"The church must now learn to discern the missionary in the doctor, the sanitary engineer and the health official, and these in turn will learn to appreciate the spiritual function of an organization that interprets Christianity by concern for the health of its community."

An Admission and a Rebuke.

A ludicrous story is told of an Edinburgh bailie whose studies in natural history seem to have been limited. The following case came before him:

A man who kept a ferret having to go into the country, left the cage with the ferret in charge of a neighbor till he should return. The neighbor incautiously opened the cage door and the ferret escaped. The owner was very angry and brought a claim against him for damages.

The following was the decision of the learned bailie: "Nae doot," he said to the neighbor, "nae doot ye was wrang to open the cage door, but," he added, turning to the owner, "ye was wrang too. What for did ye no clip the brute's wings?"—London Tit-Bits.

AN OIL WELL FIRE

Heroic Efforts at Stopping a Disastrous Blaze.

STEAM BLOWER A FAILURE.

Thirty-two Boilers, Each Carrying 125 Pound Pressure, Eject Sudden Blast, Which Had Little Effect—Water Forced Through Tunnel Successful.

On the 11th of last May a newly shot oil well, a gusher, in the Caddo oil fields of Louisiana caught fire in some unexplained manner. The fierce blaze was consuming over 10,000 barrels a day, and could not be extinguished by any ordinary means. How the task was at last accomplished is told by R. C. Linderman in the Technical World.

By the use of teams, chains and grappling hooks as much of the twisted pipe and machinery as possible was first of all removed from the fire. While that was going on the well, burning and roaring more furiously than ever, was sending up a column of flame 100 feet high and great volumes of black smoke that could be seen for twenty-five miles.

Thirty-two boilers were next brought and placed in batteries of eight at the four points of the compass. Steam lines were run from them to points as near to the fire as it was possible for men to work. Pumps were throwing water on those who were nearest the fire. Boiling oil was everywhere about, for the well was now making more oil than could be consumed. To get everything in readiness several hundred men worked night and day.

At half past 11 on the night of May 18 everything was prepared. Word was passed, fire lines established and at the blowing of a large whistle the steam from the thirty-two boilers was turned on the flames.

The resultant roar was a thing to be long remembered. There came a whitening, a dying down of the flames, and some one cried out, "We have her!"

But the battle was by no means over. Although at the blowing of the signal whistle all the boilers were carrying 125 pounds of steam and popping off, yet after ten minutes the fire was still burning, and they were forced to give up.

It was decided that the failure resulted from having the steam lines on the ground when the valve from which the oil was issuing was several feet above it. Wooden horses were speedily constructed, to be placed under the steam lines so that the steam issuing therefrom would play directly on the valve.

It was half past 2 in the morning when all was ready again. The word was given, and the steam from the thirty-two boilers again rushed out into the blazing oil. The fire seemed only to burn more brightly.

What next? "Shoot the connections off, concentrate the flames and try the steam again." An old cannon of about a four inch bore of the type common during the civil war was hastily brought forward. Nine shots were fired. Some of them took effect on the pipe, but only made matters worse by puncturing the pipe in several places below the valve and spreading the flames.

At last the officials were forced reluctantly to alter their plans. A ditch 160 feet long, 10 feet deep and 6 feet wide was made and covered with boards and dirt. From this a tunnel seventy-five feet long, six feet from floor to roof, seven feet across the bottom and three feet across the top was constructed, with the right downward slope to strike the casing of the well about fifteen feet below the surface. It was proposed to tap the well casing and lay lines of pipe, with valves, into it, a hazardous task, as every one realized, for should any oil be spilled or gas collect in the tunnel another explosion might occur that would cost several lives. But no other plan seemed feasible.

I visited the tunnel when it was near completion. The residuum from the boiling oil on the surface was leaking in so fast that one man was kept busy carrying it out in buckets. Fresh air was continually forced into the tunnel by a rotary fan driven by electricity, and the walls were strung with electric lights.

When the pipe lines had been laid and tested two large pumps were connected to the pipe, and great quantities of water were forced into the well below the surface. This, of course, was in turn forced by the greater gas pressure out of the valve above the surface, thereby quenching the fire.

Worms That Eat Iron.

A feasible explanation of the disease which attacks old metal coins is suggested by the recent discovery of some Italian engineers of a microbe which feeds on iron. A rail was taken up and broken. It was found to be hollow, and examination showed the presence of a thin, gray, threadlike worm about a third of an inch in length. Upon its head it carried two little glands filled with a corrosive secretion, which it ejected every few minutes on to the iron. The ejection rendered the iron soft and spongy, when the worm proceeded to devour it. —Chicago Tribune.

And So Would Anybody!

"Miss Bolde," said the shy student to the fair co-ed on the other end of the sofa, "if I were to throw you a kiss, what would you say?"

"I'd say you're the laziest man I ever met."—Minnehaha.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

If every man was as big as he feels, there wouldn't be standing room in this country.

Someone has truthfully said that nothing but a mint can make money without advertising. It might be added that the mint couldn't do it if it didn't put its competitors in jail.

All sections and all classes will benefit by good roads. Few movements are as truly national, in as many ways, as the fourishing cause of highway improvment.

After having read the obituaries of the Appeal to Reason, the garde du corps of the Socialist party, and original inventor of fire and brimstone, we were somewhat amused to receive a copy of the above named sheet the other day. The Little Old Appeal is still puffing blue smoke at the good old stand and will continue to do so as long as there is a penny in sight (tainted or otherwise) and no ban on the extreme freedom of the press.

Work is a moral and physical uplifter: it is a panacea for sorrow; idleness brings moral decay and furnishes an incentive to crime. The avalanche of crime that is sweeping over our beautiful cities is largely due to the fact too many would rather steal than work. The life of duty, not the life of mere ease or mere pleasure, is the kind of life which makes the great men and women. The first prize that life offers is the chance to work at work worth doing.

The possible "white hope" that would be able to defeat the governor at the coming election and smash the machine rule to smithereens we think is no other than Sam Y. Gorden of Browns Valley. We belive that Mr. Gorden has the gomption and grit to stand by his platform in the interest of the people as a whole and combat the interests that have gained no little hold in Minnesota politicts, and have become a sort of a dictator in governmental affairs. Mr. Gorden's extreme unpoplarity with the "Big Guns" is only another indication that he is not a "machine" man and will not stand for any dictations from the bosses.

In France, where they have the best roads of any country in the world, the highways are divided into several classes, but all of them are supervised by the national government, which maintains a bureau of roads and bridges, and support a school for the education of the engineers and inspectors who are employed in the bureau. This method of building and maintaining roads in France was started by the first Napoleon, who appears to have been the earliest European statesman who clearly saw the economic advantage of proper highways, and who at the same time had the power to carry out what he wished. The effect of these good roads in France has been wonderful. They have bought all of the various parts of the country nearer together; they have made country life less lonesome, and they have reduced the cost of transportation of country produce to a minimum. France is the only country in Europe where the agricultural classes are not dissatisfied; and where they do not feel that they have a harder time than those who labor in other fields.

Civilized nations have good roads—savage and unenlightened countries do not. The highways of travel are a gauge of the progress a people have made from barbarism to civilization. How are your roads?

The price at which a farm will sell for is regulated by its nearness to market, and the quality of its neighborhood roads. To increase the selling price of your farm, work for good roads.

Good roads will benefit the farmer more than he ever dreams of.

On an average, the farm products of this country must be hauled by wagon, miles to market. There is more roof for saving in this wagon haul than in a railroad haul of one thousand miles. The railroads of the country charge only eight-tenths of a cent for hauling a ton a mile.

His Double Loss.

The dinner was over, and the last man to leave the cloakroom saw Pat, the custodian of the coats, looking very miserable.

"Well, Pat," he said, "what's the matter? Haven't they paid you very well for looking after the things?"

"Sure, sor," replied the dejected one. "It isn't that they haven't paid me, but, begorra, they've taken the quarter I put in the plate as a decoy."—Boston Post.

NOW THE IRRIGATION CLUB

Work on Reclamation Projects Held Up Until States Send Taft Delegates.

Letters received at the Taft headquarters in Washington from some of the arid land states of the Rocky Mountain region show that the use of the Federal patronage club as a means of forcing the election of Taft delegates to the Republican national convention is only one of the schemes by which the Taft managers are seeking to bring about the renomination of their candidate, regardless of the desire of the rank and file of the Republican party. These letters report a new method of applying Federal pressure. It is an astonishing method, and it evidences a desperation on the part of the Taft managers which could hardly be believed if the evidence were not so clear.

This new method has to do with the national irrigation policy. One of the greatest achievements of Theodore Roosevelt's administration was the adoption of this national irrigation policy and the creation of the reclamation service for the establishment of irrigation works in the dryland states of the west, and the opening up of the lands thus reclaimed to farm settlement. The work has been enormously successful. Thousands of substantial farmers have found homes upon land made astonishingly fertile by irrigation, which before the adoption of this policy lay idle and unproductive. Millions of acres of sagebrush have been made productive of enormous crops. The work has been of incalculable value to the nation as a whole. Now, for purely political reasons and in the effort to force the selection of delegates to the Republican national convention who will vote for the renomination of Mr. Taft, this great irrigation work has received a tremendous check. A single illustration suffices to show: In the State of Colorado there are two irrigation projects under way, one is what is known as the Grand Valley project, the other what is known as the Gunnison Tunnel project. The Grand Valley project was started by the reclamation service in 1908, when James R. Garfield, one of Colonel Roosevelt's enthusiastic supporters, was Secretary of the Interior. The contracts were approved and the work commenced. Thirty days after the inauguration of Mr. Taft and the installation of Richard A. Ballinger as Secretary of the Interior this work was stopped. Since that time, on one pretext or another, no work has been done. There has been a long hard round of investigations, by special agents and army boards, until the whole project is wound up in red tape and delay. Thousands of acres of land that might by this time have been brought under water to furnish homes for many families, and productive farms of great value to the nation's commerce, are still idle because of the inactivity of the interior department. At the same time, work on the Gunnison tunnel is at a standstill, and the reclamation of the great Umcompahgre valley is not completed. Two years ago Congress provided a special emergency fund of twenty-five million dollars ($25,000,000) in order that certain of these projects which had been started might be hurried through to completion. Of this fund one million five hundred thousand dollars ($1,500,000) was allotted to the Grand Valley project, but still the word was not given to commence work under this allotment and nothing is done. Word now comes to the Roosevelt headquarters in Washington that the reclamation service agents upon some of these suspended projects have received direct information from the department of the interior plainly stating that this and other irrigation projects are being held up until the different states affected report properly to Washington on the subject of delegates to the Republican national convention.

It is not a question with the Taft managers of the development of the arid lands of the west, it is not a question of the reclamation of thousands of acres of sagebrush and the opening up of hundreds of productive farms, it is not a question of the increase of the commerce of the country, it is only a question of driving through the selection of a few more Taft delegates to the Chicago convention.

The Roosevelt delegates, not the Taft delegates, will sit and vote in the Republican national convention in Chicago, because the Republican party will never stand for such methods. The Taft managers in New York and Indiana are pursuing a course which invites the destruction of the party.—New York Evening Mail.

During the fiscal year ended June 30 last, 599 individuals were indicted by Federal grand juries on charges of using the mails to defraud. Of 196 brought to trial 184 were convicted The chief inspector of the postoffice department, from whose report these figures are taken, intimates something like $77,000,000 was coaxed from the pockets of gullible citizens by frauds of the sort that fall within the province of the postal authorities because the swindlers make use of the mails. Our community has not been except. We do not know just how many have been duped because when one is thus swindled they are apt to keep it a secret. Were it not for the vigilance of the postoffice inspectors and their energy in running down the swindlers who use the mails in this business we dare say the takings of these sharp-witted gentry yearly would equal the annual appropriations of a billion-dollar congress. Swindles as ancient as the "Spanish prisoner" scheme and the "green goods" game—exposed times without number—still foster their victims by scores.

Ed Lanager was up to Thief River last Tuesday.

Child Burns to Death.

—O—

The six year old child of Gaspard LaJambe was burned to death last week. She was sent to throw some rubbish from the yard into a pile of burning straw, and the flames caught her dress. The mother was badly burned about the face and arms and succeeded in extinguishing the flame in the child's clothing but death mercifully ended the little one's suffering about 6:30 the same evening.

TO BE MUCH BUILDING

—O—

Many Structures Are Expected to Be Erected In Plummer This Summer.

From present indications a large amount of building will take place in this village this spring and summer, which should greatly en large the appearance of our bustling little burg. The volume of business done here at the present time in many instances demand more spacious quarters and already a number of buildings are scheduled to be built. The demands for living quarters has been intense this winter and the building of more residences will necessarily follow. It is expected that this summer will be a record breaker in the point of building.

The plans for the brick bank building has been recived by Cashier Enderle and the work will be commenced as soon as the bids for the building is let. The building will be a one story brick instead of a two story as was first decided upon. The building will be so constructed as to allow another story to be added when more room is required. The building will be fine and substantial structure and will be one that will reflect credit on our town.

Dr. H. H. Hanson is contemplating the erection of a residence on the lots just north of the Ed Johnson corner. The doctor has leased rooms in the Carlson building where he and his family will reside until the completion of his building.

E. L. Wichterman has his lumber and material on the ground for an addition to his livery barn. The work will commence in a short time

C. O. Carlson will commence the erection of residence in a short time, on the lots south of Henderson's residence.

Ed. Lanager contenplates the erection of a residence this spring. He will also put a foundation under his store and make several other improvements and additions.

Thought Dead--Returns

—O—

Ole Skavhaug, a former business man here, arrived here the first of the week to look after business interests, after an absence of some six or seven years.

After Mr. Skavhaug had been absent for some time word was recived here that he had been killed in an accident while employed on construction work on some railroad in Montana. Mr. Skavhaug's reappearance here the first of the week was somewhat of a surprise to his many friends who supposed him departed from this earth a long time ago. Mr. Skavhaug however was employed where the accident happened but the contractor for whom he was working is supposed to have reported Skavhaug as the man killed while another man was the victim. Mr. Skavhaug resides somewhere in the Rainy River country.

To Play Lambert Sunday.

The local ball team is scheduled to cross bats with the Lambert aggrigation next Sunday afternoon, the game to take place on the local diamond. The local team has a number of games on the string at present; their next one will take place next Sunday with the Brooks team at that place. The War In the Air

BY H. G. WELLS

[Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Macmillan Company.]

PROLOGUE OF THE STORY.

Germany, hating the Monroe doctrine and ambitious for world's supremacy, secretly builds a vast fleet of airships and plans to surprise the United States by means of a sudden attack. Her airship fleet consists of great dirigibles of the Von Zeppelin type and small aeroplanes called Drachenflieger.

Prince Karl Albert commands the German airships. Germany and England have both been endeavoring to buy an extraordinary flying machine invented by Alfred Butteridge, who arrives at a British seaside resort in a runaway balloon, accompanied by a lady in whom he is interested.

Bert Smallways, a motorcycle dealer in hard luck, who is in love with Miss Edna Bunthorne, and his partner, Grubb, are impersonating a pair of "desert dervishes" at the seashore. Bert catches hold of the basket of the balloon and falls into it just as Butteridge and the lady fall out.

The balloon carries Bert across the North sea. He finds drawings of Butteridge's airship in some of Butteridge's clothing and hides the plans in his chest protector. His balloon drifts over Germany's immense aeronautic park. German soldiers shoot holes in it and capture Bert. They think he is Butteridge. Soldiers carry him to the cabin of the Vaterland, flagship of the air fleet. Lieutenant Kurt guards him. The vast fleet starts across the ocean to attack New York. Graf von Winterfeld denounces Bert as an impostor, but offers him £500 for Butteridge's secret. The prince agrees to take Bert along "as ballast." An American fleet of warships is destroyed by German warships and Germany's air fleet, which reach New York and find the city unprepared. The air fleet smashes the Brooklyn bridge, the postoffice and the city hall, and the city surrenders. The people start an insurrection and attack the airships, destroying the Wetterhorn. The Germans retaliate by smashing the whole city, killing thousands. America's war aeroplanes appear and disable the Vaterland. She drifts helpless over Labrador. Prince Karl Albert learns by wireless that the whole world is at war. The Graft Zeppelin rescues him, and he finds awaiting him at Niagara Falls the Asiatic air fleet. Bert is left on Goat island and sees the Asiatics destroy the German airships and capture and burn Niagara city. Bert finds himself a prisoner on Green island. Bert meets Prince Karl, tries to repair an Asiatic aeroplane and quarrels with the prince, who tries to shoot him. They hunt each other, and Bert kills the prince with an oxygen bullet. Bert then rises from Goat island in the Asiatic aeroplane and after a perilous flight falls into trees and meets armed Americans.

The Butteridge Plans.

TWO men stood up with incredulous eyes on Bert. "Where's the flying machine?" they asked. "Outside?"

"It's back in the woods here—'bout 'arf a mile away."

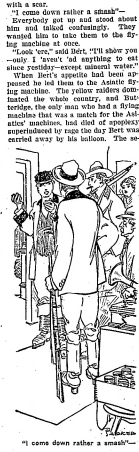
"Is it good?' said a thick lipped man with a scar.

"I come down rather a smash"—

Everybody got up and stood about him and talked confusingly. They wanted him to take them to the flying machine at once.

"Look 'ere," said Bert, "I'll show you—only I 'aven't 'ad anything to eat since yestiday—except mineral water."

When Bert's appetite had been appeased he led them to the Asiatic flying machine. The yellow raiders dominated the whole country, and Butteridge, the only man who had a flying machine that was a match for the Asiatics' machines, had died of apoplexy superinduced by rage the day Bert was carried away by his balloon. The secret of Butteridge's invention, so Bert was told, had died with him.



"I come down rather a smash"—

"Look 'ere!" Bert cried excitedly. "I say, 'old on a bit!" Then he tore open his collar and produced the plans of the Butteridge machine, which he had hidden in his chest protector.

Conducted by one of his new friends, Bert hastened to place the plans in the hands of the president of the United States, who scattered them broadcast over the United States and copies were sent to Europe and there reproduced. Every man, every town, every parish that could was exhorted to make and use them. In a little while they were being constructed not only by governments and local authorities, but by robber bands, by insurgent committees, by every type of private person. The peculiar social destructiveness of the Butteridge machine lay in its complete simplicity. It was nearly as simple as a motor bicycle. The broad outlines of the earlier stages of the war disappeared under its influence, the spacious antagonism of nations and empires and races vanished in a seething mass of detailed conflict. The world passed at a stride from a unity and simplicity broader than that of the Roman empire at its best, to as social fragmentation as complete as the robber baron period of the middle ages.

It is not within the design of this story to tell how the war in the air kept on through sheer inability of any authorities to agree and end it until every organized government in the world was as shattered and broken as a heap of china beaten with a stick.

Across this somber spectacle of disaster goes a minute and insignificant person for whom perhaps the readers of this story have now some slight solicitude. Of him there remains to be told just one single miraculous thing. Through a world darkened and lost, through a civilization in its death agony, our little cockney errant went and found his Edna. He found his Edna!

He got back across the Atlantic partly by means of an order from the president and partly through his own good luck. He contrived to get himself aboard a British brig in the timber trade that put out from Boston without cargo chiefly, it would seem, because its captain had a vague idea of "getting home" to South Shields.

The people were in a state of panic in Cardiff, and many had fled to the hills, and directly the steamer came to the harbor she was boarded and her residue of food impounded by some unauthenticated provisional committee. Bert tramped through a country disorganized by pestilence, foodless and shaken to the very base of its immemorial order. He came near death and starvation many times, and once he was drawn into scenes of violence that might have ended his career. But the Bert Smallways who tramped from Cardiff to London vaguely "going home," vaguely seeking something of his own that had no tangible form but Edna, was a very different person from the desert dervish who was swept out of England in Mr. Butteridge's balloon a year before. He was brown and lean and enduring, steady eyed and pestilence salted, and his mouth, which had once hung open, shut now like a steel trap. Across his brow ran a white scar that he had got in a fight on the brig.

In Cardiff he had felt the need of new clothes and a weapon and had, by means that would have shocked him a year ago, secured a flannel shirt, a corduroy suit and a revolver and fifty cartridges from an abandoned pawnbroker's. He also got some soap and had his first real wash for thirteen months in a stream outside the town. The vigilance bands that had at first shot plunderers very freely were now either entirely dispersed by the plague or busy between town and cemetery in a vain attempt to keep pace with it.

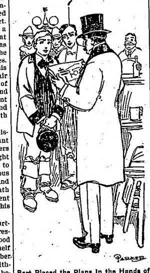
As Bert traveled from parish to parish and from district to district, avoiding as far as possible those festering centers of violence and despair, the larger towns, he found the condition of affairs varying widely. In one parish he would find the large house burned, the vicarage wrecked, evidently in violent conflict for some suspected and perhaps imaginary store of food, unburied dead everywhere and the whole mechanism of the community at a standstill. In another he would find organizing forces stoutly at work, newly painted notice boards warning off vagrants, the roads and still cultivated fields policed by armed men, the pestilence under control, even nursing going on, a store of food husbanded, the cattle and sheep well guarded and a group of two or three justices, the village doctor or a farmer dominating the whole place—a reversion, in fact, to the autonomous community of the fifteenth century. But at any time such a village would be liable to a raid of Asiatics or Africans or such like air pirates, demanding petrol and alcohol or provisions. The price of its order was an almost intolerable watchfulness and tension.

Then the approach to the confused problems of some larger center of population and the presence of a more intricate conflict would be marked by roughly smeared notices of "Quarantine" or "Strangers Shot."

Taking their risks amid these things, cyclists still kept abroad, and once or twice during Bert's long tramp powerful motorcars containing masked and goggled figures went tearing past him. There were few police in evidence, but ever and again squads of gaunt and tattered soldier cyclists would come drifting along, and such encounters became more frequent as he got out of Wales into England. Amid all this wreckage they were still campaigning.

From Gloucestershire Bert went northward to the British aeronautic park outside Birmingham in the hope that he might be taken on and given food, for there the government, or, at any rate, the war office, still existed as an energetic fact, concentrated amid collapse and social disaster upon the effort to keep the British flag still flying in the air and trying to brisk up mayor and mayor and magistrate and magistrate in a new effort of organization. They had brought together all the best of the surviving artisans from that region, they had provisioned the park for a siege, and they were urgently building a larger type of Butteridge machine. Bert could get no footing at this work. He was not sufficiently skilled.

He crossed the Thames from Eton to Windsor and made his way around the south of London to Bun Hill, and there he found his brother Tom, looking like some dark, defensive animal in the old shop, just recovering from the purple death, and Jessica upstairs delirious and, as it seemed to him, dying grimly. She raved of sending out orders to customers and scolded Tom perpetually lest he should be late with Mrs. Thompson's potatoes and Mrs. Hopkins' cauliflower, though all business had long since ceased, and Tom had developed a quite uncanny skill in the snaring of rats and sparrows and the concealment of certain stores of cereals and biscuits from plundered grocers' shops. Tom received his brother with a sort of guarded warmth.



Bert Placed the Plans In the Hands of the President.

"Lor'," he said, "it's Bert. I thought you'd be coming back some day, and I'm glad to see you. But I carn't arst you to eat anything, because I 'aven't got anything to eat. Where you been, Bert, all this time?"

Bert reassured his brother by a glimpse of a partly eaten swede and was still telling his story in fragments and parentheses when he discovered behind the counter a yellow and forgotten note addressed to himself. "What's this?" he said and found it was a year old note from Edna. "She came 'ere," said Tom, like one who recalls a trivial thing, "arstin' for you and arstin' us to take 'er in. That was after the battle and settin' Clapham Rise afire. I was for takin' 'er in, but Jessica wouldn't 'ave it, and so she borrowed 5 shillings of me quiet-like and went on. I dessay she's tole you"—

She had, Bert found. She had gone on, she said in her note, to an aunt and uncle who had a brick field near Horsham. And there at last, after another fortnight of adventurous journeying, Bert found her.

When Bert and Edna set eyes on one another they stared and laughed foolishly, so changed they were and so ragged and surprised. And then they both fell weeping.

"Oh, Bertie, boy," she cried, "you've come—you've come!" and put out her arms and staggered. "I told 'im. He said he'd kill me if I didn't marry him."

A Glance at Current Topics

TO honor and uplift motherhood and to give happiness to "the best mother who ever lived—your mother." This is the object of Mothers' day, the second Sunday in May, and observed throughout the United States and in many foreign countries. Its founder, Miss Anna Jarvis, a West Virginia woman who removed to Philadelphia, lost her mother May 9, 1905, and one year from that time Miss Jarvis observed the sad anniversary by placing flowers on her mother's grave and twining flowers about her mother's picture in the Jarvis home. It then occurred to Miss Jarvis that others might wish to honor their mother on a day set apart especially for the purpose. She wrote to editors, clergymen, men in public life and heads of fraternities about it, and her public appeal met with enthusiastic responses, resulting in the announcement to the world of a Mothers' day.

"I want Mothers' day to exist for all," said Miss Jarvis, "prince and pauper alike.' The figure of mother must stand to all for what is most worthy and true."

She urged that the form of observance be a loving remembrance of mother or her memory through some distinct act of kindness, visit or letter. The white carnation was adopted as the emblem of Mothers' day, the flower to be worn because, Miss Jarvis said, "its whiteness stands for purity, its form beauty, its fragrance love, its wide field of growth charity, its lasting qualities faithfulness—all a true mother's attributes." Besides the ways stated, Mothers' day is observed by special sermons in many churches and Sunday school talks appropriate to the occasion, as well as public school observance. The deeds of kindness which have been suggested for Mothers' day include the sending of a white carnation or other white flower to the ill, to the afflicted and to the inmates of the prisons.

Chicago Gets Maine Relic.

The pennant of the battleship Maine is to have a permanent home in Chicago.

It has been presented to the Spanish War Veterans of Chicago by George C. Mages and will be received with appropriate ceremonies on Memorial day. It will be placed among the historic relics that now adorn the walls of relic hall in the Public Library building.

Mr. Mages, who was in Key West, Fla., when news of the blowing up of the Maine was received, chartered a yacht and went immediately to Havana harbor in the hope of being of aid to the sailors. For the part he took in the affair he was presented with the pennant.

Flying Meet at Bremen.

The war department of Germany will buy two of the most successful aeroplanes to compete in the Bremen aviation contest next month, which is open to German aviators only. The prizes will total $20,000.

Public Men's Wives' Harmony Plan.

On May 20, the birthday of Dolly Madison of White House fame, the wives of the Democratic leaders in Washington will give a "harmony breakfast" at one of the hotels in the national capital. Mothers and daughters of prominent Democrats will also be present at this function as well as the wives of some presidential possibilities. It has been announced that Mrs. Clark, wife of Speaker Champ Clark; Mrs. Grover Cleveland and Mrs. William Jennings Bryan will occupy seats of honor.

New "Father of the House."

Representative John Dalzell of Pittsburgh, who upon the death of General Henry Harrison Bingham became "father of the house" at Washington, was born in New York April 19, 1845. He was admitted to the bar in 1867. He is a member of the ways and means and the rules committees, the former being the most important committee in the lower house.

A Classic Capitol For Utah.

Designs for a capitol building that will be one of the most conspicuous of its kind in the country have been adopted by the Utah capitol commission, and work will begin on the structure, to cost in the neighborhood of $3,000,000, this summer.

The most conspicuous building in Utah heretofore has been the Mormon temple, but the new capitol will overshadow it. The structure will be placed on the brow of a hill to the north of the city. A dome which will rise 246 feet and sixty-four massive columns rising three stories will be the principal outside features of the building. Of the fund appropriated for this building $750,000 comes from the inheritance tax imposed on the estate of E. H. Harriman, who centered much of his fortune in Utah.

The Baseball Mania.

Everybody's deep in the great national game once more. Fandom is as optimistic as ever regardless of past performances. Jake Daubert is one of the men that are being watched these days, for he is regarded as the best first baseman in either of the big leagues. Daubert's a left hander, and, strangely enough, he was rejected by three major league clubs before Brooklyn got him. He led his team in batting last season.

A Day of Sports.

May 18 has a sporting program of considerable interest. There will be the rowing races at Annapolis, Md., between the Naval academy and Syracuse university crews, a triangular regatta in which Princeton, Pennsylvania and Columbia universities participate and the English amateur trial races for the Olympic games. The championship cricket games on this date are of interest in the eastern section of the United States. The Nassau County (N. Y.) Kennel club holds its dog show at Belmont park on this date.

Porto Rican Progress.

Porto Rico has attained an increase of one-sixth, 17 3-10 per cent, of population in the past decade, running from 953,243 in 1899 to 1,118,012 at the present time. Most of the West Indian islands make a steady increase, decade by decade, and some of them, as the Barbardos, are among the most densely populated tracts known to man. But the gratifying fact in regard to Porto Rico is the large relative increase made in its urban population. This rose from 138,703 in 1899 to 224,620 in 1910.

The island has made a great advance in the last ten years, since the United States has offered it the benefits of a continental market, than it had made in half a century before under Spanish rule.

A Great Meeting of Grocers.

St. Louis beat out Baltimore and Indianapolis in the fight to get the annual convention of the National Wholesale Grocers' Association of the United States, held in the first mentioned city May 15, 16 and 17, preceded by several important committee meetings.

Another New Flying Machine.

Now we've got the "aero car," whose inventor is J. Emery Harriman, Jr., of Boston. The machine is equipped with a pair of runners for travel over the snow, and it can with equal facility skim over the waves as a motorboat.

The main point in which the aero car differs from the aeroplane is in the ability of the planes to adapt themselves to aerial conditions. The planes of the monoplane and biplane are rigid, but the planes of the aero car can be adjusted so as to maintain their stability, no matter from which angle the wind strikes the airship. It is the same principle by which the birds are enabled to stay in the air without movement.

World Flying Meet.

Inability of the European contestants for the Coupe Internationale d'Aviation to make the trip to America for competitions as early as Aug. 17 made it necessary to postpone the race, together with the aviation meet under the auspices of the Aero Club of Illinois. These exhibitions were to have been held in the week of Aug. 10-17 in conjunction with the water carnival. [19 B]

THE WEARING OF ARMOR.

Weight of Suit and Headpiece Justified Shakespeare's Opinion.

In an exhibition of armor a visitor is apt to be interested at first less in the art of the armorer than in the practical question of how armor could ever have been worn. It certainly was heavy. A suit weighed fifty pounds or more. Sometimes the headpiece alone, in the case of a helmet for tilting, might weigh thirty pounds. And it was evidently uncomfortable—"a rich armor worn in heat of day that scalds with safety," wrote Shakespeare, who probably knew his theme at first hand. In fact, a complete harness must have been stuffy enough on a summer's day, but we can safely say it was not as hot as one imagines, for the polished surface reflected the heat, just as a bright andiron remains cool in front of a fire. Doubtless, too, it was cold in winter, but the metal surfaces were not in contact with the wearer. Heavy buff leather padded garments stood between—these mainly, though, for the purpose of deadening the actual shock of arms.

A surprising thing is that the men who wore armor were generally not of heroic but of small size. This I think, is admitted, though not without an occasional protest. Thus Lord Dillon, curator of the Tower armories, notes that parts of the armor can be lengthened or shortened, depending upon how they are mounted, so that a suit apparently for a short man may have served for a man of average size.

In my own experience I must nevertheless conclude the average size of harnesses is small, even when their adjustability is taken into account. Of twenty odd suits I have in mind only one is large enough to have fitted a man of five feet ten who weighed 200 pounds. Especially small were the heads. There are, for example, in my collection six casques dating back from the fifteenth century. They are so little that they will hardly go over a head of average size. Their wearers must therefore have had singularly small crania, for between casque and head heavy padding was worn as a protection from shock. It is difficult to believe that these six casques are exceptions in size, and they could hardly have been prepared for children, for such juvenile pieces are excessively rare, so large a number—half a dozen—occurring only in a few national collections.—Scribner's.

GREATNESS.

The sun like jewels through the air
Flings beams in every place.
So does the mind of beauty share
Its treasures with the race.

The purpling rose in shine and shower
Yields to the winds its breath.
So is the gracious heart a flower
That spills itself to death.

Music of nature clear and whole
Sounds in the shell and wind.
So voice of the ennobled soul
Speaks soft to all mankind.

As God might from the sky descend
With robes of healing free,
So do the souls of greatness bend
Clothed with humility.

FIRST IN RACE POPULATION.

Russia Has Record of an Annual Growth of 2,732,000.

We gather from the Russian Year Book that on Jan. 1, 1910, the population of Russia amounted to 160,748,400, and, together with the Finnish provinces, the total population amounted to 163,778,800 people. In thirteen and one-half years from the autumn of 1897 to January, 1911, in spite of war, cholera and famine, the Russian population has increased by 33,199,000 souls, an annual growth of 2,732,000. In point of numbers Russia is first of all the white races, says the Westminster Gazette.

The vast population is not entirely of Russian race. The empire counts 10 per cent of Tartars, 6 per cent of Poles and a considerable number of Lithuanians, Letts, Finns and Jews. In territorial extent Russia is the largest country in the world. It is forty-four times as big as France.

Three-quarters of the population are, it is said, engaged in agriculture, 10 per cent in various industries, 4.6 per cent in private service, 3.8 per cent in trade. All other occupations do not engage more than 7.5 per cent.

Although in Russia agriculture is generally the predominating occupation, the largest proportion of people employed in this pursuit is found in central Asia, about 83 per cent. The second place is taken by Siberia, over 80 per cent, followed by the Caucasus, about 79 per cent, and Poland, with only 56.6 per cent. On the other hand, industrial pursuits, mining industries, etc., are more developed in Poland, which engage 15.4 per cent of the population employed. Then comes European Russia, about 10 per cent, the last places being taken by the Caucasus and central Asia.

BIG LAND DEALS.

United States Leads All Nations In Point of Purchases.

NAPOLEON FIRST CUSTOMER.

Shrewd Bargains Driven With Royalty. Three States Rich In Natural Resources Acquired For About 4 Cents an Acre.

Since the American colonies became an independent nation Uncle Sam has been the largest real estate dealer the world has ever produced.

Commencing with the purchase from Napoleon in 1803 of what is known as the "Louisiana purchase," a tract of 875,025 square miles, extending from the gulf of Mexico to the Canadian border and from the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean, for which $15,000,000 were paid, the United States has bought land whenever opportunity presented itself, until no European power owns a square foot of territory on this continent with the single exception of England.

Originally the English colonies were supposed to extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast, but in reality no effort was made by them or the mother country to occupy any part of the unknown country west of the Mississippi river.

By virtue of owning land on both sides of the mouth of the Mississippi, Spain claimed control of that river, thus shutting in without an outlet all the country west of the then impassable mountains.

Later Spain was forced to cede the Louisiana territory to France, but her sovereignty lasted a comparatively short time. When Napoleon had become so involved in wars that he stood alone against the whole of Europe he saw the utter impossibility of protecting his American possessions against the superior navy of England and gladly seized upon the opportunity to rid himself of something he could not hold and at the same time put $15,000,000 in gold into his coffers in Paris. President Jefferson no less gladly accepted the chance of acquiring the territory at an almost nominal cost and at the same time taking the first step toward what afterward became known as the Monroe doctrine, "America for Americans."

This territory of 875,025 square miles, almost eighteen times as large as the state of New York, contains the great gold, silver and copper mines of the Black Hills and the prairie lands, the granary of the world. For this rich country the United States paid 2 2-3 cents per acre.

Our next royal customer was Ferdinand VII. of Spain. Having squandered his ready cash in vain attempts to regain his South American possessions, he was in need of money. Ferdinand's minister of finance, having exhausted every source from which funds could be procured, suggested the sale of the Land of Flowers, Florida, as a last resort. Negotiations were entered into with the United States, which resulted in the transfer of this jewel from the Spanish crown to the starry field of the Union flag. Thus for $5,500,000, sufficient to enable Ferdinand to continue his extravagant pleasures for a brief period, Uncle Sam became the possessor of 70,107 square miles of territory, and one more European thorn was withdrawn from North America.

While the cost, 12¾ cents an acre, was considerably higher than the Louisiana purchase, it must be remembered, the St. Louis Republic points out, that in those days Florida was much more accessible than the territory west of the Mississippi.

In 1848, after the close of the war with Mexico, that country ceded to the United States 523,802 square miles of land for the sum of $13,250,000, $3,250,000 of which was to be paid to the citizens of the United States who held war claims against Mexico. This magnificent property included California, Arizona and New Mexico. The cost was a little less than 4½ cents an acre.

These purchases from France, Spain and Mexico, for which Uncle Sam paid $38,749,769, represent an area of 1,463,934 square miles.

In 1853 Uncle Sam made his second deal with Mexico, the Gadsden purchase, buying a narrow strip along the southern boundary of Arizona and New Mexico, 36,211 square miles, for $10,000,000, or 43.15 cents per acre, the top price paid for an addition to our territory. For fourteen years after the Gadsden purchase Uncle Sam retired from the real estate market. Then another royal customer presented himself.

In 1867 the czar of all the Russias, in consideration of $7,200,000, sold to the United States all of his right, title and interest in and to the 599,446 square miles of territory, more or less, known as Alaska, and covenanted to relinquish all claims to the tract of land then jointly occupied by Russia and the United States and now embraced in the states of Washington and Montana.

Having thus retired every European nation except England from the continent of North America, Uncle Sam lay on his oars until the war with Spain had been fought and won. Then he again relieved the stress of the Spanish crown by paying into its treasury 20,100,000 bright new dollars, in consideration of which the Philippine Islands were ceded to the United States.

Set Apart For the Farmer

THE USE OF LIME.

Neutralizes Acid In Soil and Makes Plant Food More Soluble.

MANY CROPS GET BENEFIT.

Clover, Alfalfa, Wheat, Oats, Etc., Helped In Growth by Application of Mineral In Some Form or Other. Garden Truck Injured by It.

As far back as I can remember—even before the civil war—farmers in my section of the country were being forced to do something to get larger returns from their farms, says a Tennessee correspondent of Farm Progress. All of them saved their manure and used it carefully. All of them sowed leguminous crops, and in time the use of lime became a very general practice, except where limestone abounded. I am sure that properly used it did greatly benefit soil and crops.

That estimate of the value of lime has never passed away. A great many of the farmers are still using lime constantly, and some even on land underlaid with limestone itself are burning the rock and applying the burnt lime. As to the quantity to apply, as a rule, it is necessary to do some experimenting to get definite information on the subject.

Freshly burnt, unslaked lime may be taken as the unit of comparison. One thousand pounds of this are the equivalent of a larger quantity of slaked lime—that is, lime that has absorbed water.

In this condition the quantity of lime having the same value as 1,000 pounds of fresh lime is not far from 1,400 pounds. But it requires a great deal more than that of ground limestone or, if the shell is to be the equivalent, say 1,700 to 1,800 pounds. Air slaked lime is practically the same as water slaked in its value as a soil improver. In comparison with hardwood ashes unleached 1,000 pounds of fresh lime are equivalent to 3,000 pounds. Knowing these general facts, one can use the different forms of lime as are convenient.

The things that seem to be more manifestly benefited by lime are most of the garden vegetables and the field crops, alfalfa, clover, blue grass, wheat, oats and timothy. It has but little effect on corn, potatoes, millet, redtop grass and carrots.

Plants that are actually injured by lime are watermelons and cantaloupes and cucumbers. Incidentally it may be remarked that lime is injurious to the growth of sheep sorrel and hence is a good thing to apply on land infested with it or that is known from any other reasons to be a sour.

In all the older settled communities, where the native rock is not limestone, if it has been in cultivation for a long time there is need of lime in the soil. I think, therefore, on many poor, rundown, old farms the better plan and less expensive to rehabilitate the soil is to use lime and sow clover to it or other leguminous crops rather than use commercial fertilizers very liberally. When a farm can once be made to grow a good crop of clover its restoration to fertility is easy.

LEARN TO FEED ANIMALS.

More skill and knowledge should be exercised in feeding animals. In these days of high land and expensive feeds animal husbandry must be placed upon scientific principles if profits are to be derived from live stock. The fact that knowledge has not been used in animal feeding is responsible for loss in keeping animals.

Every farmer, whether he keeps several different kinds of animals for profit or his work stock only, should have an elementary knowledge of animal nutrition. Especially is it important to know the elements of a feeding stuff and its chief function in nutrition.

The composition of ordinary feeds may be found in the bulletins from the state stations and in publications of the United States department of agriculture. With this information it is an easy matter to calculate a balanced ration.—Farm and Ranch.

PLOW UNDER HEAVY GROWTH.

In plowing under a heavy growth, if the furrow is neatly turned over, much of the growth is left as a layer in the bottom of the furrow, and this prevents the passage of moisture and lets the crop suffer in a dry time, but if the ground is well disked before plowing and the growth is more or less cut up and mixed with earth this partially overcomes the difficulty, says the Kansas Farmer. If plowed with a moldboard of less than ordinary "dish" the furrow is left more on its edge, and when the disk follows the organic matter is better distributed in the soil. With the use of the disk harrow it is not necessary to cover well all trash.

Ashes For the Garden.

The true worth of coal ashes does not seem to be realized even by professional gardeners. The saving of the lives of many precious plants can be effected by the placing of a few handfuls of ashes in and around their crowns. They will be saved from two possible evils by so doing, from rotting away and from being eaten by slugs. The most precious plants can have their crowns well covered, while those with delicate stems which are liable to decay can be well surrounded with the ashes.—Garden.

Lime-Sulphur Not For Roots.

Under no conditions should the roots of a living tree be dipped in a lime-sulphur solution. Severe injury to the tree is likely to follow. The tops, however, can safely be dipped if wood is well matured and conditions are such that the solution can readily dry upon the tree after the dipping operation.—Rural New Yorker.

Lesson From Livery Horses.

Livery horses are never sick unless overdriven. Why is this? The feeding methods practiced by the liveryman and the exercise the horses get are the secret. A livery horse is fed a certain amount of feed regularly, is watered regularly and curried regularly.—Kansas Industrialist.

REMARKABLE EXPERIMENTS WITH SPARROWS.

In an article in Harper's Magazine mention is made by John B. Watson of experiments with birds carried out by an American investigator, Dr. Conradi, at Clark university, where English sparrows were reared in the presence of canaries, keeping them from birth separated from their kind.

The first sparrow was captured when one day old and was reared by a canary foster mother. During the growing period this sparrow was isolated from all other sparrows and placed in a room containing about twenty canaries. The native characteristic "chirp" first developed. As time went on this was given less and less, being gradually replaced by the "peep" which is natural to the canaries. The sparrow improved in his vocal efforts by this kind of training, gaining the confidence finally to chime in when the canaries would burst into song.

A second sparrow was captured when two weeks old and was reared in a room with the canaries. The regular sparrow chirp had, of course, already developed by this time. After being with the canaries for a time he developed a song which more or less resembled that of the canaries. It was certainly something very different from the ordinary song of the sparrow.

Dr. Conradi says: "At first his voice was not beautiful. It was hoarse. It sounded somewhat like the voice of the female canaries when they try to sing. He sang on a lower scale. He often tried to reach higher notes, but did not succeed. Later he learned to trill in a soft, musical manner." In both these cases the call notes of the canaries were adopted.

These two sparrows were then taken from under the tutelage of the canaries and placed in a room where they could hear the song and call notes of adult sparrows. For the first two or three weeks the integrity of the song and call notes learned from the canaries was maintained. At the end of the sixth week, however, they had lost practically every vestige of the acquired canary song.

DON'T THROW AWAY STRAW.

Also Don't Burn It—Contains Valuable Elements For Use on Fields.

Don't throw away your straw. Don't burn it. Spread it back on the fields. It adds humus to the soil and helps to conserve moisture. One hundred pounds of humus will hold 150 pounds of water, while an equal weight of poor, thin soil will hold only forty pounds. W. M. Jardine, professor of agronomy at the Kansas Agricultural college, tells how this straw best may be put back on the land:

"Several methods for scattering straw may be used. Using the header barge in windy weather is one way. Another method is to load the straw on the barge in big loads in calm weather and unload in rows behind the barge. These rows can then be scattered some windy day. But the best way, I believe, is for several farmers to co-operate. Two or three header barges and one manure spreader are required. The spreader is kept going continually, and the barges haul the straw to it. The straw should be scattered thinly. It can be applied profitably to all kinds of land."

Wheat straw as a feed is not valueless. In many places in western Kansas farmers are offering $2 a ton and freight for good straw. This food furnishes a large amount of energy in the masticating processes, and this is of vital importance to animals during the winter. Straw should be fed with some other food that furnishes the food elements lacking in straw. Cottonseed cake and straw make a good feeding ration for cattle.

POULTRY ON THE FARM.

General Purpose Fowl Is Best, Says Federal Agriculture Department.

The United States department of agriculture in a press notice says that the general purpose breeds of poultry, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons, should be kept on the farm rather than small egg breeds or small mongrel stock. It should also be remembered that the dark plumaged varieties do not, as a rule, look as well when dressed as poultry of other colors.

Usually more interest is taken with a flock of fowls that are of the same breed and color, and it is an established fact that such a flock produces a more uniform product, which invariably secures to the owner higher prices than can be derived from the product of a mongrel flock.

As soon as the hatching season is over all male birds should be marketed, they having no influence whatever on the number of eggs laid, and eggs produced by flocks composed of females only keep much better than eggs from hens that are allowed to run with males.

As soon as the cockerels weigh three-quarters of a pound they should be penned for ten or twelve days and fed all they will eat of corn chop or a wet mash composed of two parts cornmeal, one part bran and one part low grade flour. If this mixture can be dampened with skimmilk it will add much to its fattening and bleaching qualities. Birds that are being fattened should be fed in troughs rather than in litter, as exercise at this time is not conducive to rapid gains in weight. The birds should be kept as quiet as possible.

A Gambling Passion Which Was Cured by Strategy

By JAMES BOYD CLARKE

HERBERT HATHAWAY was a very bright fellow. He was not only bright, but practical. Before he was thirty he had accumulated a snug little fortune, and since, to use a paradoxical expression, no one feels so old as a young person he concluded that his work was finished and that he would retire from business and devote himself to travel. He got no farther than Florence, Italy, when he met an American family and fell in love with one of the daughters, who was studying art. He spent a winter there winning one thing and losing another. What he won was Kate Spencer's heart; what he lost was his fortune. A part of each day he was with Kate, either in her studio or gadding. In the evenings after 11 o'clock he was always at a club, where he developed a passion for gambling. It was there that he dropped his accumulations.

One spring morning he borrowed sufficient means from his prospective father-in-law to take him back to America. This was a disappointment both to himself and to Kate, who had promised to be his wife. But Herbert was plucky and had plenty of confidence. He told Kate that three years at most would see him as well off as he had been when he reached Florence. Spurred on by love, he went to work in earnest and was lucky enough to regain all he had lost. Two years after his departure from Florence he returned there to claim his bride.

"Herbert," said Kate, "suppose your old habit of gambling should come back to you. We might have to wait two years more, and papa says that every time a man begins over again it is much harder. You might never make another fortune."

"No, thank you; no more gambling for me. Let us be married at once and go for a trip to Egypt."

"Remain in Florence just long enough to test your resolution. Then it shall be as you desire."

A few evenings later Kate proposed that she and Herbert should amuse themselves with a game of cards, without a stake, of course. Herbert rather objected at first. Cards had the same effect over him that drinking at a soda fountain might have over a drunkard. They were liable to kindle a desire for the real game. Kate urged him, however, and he consented. They had not played long before Count Gullemo Marini, a friend of the Spencers, came in and was invited to take a hand. He did so, but soon began to yawn, then proposed that they play for a small stake to make the game interesting.

In half an hour the game had grown to such proportions that Kate withdrew. As soon as she had left the table the other two not only raised the stakes, but raised the limit. Kate took a seat at another table, took up a book and began to read, now and again casting a troubled glance at her lover. At 11 o'clock the count proposed to end the game, but Herbert insisted on going on, inasmuch as he had lost nearly half of his fortune. Then the count proposed to adjourn the sitting to his club. To this Kate objected and told them either to cease play or continue where they were.

At 1 o'clock Herbert begged his fiancee to go to bed. She declined. At 2 she asked how the game stood, and Herbert told her that he had lost nearly everything he possessed. At 3 he excitedly announced that he had regained three-quarters of his losses. Then he proposed to double both stake and limit, to which the count consented. At 4 Herbert had but $1,000 in the world. Kate got up from her seat, went over to the table where the two were playing and looked at the game. Herbert, who was betting high, won $2,000 on one hand and lost $3,000 on the next. Taking out a pencil, he figured his losses and found that he had nothing left. He looked up at Kate piteously. They must wait till he had made another fortune. But it was not this that caused the greater suffering. It was that the passion for gambling had him again in its toils.

Kate put her arms about him.

"Herbert," she said, "when you proposed to be married at once and visit Egypt I did not believe the plan was advisable. It is plain that you must be at work in order to refrain from gambling, for you know that when you are busy you have no temptation to do so. If you like we will be married tomorrow, or, rather, today, and go at once to America, you to take up your business as soon as you arrive."

"Signorina," interrupted the count, "although I am a close friend of your family, it is not meet that I should be present at this interview. Permit me to settle accounts with you, and I will withdraw. As your agent I have succeeded very well. I should not boast, for, though I rarely play, I am considered the most expert player at my club. These memoranda, all signed by Mr. Hathaway, foot up $155,000, which, with the amount you gave me to risk, makes in all $155,025."

Herbert Hathaway, who had by this time taken in the situation, threw his arms about his fiancee and sobbed.

"Kate," he said, "without you I am useless to myself or any one else; with you I may always be successful."

At 10 o'clock a wedding couple, the gentleman rather sleepy looking, called at the American embassy and were married. At 1 o'clock they took a train for Calais, thence to New York.

Herebert Hathaway never touched a card again.

CHABERT, THE FIRE KING.

He Would Eat Poison and Remain In Oven Heated to 220 Degrees.

Chabert, the fire king, who was a popular favorite in London eighty years ago, claimed to be able to swallow arsenic and other poisons with impunity. Visitors to his entertainment were requested to come provided with phosphorus, prussic acid, arsenic and oxalic acid, which he proceeded to consume before their eyes, taking an antidote afterward which was supposed to neutralize their effects. Then, to show that he was as impervious to heat as to poison, he would take a raw leg of lamb into an oven heated to 220 degrees and remain inside until the joint was cooked, when it was carved and handed around to the audience. The performance concluded by Chabert rubbing a red hot shovel on his head and face and allowing any one who wished to drop molten sealing wax on his tongue and hands.—London Chronicle.

WOODLAND WALKS.

How sweet it is when Mother Fancy rocks
The wayward brain to saunter through a wood,
An old place full of many a lovely brood,
Tall trees, green arbors and ground flowers in flocks,
And wild rose tiptoe upon hawthorn stocks,
Like to a bonny lass who plays her pranks
At wakes and fairs with wandering mountebanks,
When she stands cresting the clown's head and mocks
The crowd beneath her! Verily I think
Such place to me is sometimes like a dream
Or map of the whole world. Thoughts link by link
Enter through ears and eyesight with such gleam
Of all things that at last in fear I shrink
And leap at once from the delicious stream.

GLUTTONY OF THE MONGOLS.

Some Have Been Known to Devour a Sheep In Course of Day.

The besetting sin of the Mongol is gluttony. The extent of his appetite is stupendous. The average Mongol eats ten pounds of meat a day, and some have been known to devour an average sized sheep in the course of twenty-four hours.

On a journey when provisions are economized a whole leg of mutton is the average daily ration for each man. The Mongol has a special delight in mutton. The highest praise he can bestow on anything is to say it is "as good as mutton," and even the lover can find no greater term of endearment than—something like Mr. Pickwick's "chops and tomato sauce."—London Chronicle.

Friends.

Most every day
I find my way
Made smoother,
Brighter, by a friend.
Some kindly word
My heart has stirred
And caused my
Spirits to ascend.

A handclasp here,
A smile sincere,
A kindly deed
In friendship done,
Have made me feel
That life is real,
And I have gladly
Journeyed on.

Where'er I turn
'Tis but to learn
The sweetness of
The heart of man,
For everywhere
Are friends, I swear,
Who smooth my path
Whene'er they can.

There is no day,
Howe'er so gray,
But what some friend
With cheerful voice
Is glad to share
My bit of care
And gives me
Reason to rejoice.

Flooring a Mathematician.

One day a teacher of mathematics went shopping with his wife. He tagged along listlessly from counter to counter until they came to the dress trimmings department, and there he found something in his line. Said his wife to the saleswoman:

"How wide is that gold spangled black crape?"

"Three-eighths of a yard," said the girl.

"How much is it a yard?"

"Three dollars."

"Well," said the professor's wife, "how much of the three-eighths wide material will it take to put four six inch strips around a two and three-quarter yard skirt that is seven inches narrower at the knees than it is at the bottom, and how much will it cost?"

At the first mention of those figures the professor's head began to reel, and it reeled still more when his wife and the girl got out their pencils and paper and began to do their sum. Presently his wife said:

"Here, dear; you know all about mathematics. Help us solve this problem, won't you?"

But the professor said: "Excuse me. I feel faint. I must get a little fresh air," and ignominiously fled.

His wife came home with exactly the amount of material required, and the professor took her word for it that she didn't pay a cent too much.—New York Times.

RED CLOUD'S WAR

Abandonment of Two Old Forts Recalls Relentless Chieftain.

THOUSANDS WERE KILLED.

When Government Refused to Preserve Hunting Grounds This Savage Waged a Carnage Which Overshadowed All Other Red Men's Battles.

Announcement that Forts McKenzie and Yellowstone are to be abandoned by the war department brings to mind the stirring days and incidents that necessitated their establishment. At one time there were mere forts, garrisons and military posts in Wyoming and more soldiers employed in proportion to the population than in any other state in the Union. The forts were established following the raid of Red Cloud's band of hostile Sioux in 1866. Red Cloud wrought greater damage, his followers killed more men and spread greater terror than almost any other Indian chieftain who ever contended with the armed force of the United States. He hovered about the camps of the gold hunters that cluttered the Bonanza trail, raided their trains, killed the men and carried the women and children off into captivity. His was one of the most relentless wars ever waged by the red men against the white race, says the New York Press.

When it was decided to change the route of the Union Pacific railroad from Colorado to Wyoming the announcement caused the profoundest agitation among the Brule and Ogallala Sioux. The country through which it was proposed to run the railway line was considered to be the finest hunting ground in the world.

Red Cloud, who was a subchief of the Brule branch of the Sioux tribe, resented the appearance of the government surveyors, and in 1866 he deposed Big Ribs, chief of the Ogallalas. This placed him in virtual control of all that country from the Black Hills and what is now Cheyenne, Wyo., to the Yellowstone river.

The route it was proposed to carry the railroad over was that path known as the overland trail which led over plains and mountains from Omaha to the gold fields of California. With the discovery of the immense placer deposits of gold in Alder gulch, Montana, richer than had ever been known before, and the flaring into public notice of Last Chance gulch, over which the capital of Montana is now located, the tide was turned from California to the northwest. The fame of Alder gulch grew day by day. Men literally fought their way over the Bonanza trail, as it was called, for the possession of animals and stocks of food. Prices were high; there was no government except that which was instituted by each travelling band. These men in crossing Wyoming from Fort Laramie to Bozeman, Mont., slaughtered game and fought the Indians in their rush to the rich "diggings." Three hundred and seventy-five millions of dollars in gold were washed out of the sands of Alder gulch, and one hundred and forty millions more were taken from the gravel of Last Chance, with more millions in the tributary creeks above and below these Eldorados.

Red Cloud was shrewd enough to know if the railroad built through the South pass it would dump thousands on to the trail at Laramie, and he sought to discourage this. At the head of 5,000 braves he marched to Fort Laramie to go into a conference with government officials and to enter a protest.

The scene at Laramie with 5,000 red blanketed Indians sitting in convention to discuss a treaty, with Red Cloud as the central figure, is described as one of the most remarkable in all of the stirring incidents of the west. While the conference was in progress and in defiance of Red Cloud's remonstrance two regiments of the United States cavalry marched into the country and took possession of the trail. When Red Cloud heard that he arose in the meeting and in a burst of eloquence seldom equaled declared:

"You may take my country, white men, but I will mark every mile of your road along the Bonanza trail from the North Platte to the Yellowstone river with the dead bodies of your soldiers." That he kept his word the settlers of that portion of the country who escaped his wrath have reason to know, for he started a war which for three years exceeded in ferocity that of any Indian campaign in which the military of the United States has engaged.

Red Cloud was then forty-three years old. He began making trouble at once, running off the stock at the fort and assailing the wagon trains. He raided northward and in numberless forays harassed the two regiments of cavalry and necessitated the establishment of new forts and the increase in the military force of that section. New bodies of emigrants were arriving at Fort Laramie daily, and notwithstanding the stories of the cruelties and atrocities committed by Red Cloud and his hostiles they proceeded northward heavily armed. The Indians assailed them from all sides, rushing out of the Seminole mountains, the Green range, the Owl Creek hills, the Big Horn mountains, the Bear Tooth range and the Yellowstone National park.

As there were as many as twenty or thirty different emigrant parties on the trail at one time and at different places, it was necessary for the military to be divided, with the result that it became easy to attack and harass the trains.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

We are in receipt of the official call for the Prohibition State Convention to be held in the Twin Cities, July 4th and 5th. As it is too lengthy we have not the room to print the call in full, altho the manuscript contains some valuable and truthful information about how things are run at the present time in Minnesota politics.

Now is the time when the country newspaper men are receiving letters from men they do not know, and possibly never heard of, stating the writer is a canditate for some state office and any aid the editor can bestow will be greatly appreciated. Yes, no doubt it would. On the other hand any aid these politicans can bestow the editor to recompense him for space used in his paper would be appreciated. If politicans want to advertise their business why in the dickens don't they include a check as evidence of good faith, for the amount of advertising they desire and send along copy properly signed for advertising? Talk about business. If there is any business in a newspaper man giving away his space any more than a merchant giving away his goods we are unable to see where it comes in.

The North Star state produced more butter in 1909 than all the New England states together according to compilation of figures just issued by the department of commerce and labor at Washington. The amount made was 125,180,000 pounds valued at $33,610,000. In spite of the fact that Iowa and Wisconsin each is credited with produced more butter, the amount recived was largest for Minnesota showing the high quality of the product of this state.

Chris. Christenson, a brakeman on the Soo Line and a member of the Thief River ball team, had one of his fingers smashed in a coupling while switching in the local yard Monday morning. The tip of his finger was completely taken off, and he may be unable to do any work for a couple of weeks. Mr. Christenson has been exceptionally unfortunate this winter as he had just recovered from an attack of typhoid fever and was making his first trip when the latter accident befell him. He had the wound treated by Dr. Hanson.

The old saying is that an "idle brain is the devil's work shop and idle hands his tools." Oh how true this saying is. It is to this shop that the tattler goes for material wherewith to blight some happy home or attempt to ruin the character and reputation of their fellowmen, by falsifying his good name, and forever destroying his bright prospects for the future. You cannot realize how low down and contemptible a village tattler is, until you have seen some of the results of their tattlers tales.

Miss Martha Tanem left Monday evening for her home at Thief River after having completed a successful term of school north of town. A pleasant surprise party was given for Miss Tanem at the Steen home, Sunday afternoon, and a very large crowd is reported as having been in attendance. Members of the school district gathered at the home in the forenoon and numbering about forty guests sat down to a sumptious dinner. A large gathering of young people, and intimate friends of Miss Tanem gathered in the afternoon and amusements of various kinds were indulged in to a late hour, that evening. Excelsior, the grade Percheron stallion, belonging to L. J. Ellingson, will stand during the season as follows: Fridays and Saturdays at Wichterman's barn and remaining time at the owner's farm in town of Garnes.

Dairymen are cooperating with farmers in all parts of the state to maintain the high standard which this state has set for butter making. Farmers are keeping their cream at a uniform temperature from the time it is milked until delivery at the creamery and are protecting it against dirt. Every pure breed herd in the state is free from tuberculosis and the state authorities are lending every effort to keep the stock clean.

The past two weeks or so has been ideal weather for the crops. The seeding of almost all the grain excepting the flax is finished in this vicinity and the grain is coming up in fine shape. The rains which has fallen at night for some time followed by the bright sunshine in the day is the most ideal growing weather that could be wished. Old residents in this section claim the outlook this year is better than any year they have known.

Roy Morgan owner of the Lyceum Theatre on Tuesday obtained permission from the city council to build a modern fire proof theatre on LaBree avenue between Effinger's pool room and Roland's store. The building is to be of brick, 25x140, 24ft high in front and 36 feet in the rear, and equipped with all modern appliances. The present Lyceum has been found too small to accomodate the crowds that come daily to see the shows, hence Mr. Morgan's decision to build a new play house. The building will be commenced at once and finished as soon as possible.—Thief River News.

The sixteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Souborin of Terrbonne was seriously injured Sunday, having been wounded by the accidental discharge of a 22 calibre rifle in the hands of his younger brother.

The boys were hunting when the accident occured. The bullet entered the front of the boy's left thigh just below the hip joint. The bullet passed nearly through the leg. Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, who was summoned, removed the bullet from the opposite side of the leg from which it entered. Since the wound has been dressed the patient has been getting along nicely and it is belived that there will be no serious consequences. The wound came near being a serious one. The bullet passed within half an inch of the large artery.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

LOST A GOOD GAME

Plummer Base Ball Team Dropped Sunday's Game By Close Margin of Four to Five.

TERREBONNE SCORE 3 IN FIRST

Brink, on the Firing Line For the Locals, Held Visitors Down To Few Hits After First Inning.

The Terrebonne base ball aggrigation who has the reputation this year of being the fastest team in the county, snatched Sunday's game from the locals by the stingy margin of 4 to 5. The game was probably the best ever pulled off on the local diamond. In spite of the fact that the visitors carried off the game, the local team desirves a large amount of credit for the good showing they made against the fast team Terrebonne boasts of this year. The team has been strengthened this year by a few semi-professional players and according to the managers expect to "clean up" everything in Red Lake county this summer.

In their first inning at bat the Terrebonneites started a little rally and from a few well placed hits managed to make three runs. After this inning Brink put on the lid and held the visitors down to comparatively few hits and showed a very good form for this early stage of the season.

Conners, the husky twirler for the visitors, was hit with remarkable regularity and his high in-drops was thrown to the breezes, and it did not take the locals an age to get onto the crook. He had good support, however, or more scores would undoubtedly have been made on "our side." There were six shut-outs on each side.

As no record of names of the Terrebonne players was kept here we are only able to give the line-up of the local team, which follows:

Brink, p.
Kruger, 1b.
Gilbertson, s.
Frolland, lf.
Pahlen, rf.
Fulwalter, c.
O. Rice, 2b.
Enderle, 3b.
Lemieux, cf.
Anderson, sub.

The batteries were:
Terrebonne: Conners, p; Hartly, c.
Plummer: Brink, p; Fulwalter, c.

The Plummer team will go to Brooks next Sunday to play a game with the team of that place.

MANY ATTENDED DANCE

Dance Given By The Plummer Brass Band Saturday Night Was a Big Success.

The dance given by the members of the Plummer Brass Band at the city hall Saturday night was a success from a financial as well as a social standpoint. Just a large enough crowd was present to make it an extremely pleasent affair.

A neat sum of money was netted above the expenses of securing the hall and orchestra, etc., which will be invested in new music and few other articles necessary to complete the equipment of the band.

Two good men wanted at once to clear and grub brush on land adjoining Plummer. Will give work for the next 30 or 40 days at $2 per day and furnish your own tools. Julius Pleth, Plummer.

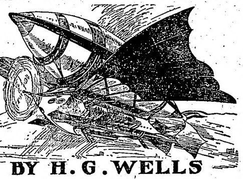
INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

The War In the Air



BY H. G. WELLS

[Copyright, 1907, 1908, by the Macmillan Company.]

PROLOGUE OF THE STORY.

Germany, hating the Monroe doctrine and ambitious for world's supremacy, secretly builds a vast fleet of airships and plans to surprise the United States by means of a sudden attack. Her airship fleet consists of great dirigibles of the Von Zeppelin type and small aeroplanes called Drachenflieger.

Prince Karl Albert commands the German airships. Germany and England have both been endeavoring to buy an extraordinary flying machine invented by Alfred Butteridge, who arrives at a British seaside resort in a runaway balloon, accompanied by a lady in whom he is interested.

Bert Smallways, a motorcycle dealer in hard luck, who is in love with Miss Edna Bunthorne, and his partner, Grubb, are impersonating a pair of "desert dervishes" at the seashore. Bert catches hold of the basket of the balloon and falls into it just as Butteridge and the lady fall out.

The balloon carries Bert across the North sea. He finds drawings of Butteridge's airship in some of Butteridge's clothing and hides the plans in his chest protector. His balloon drifts over Germany's immense aeronautic park. German soldiers shoot holes in it and capture Bert. They think he is Butteridge. Soldiers carry him to the cabin of the Vaterland, flagship of the air fleet. Lieutenant Kurt guards him. The vast fleet starts across the ocean to attack New York. It smashes the Brooklyn bridge, the postoffice and the city hall, and the city surrenders. The people start an insurrection and attack the airships, destroying the Wetterhorn. The Germans retaliate by smashing the whole city, killing thousands. America's war aeroplanes appear and disable the Vaterland. She drifts helpless over Labrador. Prince Karl Albert learns by wireless that the whole world is at war. The Graft Zeppelin rescues him, and he finds awaiting him at Niagara Falls the Asiatic air fleet. Bert is left on Goat island and sees the Asiatics destroy the German airships and capture and burn Niagara city. Bert finds himself a prisoner on Green island. Bert meets Prince Karl, tries to repair an Asiatic aeroplane and quarrels with the prince, who tries to shoot him. They hunt each other, and Bert kills the prince with an oxygen bullet. Bert then rises from Goat island in the Asiatic aeroplane and after a perilous flight falls into trees and meets armed Americans. He gives the Butteridge plans to the president of the United States, then rejoins his Edna in England. A bully insists upon marrying her.

Bert and the Bully.

BUT Edna was not married, and when presently Bert could get talk from her she explained the task before him. That patch of lonely country had fallen under the power of a band of bullies, led by a chief called Bill Gore, who had begun life as a butcher boy and developed into a prizefighter and a professional "sport." He saw Edna tending her pigs and had at once fallen a-wooing with great urgency among the troughs of slush. Edna had made a gallant resistance, but he was still vigorously about and extraordinarily impatient. He might, she said, come at any time, and she looked Bert in the eyes. They were back already in the barbaric stage when a man must fight for his love.

And here one deplores the conflicts of truth with the chivalrous tradition. One would like to tell of Bert sallying forth to challenge his rival, of a ring formed and a spirited encounter and Bert by some miracle of pluck and love and good fortune winning. But indeed nothing of the sort occurred. Instead he reloaded his revolver very carefully and then sat in the best room of the cottage thinking.

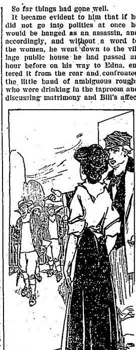
Then suddenly Edna's aunt, with a thrill in her voice, announced the appearance of that individual. He was coming with two others of his gang through the garden gate. Bert got up, put the woman aside and looked out. They presented remarkable figures. They wore a sort of uniform of red golfing jackets and white sweaters, football singlet and stockings and boots, and each had let his fancy play about his headdress. Bill had a woman's hat full of cock's feathers, and all had wild, slouching cowboy brims.

Bert sighed and stood up, deeply thoughtful, and Edna watched him, marveling. The women stood quite still. He left the window and went out into the passage rather slowly and with the careworn expression of a man who gives his mind to a complex and uncertain business. "Edna!" he called, and when she came he opened the front door.

He asked very simply and pointing to the foremost of the three, "That 'im—sure?" and, being told that it was, shot his rival instantly and very accurately through the chest. He then shot Bill's best man much less tidily in the head and then shot at and winged the third man as he fled. The third gentleman yelped and continued running with a comical end-on twist.

Then Bert stood still meditating, with the pistol in his hand, and quite regardless of the women behind him. So far things had gone well.

It became evident to him that if he did not go into politics at once he would be hanged as an assassin, and accordingly, and without a word to the women, he went down to the village public house he had passed an hour before on his way to Edna, entered it from the rear and confronted the little band of ambiguous roughs who were drinking in the taproom and discussing matrimony and Bill's affection in a facetious but envious manner with a casually held but carefully reloaded revolver and an invitation to join what he called, I regret to say, a "vigilance committee," under his direction. "It's wanted about 'ere, and some of us are gettin' it up." He presented himself as one having friends outside, though, indeed, he had no friends at all in the world but Edna and her aunt and two female cousins.



"That 'im—sure?"

"Bill's dead," said Bert. "I jest shot 'im. We don't need reckon with 'im. 'E's shot, and a red 'aired chap with a squint, 'e's shot. We've settled up all that. There ain't going to be no more Bill ever. 'E'd got wrong ideas about marriage and things. It's 'is sort of chap we're after."

That carried the meeting.

Bill was perfunctorily buried, and Bert's vigilance committee (for so it continued to be called) reigned in his stead.

That is the end of this story so far as Bert Smallways is concerned. We leave him with his Edna to become squatters among the clay and oak thickets of the Weald, far away from the stream of events. From that time forth life became a succession of peasant encounters, an affair of pigs and hens and small needs and little economies and children, until Clapham and Bun Hill and all the life of the scientific age became to Bert no more than the fading memory of a dream. He never knew how the war in the air went on nor whether it still went on. There were rumors of airships, going and coming and of happenings Londonward. Once or twice their shadows fell on him as he worked, but whence they came or whither they went he could not tell. Even his desire to tell died out for want of food. At times came robbers and thieves; at times came diseases among the beasts and shortness of food; once the country was worried by a pack of boarhounds he helped to kill. He went through many inconsecutive, irrelevant adventures. He survived them all.

Accident and death came near them both ever and again and passed them by, and they loved and suffered and were happy, and she bore him many children—eleven children—one after the other, of whom only four succumbed to the necessary hardships of their simple life. They lived and did well as well was understood in those days. They went the way of all flesh year by year.

THE EPILOGUE.

It happened that one bright summer's morning exactly thirty years after the launching of the first German air fleet an old man took a small boy to look for a missing hen through the ruins of Bun Hill and out toward the splintered pinnacles of the Crystal palace. He was Tom Smallways, who formerly kept the little greengrocer's shop under the straddle of the monorail viaduct in High street of Bun Hill. But now there were no greengrocer's shops, and Tom was living in one of the derelict villas hard by that unoccupied building site that had been and was still the scene of his daily horticulture.

"So you've really got to Bun Hill at last, Teddy," said old Tom, beginning to talk and slackening his pace so soon as they were out of range of old Jessica. "You're the last of Bert's boys for me to see. The traveler people brought you along all right, eh?"

"They was all right," said Teddy. "And on the way near Leatherhead we saw a man riding on a bicycle."

"My word!" said Tom. "There ain't many of those about nowadays. I remember a time, Teddy, when there was bicycles no end, before the war in the air and the famine and the purple death.

"Well, this 'ere purple death—it jes' wiped people out, Teddy. You couldn't bury 'em. And it took the dogs and cats, too, and the rats and 'orses. At last every 'ouse and garden was full of dead bodies. London way you couldn't go for the smell of them, and we 'ad to move out of the 'igh street into that villa we got. And all the water run short that way. The drains and underground tunnels took it. Gor knows where the purple death come from; some say one thing and some another. Some said it come from eatin' rats and some from eatin' nothin'. Some say the Asiatics brought it from some 'igh place, Tibet, I think, where it never did nobody much 'arm. All I know is it come after the famine. And the famine come after the penic, and the penic come after the war."

"But why did they start the war?" asked Teddy.

"They couldn't stop theirselves. 'Aving them airships made 'em."

"And 'ow did the war end?"

"Lord knows if it's ended, boy," said old Tom. "Lord knows if it's ended. There's been travelers through 'ere—there was a chap only two summers ago—say it's goin' on still. They say there's bands of people up north who keep on with it and people in Germany and China and 'Merica and places."

"It ought to 'ave ended," said the little boy.

"It didn't ought to 'ave begun," said old Tom. "But people was proud. People was la-dy-da-ish and uppish and proud. Too much meat and drink they 'ad. Give in—not them! And after a bit nobody arst 'em to give in. You can say what you like, it didn't ought ever to 'ave begun."

He said it simply—somebody somewhere ought to have stopped something, but who or how or why was all beyond his ken.

A Glance at Current Topics

TO investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life and investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, physical degeneracy, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents and diseases of children, employment and legislation affecting children in the several states and territories—these are the objects of the federal children's bureau, an idea which has been adopted in the United States after five years of systematic effort on the part of its sponsors, the national child labor committee.

In 1911 the bill passed the senate, but it died in the house. This year the effort to have it introduced early enough to avoid repetition of that fate succeeded. The bill came to a vote in the senate and passed by 54 to 20 on the last day of January. It went through the house of representatives early last month.

Milwaukee's Socialists.

The change in the government of Milwaukee, Wis., is of more than local interest. On April 9 last Dr. G. A. Bading stepped into office as mayor, succeeding Emil Seidel, Socialist. A combination of Democrats, Republicans and good government voters elected Dr. Bading, and they made the issue one of "Americanism or socialism?" The fusion ticket won by about 12,000 majority. Eighty thousand votes were cast, while the total municipal vote in the campaign in which the Seidel forces triumphed was 60,000. As mayor Seidel had a big majority representing his party in the city council.

Seidel has predicted that the Socialists will "come back" next fall in Milwaukee and that they'll be stronger than ever.

Bottled Light and Heat.

Bottled light and heat for use everywhere, in any climate, at a minimum cost is now possible through a discovery of a method of liquefying natural gas by Dr. Walker A. Snelling, a United States government chemist. The discovery paves the way for the commercial use of millions of cubic feet of natural gas which goes to waste in the petroleum fields of the country.

Dr. Snelling liquefied several hundred feet of the gas, stored it in a thick glass bottle and lighted his office in Pittsburgh with it for several months.

Another Big Battleship.

With the launching of the battleship Texas at Newport News May 19 the United States gets a valuable addition to its navy. The navy department received many petitions from Texas women protesting against the use of wine in connection with the launching ceremonies. Miss Clara Lyon, daughter of Cecil Lyon, Republican national committeeman from Texas, was selected as sponsor.

Dedicating a Poet's Cabin.

Included in the program for the formal dedication of the Joaquin Miller cabin in Rock Creek park, Washington, May 19 is its transfer to the District of Columbia commissioners. The president of the United States, speaker of the house of congress and western senators and representatives were invited to pay honor to the "poet of the Sierras."

Fifth of Peanut Crop Lost.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson says that the peanut crop is threatened. Caterpillars, explained the "father of the cabinet" at Washington, are doing $8,000,000 a year damage to a $15,000,000 peanut yield. The blight is killing the chestnuts, black walnuts are almost extinct, hickory nuts are growing scarcer, and now comes the Indian meal moth, intent on eating up the peanuts before they reach the market.

The secretary recommended steam heating the peanuts in the warehouses to kill the caterpillars.

Honest Advertising.

Sermons by advertising men in sixteen pulpits of Dallas, Tex., is part of the program for their convention in that city May 19-27, with "the truthfulness, the soundness and the morality of honest advertising" as the keynotes. George W. Coleman, president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, says: "We have started the movement to eliminate the faker and elevate the profession by believable and dependable advertising. There is a tremendous asset for us in this movement. We have seen the frauds ourselves, and, without outside pressure being forced upon us, we have set about correcting them. With advertising placed on a scientific basis the day is certainly coming when a man can invest his money in a given amount of advertising with the assurance that he will get back his capital and even a dividend, the same as he can in real estate and other securities."

English Cricketers Anxious.

The English cricket world is on the tiptoe of expectation as to the worth of the Australian eleven which is to take part in the triangular tests this summer. The Australians are all around players, averaging under thirty years of age, all new to international fame. Eight members of the team are first class bowlers and at least ten especially strong at bat.

Governor Marshall's One Hope.

With a number of delegates pledged to him Governor Marshall of Indiana is waiting for something to drop.

"I'm not chasing the nomination," he said. "Indiana Democrats say they want me, and I believe they mean it, but I have no headquarters, no campaign managers and no campaign money."

"How can you get the nomination, then?" he was asked.

"The only chance I have would be through a deadlock in the convention with attention turning to Indiana," was his answer.

Old Frigate For Panama Fair.

The Panama-Pacific exposition officers have received advices from the navy department that the old frigate Independence will be sent to San Francisco and anchored off Harbor View during the exposition in 1915 instead of being sold for junk, as was originally intended. The Independence was built in 1814 and is now at the Mare Island (Cal.) navy yard.

Half a Century Ago.

On May 15, 1862, General B. F. Butler issued the famous order No. 28 to the women of New Orleans, which read, "Hereafter when any female shall by mere gesture or movement insult or show contempt for any officers or soldiers of the United States she shall be regarded and held liable to be treated as a woman of the town plying her vocation."

On May 16, 1862, Isaac Newton was appointed by President Lincoln first commissioner of agriculture under a new law establishing that bureau. Slaves living in the free District of Columbia were returned to bondage to masters outside under the fugitive slave law.

On May 20, 1862, a treaty between the United States and Great Britain for the suppression of the slave trade was ratified in London. President Lincoln signed the homestead act.

Protects Ships From Fog Perils.

According to Guglielmo Marconi, the day of terror on account of fogs at sea is about over. He has announced that within a very short time a new type of wireless equipment which he has invented will safeguard vessels thus imperiled. He calls his device a wireless compass and declares it has been tested and found to be a complete success.

Mexico's Soldier of Fortune.

Francisco I. Madero, Jr., who on Nov. 6 last took the oath of office as president of Mexico after having been hunted a year before by former President Diaz's soldiers as chief of the insurgents, has had a picturesque career. The man who was placed at the head of the republic's political affairs, amid scenes of the wildest excitement, is really not of the aggressive type generally attributed to any kind of insurgent. Rather is he a man of gentle manner, and, while courageous, he is cautious. He is an ingratiating speaker and a fluent writer. The immense wealth of the Madero family has given him additional prestige. In politics the United States is his model. He is only thirty-nine years of age.

THE ROTHSCHILD FAMILY.

Numerous Descendents of the Original Founder, Baron Gustave.

What chiefly struck one at the funeral of the late Baron Gustave de Rothschild was the great multiplicity of relatives descended from his father, the first Baron James, the shrewdest and most funnily humorous member of the Paris branch of the Rothschilds, that he founded, says London Truth.

Among these descendants were a son, grandsons and great and great-great-grandsons — Rothschilds, Lamberts, Leonios, Ephrussis, Sterns, Sassoons, Bubbays. They represented not only the principle of blood relationship, but the finance of Paris, Brussels, Genoa, Milan, Odessa, Bombay and Calcutta. Among the numerous multimillionaires descended from the first Baron James there was one who devoted himself to medical science, dramatic literature and the collecting of autographs of great writers—Baron Henri, only son of the second Baron James.

Temperamental Husbands.

William Dean Howells was talking at a tea in New York about the artistic temperament.

"But the artistic temperament," he said, "has, with all its defects, a wayward charm.

"A famous novelist and his wife were lunching one day. The lady upset a glass of wine, and as the red fluid ran toward him over the white cloth the novelist drew hastily back and cried:

"'How like you!'

"But five minutes later he upset a glass of wine himself.

"'How unlike me!' he then cried."

CAUSE OF NERVES

Expert Opinion on Form of Exhaustion Widely Prevalent.

NERVOUS MEN RULE WORLD.

Importance of Controlling Mainsprings of the Body—Professional Comparison Between Intensely Emotional People and "Lymphatic Vegetables."

It has been asserted by G. M. Beard in "American Nervousness" that in no other country is nervous exhaustion so common as in the United States; that in no other country are there so many varieties and so many symptoms of nervous debility.

Nervous men rule the world. They are the salt of the earth, says Dr. Alfred T. Schofield. "The leading men in every profession are drawn from their ranks. They are men with brains that thrill, that feel, that are quick in action, firm, clear and of high organization. It is the nervous men that rule the world, not lymphatic vegetables."

People of a low level of nervous organization are persons of small initiative, everyday accomplishment and meager imagination. They do not suffer severely under the pangs of an outraged fortune, nor do they, like a Shelley, "fall upon the thorns of life and bleed;" but, on the other hand, they are less capable of enjoyment. Their range of delights is decidedly circumscribed. Their thinking powers are but narrow.

In the progress of civilization as the strain upon the body has become less that on the nerves has become more. The Chicago Tribune quotes Dr. Schofield. He says that the manifestations of nervous irritation are numerous and characteristic. "Physically they may include constant or intermittent movements of body and face, sharp, ringing cough, sudden hoarseness, quick and irregular breathing, starting, twitching, flushing, palpitation of the heart, tenderness of the scalp or spine, headaches at the top and back of the head, congested look of the eyes, noises in the ears, sleeplessness, dyspepsia and flatulence, perspiration, flying pains and cramps and neuralgia of various parts.

"Mentally we get timidity, irritability, melancholy and a dread of being alone, or 'monophobia,' or in a crowd, or 'agoraphobia,' or in close, confined spaces, or 'claustrophobia.' There is little mental control of power; wrong words may be spoken or written."

The present day writers on nervous life are considering its troubles prophylactically and more and more recognizing the normal side of the question or the value of nerve power or the supreme value to progress of this particular biological factor in mankind.

The disasters the strain of which so many are the victims are due to imperfect adaptation, to lack of knowledge of how to accommodate and therefore lack of control. When men are in but imperfect control of newly acquired powers they cannot function fully or with precision.

Hysteria, the result of some slight but real disease, is common in persons of ill balanced or wornout brains. Its real seat is in the brain, although its manifestations are physical. It is common in the spring, when the nervous system is least well balanced, says Dr. Schofield, and to both the under and the over worked, the badly trained and imperfectly educated. He quotes Dr. Buzzard in a paragraph giving the mental conditions found in these sufferers as follows: "Intelligence good, apprehension quick, memory good, judgment weak, no ability of concentration of thought for any length of time. Accuracy and perseverance are deficient, emotions too easily excited and incapable of control. The expression of emotions is incongruous—tears at ridiculous subjects and laughter at tragic. There is great desire for the sympathy and attention of others."

Mirth, music, physical exercise, change of interest and occupation are some of the things recommended as curatives for diseased nerves and also as rests for tired nerves. Something that gives rise to new emotions is sought, for, as Dr. Carpenter says, "It is safe to assert that whenever there is an unsatisfactory nervous condition there is always emotional disturbance."

The greater number of interests a man has the greater number of emotions, and it is highly desirable that they be normal instead of stressful and disordered.

An Unexpected Explanation.

A pastor was calling upon a dear old woman, one of the "pillars" of the church. As he thought of her long and useful life and looked upon her sweet, placid countenance, bearing but few tokens of her ninety-two years of earthly pilgrimage, he was moved to ask her: "What has been the chief source of your strength and sustenance during all these years? What has appealed to you as the real basis of your unusual vigor of mind and body and has been to you an unfailing comfort through joy and sorrow? Tell me that I may pass the secret on to others and if possible profit by it myself."

The old woman thought a moment, then, lifting her eyes, dim with age yet kindling with sweet memories of the past, answered briefly:

"Victuals."—Lippincott's.

GROWING SPROUTS

Little Known Vegetable, but One Worth Cultivating.

IN CLASS OF CAULIFLOWER.

Not Difficult to Raise and Troubled Little by Insects—Part Eaten Is Tiny Cabbage Buds, Size of Walnuts, Sprouting From Axis of Leaf.

Brussels sprouts are a cabbage species which is very little known, though there is no reason why it should not be in every kitchen garden and market garden, as it is a vegetable outranked only by cauliflower. The parts eaten are the tiny cabbage buds which grow out of the axis of the leaf after the latter has fallen off. They are prepared like cauliflower, and many epicureans consider them even superior to that vegetable.

The plants are grown in the hotbed, transplanted in spring the same as cauliflower and cultivated clean during the summer. When the tiny buds are the size of a walnut they are ready for consumption. The growth of the buds is hastened if the leaves are broken off after they are fully developed. Frost improves the quality of the buds, but a freeze will kill the plant.

If grown on a commercial scale they are packed in quart berry boxes, twenty-four quarts to the crate. They sell at 15 to 25 cents per quart retail.

Insects do not trouble this plant much, but those which do are the same as those found on the cabbage.—Farm and Ranch.

SOMETHING WORTH WHILE.

To own land, to delve in it and to plant seeds against the harvest is the commonest delight of the race and the most satisfying of human vocations. Land is a patent of nobility, and success in life is measured by ability to buy it. It is the pride of the rich and the passion of the poor.

Profit comes from planting and enjoyment from constant effort. If man does not sow of the good seeds nature will sow of the bad. The one brings the vast fields of corn whose banners wave on the breeze of morn or the green seas of alfalfa with roots like the sources of the human race. Nature brings the jungle, restores the weed and seeds the crabgrass which spreads and holds like original sin.

Planting is better than medicine, the harvest than a sanitarium and the sower raises the average of human life as well.—Kansas Farmer.

Sweet Potato Diseases.

Black rot, soft rot, stem rot, dry rot, white rot, soil rot, scurf and leaf mold are the sweet potato's worst diseases. They may be kept in check by removing from the sweet potato patch every particle belonging to any portion of the sweet potato plant. Destroy all infected material by fire. Do not grow from slips, but use vines to produce a crop. Plant in a portion of the field far removed from the old patch. This also applies in fighting the root borer or weevil. Bordeaux mixture will keep the crop clean of black rot and leaf mold. It is claimed that an application of 800 pounds an acre of equal parts of sulphur and kainit will clean the field of the germs of these diseases.—Farm and Ranch.

Potatoes With Apples.

The best crop I have found to grow in a young orchard is the potato, says an American Agriculturist writer. I would not grow this more than two years. The cultivation continues during the fore part of the season and leaves the land in fair shape for the following year. I sow buckwheat or clover after the potatoes are off, but leave everything on the ground that grows on it until the following spring, when it is all plowed under and a liberal fertilization given.

DOUBLING TIMOTHY YIELD.

New York College Has Learned How to Get More of This Valuable Hay.

Dr. H. J. Webber, professor of plant breeding in the New York State College of Agriculture, in a recent address on the "Improvement of the Hay Crop" gave the results of investigations in the breeding of timothy, the most valuable crop cultivated in New York state.

In 1910 seventeen new varieties yielded an average per acre of 7,451 pounds, and seven check plats planted with good ordinary timothy in the same year and under the same conditions yielded an average of 6,600 pounds per acre. The seventeen new varieties thus gave an average increase per acre of 851 pounds.

Ordinarily timothy usually begins to deteriorate very soon after planting and meadows run out so that fields are rarely kept in timothy more than two or three years. The new sorts, on the other hand, have been selected for their great vigor, resistance and length of life. They would, therefore, be expected to improve for several years rather than run out. This factor is shown in the second year crop. In the season of 1911 the seventeen new varieties gave an average yield of 7,153 pounds per acre, while the seven check plats only gave an average yield of 4,091 pounds per acre. The average increased yield of the seventeen new sorts in 1911 thus was 3,062 pounds per acre, being an increased yield of over one and a half tons per acre. Four of the highest yielding sorts in 1911 practically doubled the average yield of the check plats of ordinary timothy.

A bulletin describing the experiments may be obtained by writing to the college, at Ithaca, N. Y. Farmers will find that this bulletin contains much valuable information on the important subject it treats upon.

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT USES GOATS.

The department of agriculture has been making a rather curious experiment in the Lassen national forest of northern California. Within the limits of that "reserve" there are about 50,000 acres of the scrub called chaparral, a thicket of pygmy trees and undergrowth, continuous for mile after mile, that is so dense as to be impenetrable to either man or beast. It is an area productive of nothing useful and by such natural conditions rendered unavailable for the planting of forests.

Similar scrub covered areas are found in other national forests in California and other states, and how to deal with them has been a problem of much difficulty. To get rid of the useless growth two principal methods have been tried—first, grubbing it up and, second, burning it. The former of these, however, is extremely laborious, and the latter injures the soil, while involving the danger of spreading fires.

Hence it was that the forest service acquiesced cheerfully in the suggestion that goats might be employed to destroy the scrub. By way of experiment permission was given for the pasturing of 3,000 Angoras within a designated area of about twenty square miles in the Lassen forest, the method prescribed requiring the owner of the animals to cut a series of trails a rod in width through the forest, such trails following the contours of the hills in parallel lines and about eighty rods apart.

Into these trails the goats were driven, and then they were allowed to shift for themselves, the expectation being that they would browse upon and kill the scrub on either side of the paths they followed, thus widening each trail to 300 feet perhaps.

By this means, it was thought, most excellent and effective "firebreaks" would be created, a matter of much practical benefit, inasmuch as the dense growth of chaparral in the dry season of the year is extremely inflammable and therefore dangerous to the forests.

From the viewpoint of the forest service the experiment has been decidedly successful, observes the Saturday Evening Post. The goats in the Lassen forest have eaten out the firebreaks and incidentally rendered considerable areas available for forest planting.

FEEDING FOR YOUNG CHICKS.

Method Recommended by Expert For Use From Hatching to Maturity.

The following method of feeding young chickens from hatching time to maturity is recommended by the poultry department of the New York State College of Agriculture:

Mixture No. 1.—Eight pounds rolled oats, eight pounds breadcrumbs or cracker waste, two pounds sifted beef scrap (best grade), one pound bone meal.

Mixture No. 2.—Three pounds wheat (cracked), two pounds cracked corn (fine), one pound pinhead oatmeal.

Cough Remedy For Hogs.

If you have eight or ten head of hogs dig about three or four pounds of poke root. Build a fire in the yard, put the root in the wash boiler and cook until tender and very strong in solution. After it is cool give a half pint to each hog in slop or milk. Do this twice a day for a week, then stop for a week and repeat. This has never failed a Kansas Farmer writer in two years of use. The cough will cease in three or four days. The hogs don't mind drinking it in slop, and they will acquire a ravenous appetite.

Don't Cut Your Clover Close.

Sweet clover must not be cut close to the ground like alfalfa or it will be killed. Its habits of growth are different. In alfalfa the new growth starts from the crown, while in sweet clover it starts from the stem. Hence it is necessary that sweet clover shall not be cut closer than about four inches above the ground. In ordinary seasons it yields about the same as alfalfa and may be cut three times on an average.

Rising at the Sound Of the Morning Gun

By EDWARD H. STANLEY

SINGULAR that I should be an officer; that I should be marching in the place of a second lieutenant in the rear of the company; that I should be in Santiago de Cuba. I have no remembrance of having been graduated. Yesterday we were marching to and from the mess hall. Yesterday I got befogged in that problem of analytical geometry. Besides, how did I get here? I don't remember coming—no railway ride, no troopship, no debarkation.

"I say, you, there, Bob Truman, how did we of the second class get into this war?"

"Graduated a year ahead."

"But what did we come on?"

"Lightning express to Tampa, then over the water in a balloon."

"Singular."

There was a rattling ahead, withdrawing my attention from what had happened to what was happening. One captain faced about and gave an order to march from column into line. We struggled through tangled bushes, a Mauser bullet spitting here and there like raindrops pelting the leaves. But twilight was coming, and then it was dark. The firing ahead ceased.

It seemed I was worn out; that I had been with the army from the first and had been over every inch of the road from the coast to our present position before Santiago.

"Will they yield tomorrow, do you think?" asked a pale faced boy, staggering up to me, "and let us get out of this dreadful country?"

"Don't know. I'm suffocating with the heat."

Then it was dawn. The full moon was in the sky far to the west, large and round and pale. When I first looked at it I though it a great white bird. I wondered if it were not a bird. No, that's the moon, sure enough. No, it isn't; it's a big bombshell. It is sailing right for me. As it comes it is turning black. That shows it's a shell surely. It comes on and on, passing directly over our heads and goes down slowly to the rear without bursting.

There is that Gatling gun again. Th-r-r-r-r-r-r from left to right, then th-r-r-r-r-r-r from right to left. Now stillness; now a distant groan, an oath, an order, anything, everything—everything that is horrible.

Hear that frightful shriek! Some woman leaving the starving city. She must be Spanish, and some brutal Cuban—

That's fainter, more plaintive. Oh, heavens, it's a baby's cry! What an awful thing is war that even a babe must go down under it! A moan—the mother's doubtless—then stillness, a stillness more awful than the sounds.

We are marching through these infernal tangles again, but suddenly emerge on an eminence. There is Santiago below and there are the Spanish flag and the outlying works. There is death in those redoubts on those long lines of low earth. There are driving storms of bullets and bursting rockets of shells, and the muzzles of the Gatling guns pour a destroying flood from the nozzle of a hose. We've got to go down there and take them. Yes, take them if we are torn into slivers. Why don't they shoot? I'd rather hear an occasional shot, see a puff of smoke than see that silence. Yes, see it. I can almost hear it.

All is lively enough now. There are volleys near, volleys far, cannon booming, men shouting, horses neighing, Gatling guns th-r-r-r-ring, all mingled in one gigantic roar.

"Wire fence nippers here!"

"Bring up those guns!"

"Turn about, there, my man, or I'll run you through. The enemy is in the other direction!"

"Water! Water!"

"Oh, God! I'm hit!"

I put my canteen to the lips of the man who called for water and cast a glance at the man who was hit, when the captain ordered me to stop those who were trying to go back.

Next I was lying on my back, clutching a wound in my left side. The blood was pouring out like water. A Cuban girl was bending over me holding my canteen to my lips. What a peaceful face! What a contrast with the frightful thing called war! Oh, that those eyes could look into mine forever! Oh, that that tress of hair that has come down and is blown by a breath of air across my cheek might thus lightly touch it during a lifetime!

Again I am pushing on toward those earthworks. They are pouring forth fire enough now. Singular that in such a storm of missile I am not hit.

"Look out!"

"What is it?"

"A mine! A mine! Run for your lives!"

"Boom!"

There is a terrible explosion. I am in my bed in barracks at West Point. The morning gun has just been fired. I am lying on my left side, and my heart is throbbing like a drum. Bob Truman, my roommate, is rubbing his eyes with his fists trying to wake himself up.

"I say, Bob, what a queer dream I've had."

"H'm;"

"Dreamed we were graduated a year ahead and in the Santiago campaign."

"That campaign's an old story now. I should want something fresher."

"The Spaniards exploded a mine and blew us all up. It was the morning gun. It awakened me."

"That's a trick of dreams. Some incident occupying a second will produce a dream running through a month. It proves conclusively that there's no such thing as time."

"Well, if that's war I don't want any of it. I've a mind to resign as soon as I graduate. I expect the real thing is no fun."

Nevertheless I am in the army today.

M'KINLEY FORGOT DIGNITY.

Once When He Heard Band Play Dixie He Lost Habitual Reserve.

Leopold Bracony, an Italian sculptor, once spent six weeks at the White House engaged in modeling a bust of President McKinley. Engaged in similar work he has been in close association with many famous men both in this country and in Europe, but he declares he never met a more kindly man than President McKinley and at the same time a more dignified man.

"Only once," said the sculptor recently, "during my long stay at the White House did I see the late president in an attitude that was not dignified, but it was only for an instant. We were in a room in the White House which opened on to a balcony. The president was to address a delegation of southern men and was waiting near the door leading to the balcony for the delegation to draw up in front. Besides the president there were in the room two army officers, Mrs. McKinley and myself.

"Presently we heard the band that was leading the delegation. Mr. McKinley threw back his shoulders, stood erect and placed his hand upon his breast between the buttons of his frock coat and was ready to step out at a signal to be given him by one of the army officers when all was ready.

"The band drew closer, and then the air it was playing could be distinguished. It was 'Dixie.' When the president heard the music he listened intently a moment, and then, waving his arms in time to the music, he began to pirouette around the room, humming the air as he went.

"'Well, well, well, William!' exclaimed Mrs. McKinley in a semihumorous, semishocked tone. At once Mr. McKinley stopped, assumed the stately, dignified position that was his habit and then, getting the signal, stepped out on the balcony with his hand thrust into the breast of his coat."—New York Herald.

TO THE NIGHTINGALE.

O nightingale, that on yon bloomy spray
Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still,
Thou with fresh hope the lover's heart dost fill,
While the jolly hours lead on propitious May.
Thy liquid notes, that close the eye of day,
First heard before the shallow cuckoo's bill,
Portend success in love. Oh, if Jove's will
Have linked that amorous power to thy soft lay,
Now timely sing, ere the rude bird of hate
Foretell my hopeless doom in some grove nigh;
As thou from year to year hast sung too late
For my relief, yet hadst no reason why.
Whether the Muse or Love call thee his mate,
Both them I serve, and of their train am I.

—John Milton.

JAMES WATT AND THE KETTLE.

Facts About How He Perfected the Steam Engine.

You have probably heard the story of the little boy named James Watt, who held a spoon to the spout of a kettle and so got the idea that he could use the force of the steam to make an engine. While this may be a good story, it is not much more authentic than the one about George Washington and the cherry tree.

James Watt was thirty-three years old when he invented the steam engine that made him famous, and instead of being a little boy when he got the idea he was twenty-seven years old when he first saw a steam engine, having been set to work to repair one which had been invented by a man named Newcomen and which was used to pump the water out of coal mines.

Watt saw that this engine wasted a great deal of steam, and it is said that he remarked to a companion that it worked as loose as a spoon hanging in front of a kettle spout, which is probably the foundation for the boy story.

After studying over the problem for six years he built a pumping engine that was better than Newcomen's and went into partnership with a man named Boulton to build engines. Their engines were so much better than the old style that they got a great many orders for them, and Watt became famous, while few persons have ever heard of Newcomen.—New York Sun.

An Anatomical Novel.

She struck him on the spur of the moment and then, after stabbing him in the interval, threw herself on his generosity.

He overlooked her violence and, drawn toward her by her wiles, kissed her on her protestations of repentance.

She threw cold water on his project and damped his ardor.

Feeling for her weakness, he jumped at her proposal.

She wiped her tear stained face on his pathetic entreaty.

Brooding on his remark, she trampled on his generosity.

Like a drowning man, he clutched at her explanation and, grasping her meaning, kissed her on the spot.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Wisdom Teeth.

There has been a tendency to question the purposes and value of wisdom teeth. In many instances these molars no sooner root themselves in the human jaw than out they come. But if a leading authority on the subject of teeth can be believed the time is approaching when we will be bothered by them no more.

EARLY SANITATION

Perfect System In Operation Three Thousand Years Ago.

TERRA COTTA PIPES IN CRETE.

Ancients' Hydraulic Science Complete. Main Drains Provided With Manholes For Inspection In Which Workmen Could Spend Days Comfortably.

In the Rev. James Baikie's new book, "The Sea Kings of Crete," there is an interesting account of the sanitary sewers and drains in the palace of Broad Knossos, says the Chicago Record-Herald. He says in part:

"In the northeastern quarter, under the corridor of the game board, are still preserved some of the terra cotta pipes which served as connections to the main drain. They are actually faucet jointed pipes of quite modern type, each section two and a half feet in length and six inches in diameter at the wide end and narrowing to four inches at the smaller end. Jamming was carefully prevented by a stop ridge that ran round the outside of each narrow end a few inches from the mouth, while the inside of the butt, or broader end, was provided with a raised collar that enabled it to bear the pressure of the next pipe's stop ridge and gave an extra hold for the cement that bound the two pipes together.

"Indeed, the hydraulic science of the Minoan architects is altogether wonderful in the completeness with which it provided for even the smallest detail. On the staircase near the east bastion, on the lower part of the slope, a stone runnel for carrying off the surface water follows the line of the steps. Lest the steepness of the gradient should allow the water to descend too rapidly and flood the pavement below, the runnel is so constructed that the water follows a series of parabolic curves, and the rapidity of its fall is thus checked by friction.

"The main drains are duly provided with manholes for inspection, and 'are so roomy,' says Dr. Evans, 'that two of my Cretan workmen spent days within them clearing out the accumulated earth and rubble without physical inconvenience. Those who remember the many extant descriptions of the sanitary arrangements, or, rather, the want of sanitary arrangements, in such a town as the Edinburgh of the end of the eighteenth century will best appreciate the care and forethought with which the Minoan architects more than 3,000 years earlier had provided for the sanitation of the great palace of Minos.

"Turning from the material to the spiritual, evidence as to the religious conceptions of the inhabitants of the palace was forthcoming. In one early chamber, along with the usual 'horns of consecration' and sacred double axes, were found three figures of a goddess of very archaic form, on the head of one of which there was also perched a dove.

"The double axes in the shrine emphasized the importance in the palace worship of the Labrys and underlined the suggestion that the palace of Knosses is nothing more or less than the legendary labyrinth of Minos. 'That the "Labrys" symbol should be the distinguishing cult sign of the Minoan palace makes it more and more probable that we must, in fact, recognize in this vast building, with its maze of corridors and chambers and its network of subterranean ducts, the local habitation and name of the traditional 'labyrinth.'"

MEMORY.

My mind lets go a thousand things,
Like dates of wars and deaths of kings,
And yet recalls the very hour—
'Twas noon by yonder village tower,
And on the last blue moon in May—
The wind came briskly up this way,
Crisping the brook beside the road,
Then, pausing here, set down its load
Of pine scents and shook listlessly
Two petals from that wild rose tree.

—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

The Stoics.

"Mucianus made a great number of remarkable statements to Vespasian (A. D. 71) against the Stoics—as, for instance, that they are full of empty boasting and if one of them lets his beard grow long, elevates his eyebrows, wears his fustian cap thrown carelessly back and goes barefoot he straightway postulates bravery, righteousness as his own. He gives himself great airs, though he may not understand (as the proverb says) either letters or swimming. They view everybody with contempt and call the man of good family a mollycoddle, the ill born a dwarfed intellect, an ugly person comely, the rich man an apostle of greed and the poor man a servile groveler."—Dio's Roman History.

Cause For Thanks.

Lord Charles Beresford told of one of his tenants who conducted a small undertaker's establishment in Waterford. One day he asked how business was. "Grand, me lord!" she exclaimed. "I now have the luckiest little hearse you ever saw. Glory be to goodness, it was never a day idle since I got it."—Argonaut.

The noisiest political farmer has the tallest weeds in his cornfield and the fewest potatoes in his hills.

The United States, although the youngest among nations, manufactures more goods, sells more merchandise, raises more produce, employs more labor, pays more wages, gives more comfort to its people, has more happy and prosperous homes than any nation on earth.

Labor is one of the supreme laws of life. Toil is honorable. The progress which the world has made is a glorious testimonial to human handiwork. Those who work know more of genuine happiness than those whose lives seem dedicated to idleness.

"Times are hard" to be sure, but what's the use of climbing up on a dry goods box and day after day proclaiming to the world this old threadbare stereotyped assertion. We sometimes think that times ought to be still more stringent with some of these fellows. Did it ever occur to you that the genuine hustler rarely, if ever, complains of hard times?

The man and woman who try to make their home the most interesting spot on earth for each other, and for their friends and those who are near and dear to them, have but occasional use for the club. It is to them, like the theatre, pleasant place to enter now and then but not a spot to dwell in.

The United States is the only country in which the son of the poorest mechanic or laboring man may become its ruler and where the daughter of a farmer may become the wife of a president and the mothers of senators. It is the only country where all earthly honors are within the reach of every citizen and where it depends upon the individual himself whether he will be a senator or a street sweeper, a railroad president or a railroad section hand, a millionaire or a pauper, a general or a policeman, a banker or a bankrupt.

An excellent ruling has recently been made by the postal authorities at Washington for which they are entitled to the united thanks of the mail carriers. It has been ruled that where a man keeps a vicious dog about his premises that makes it dangerous for a carrier to deliver mail, such delivery may be omitted. Unless the carrier is willing to risk danger of the dog, the owner of the vicious brute will have to depend upon himself in getting his mail at the post office.

Saint Paul adopted the commission form of government at the election last week. It is the largest city in the country to be ruled by commissioners. The new form does not go into effect until June 1914, the officers just elected serving their full time.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for milk cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

The Seed-Bed For Corn

—o—

The preparation of land for the coming corn should recive special attention. There is an absolute certainty that a large amount of weak seed is going to be used this year, and every possible assistance should be given to promote its germination, principally in the preparatith of the seed-bed. If corn is to be expected to grow readily, it must have a small amount of air, some moisture, and sufficent warmth. The proper combiation of these conditions is best obtained in well-worked, mellow seed-bed Such preparation of seed-bed not only conserves soil-moisture and destorys weeds, but it also warms the soil to an appreciable extent. A frequent use of the harrow and the disk, previous to planting-time, not only prepares the seed-bed in the various ways mentioned, but every one of the operation may justly be called a cultivative of the growing crop, even though the seed is still unplanted.

In the case of spring plowing, the repeated use of the harrow may put the surface in excellent condition, and still leave the bottom of the furrow-slice in a poorly-prepared condition. It is much better to continue the work and the disk, as this additional work has a tendency to compact the forrow-slice and improves the conditions of growth. By all means properly prepare the seed-bed for this year's corn crop.

There is a large number of such cases on the reservation, where white men have married mixed-blood maidens, gotten a quarter section of land with them, and are prospering as farmers. The mixed-blood families are usually more numerous and much healthier than the regular Indian families, and the children are usually well educated.

When the degree of Indian blood is reduced to one-fourth or less most of the Indian characteristics and features are lost. There are perhaps more than 1,200 members of the White Earth tribe whose Indian blood does not show—who are really whites.

Farming the way your grandfathers did. The world has moved, farming has become a science, and it is the reading, thinking farmer who has a wonderful yield when crops are generally good, and a fair crop when those of his neighbors are failures. Remember, the rule of all decent newspapers and you will never have occasion to put on the shoe. This is the rule which we give in all kindness. Never ask a newspaper to do anything you are ashamed to do yourself.

One of the biggest conventions to be held in Minnesota this year is the Ninth Annual Convention of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, which will meet at Detroit, June 11, 12 and 13. Unlike most conventions the Eagles hold a short business session each day and the rest of the time is spent in enjoying the hospitality of the city in which they meet. Detroit this year will outdo anything heretofore attempted. A long list of free entertainments have been provided, including daily baloon ascensions, numerous acrobatic acts, band concerts, automobile excursions, boat races, parades, fireworks, and others so numerous that there will not be an idle moment day or night. The railroad rate will be one and one-third fare from any point in the state for round trip. This will be a great opportunity to visit this famous summer resort and enjoy the hospitality of the Eagles, and more than 10,000 people are expected.

HENRY LEMIEUX

It becomes the sad duty of the Pioneer this week to chronical the death of one of the oldest as well as one of the most progressive farmers in eastern Red Lake county, in the person of Henry Lemieux. Death occurred at 6 o'clock Monday morning from heart decease to which the deceased has been subject for a couple years, and which had given him troubles at different intervals. He was taken ill Friday and was brought in to town to seek medical aid at the hands of Dr. Hanson, but his case was found to be a hopeless one, and despite all care and attention he passed away at break of day Monday. The sudden death of Mr. Lemieux was a sad shock to his large circle of friends, and has cast a gloom over the entire community. This is the second time within a short period of seven months that the hand of death has been felt in the Lemieux household, Mrs. Lemieux having preceeded her husband to the grave, and had answered the call of death on the same day of the month.

Mr. Lemieux is an old resident in this part of the state and one of the pioneer's of Red Lake county. He was a man of sterling quality and was a charming example of honesty and uprightness. He was a leader among his fellow men and a valuable asset in the up-building of his community. He leaves seven children to mourn the irreparable loss of their beloved father and to whom the hearts or their many friends go out in profound sympathy in their sad bereivement.

The body was taken to the Lemioux home Monday and the last sad rites were conducted from that place Wednesday forenoon and the remains laid to rest in the family lot in the Lambert cemetery.

The deceased is 59 years of age and leaves to mourn him besides his childgren his parents and a brother who reside at Red Lake Falls and who were in attendance at the obsequies.

Had A Birthday Party.

—o—

Thru erroneous information we failed to make mention of the birthday party held at the home of Knute Steen, north of town, a week ago last Sunday. The occasion was that of the birthday of Miss Sophie Steen, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Steen. A very large gathering is reported as having been present, and was made up of both young and old, immediate friends of the family. The day was spent in feasting and sundry amusements by the older generation and the evening was spent in pleasant merriment by the younger sex. A most enjoyable event is reported by everyone present.

To Run Special Train.

—o—

The Thief River Falls base ball club has completed arrangements with the Soo railway to run a special train from that place on Sunday, June 2nd, where two games of ball will be played between the U. C. T. teams of the two towns on that day. The train will leave Thief River in the morning, returning in the evening, and stops will be made along the line for the benefit of those who wish to make the trip. In addition to the ball game, boat rides will be arranged on the beautiful lake Bemidji, and various other attractions and a fine trip is promised to all who desire to go. Round-trip tickets will be sold here for a trifle over $2.

Railroad to Pay.

—o—

The homesteaders along the Canadian Northern, at Williams, Cedar Spur and Graceton, who won their suits last year, brought against the company to recover damages in the Beaudette fire of two years ago, will be paid their loses. The railway company appealed eighteen of the suits to the supreme court, and Albert Chilgren, the Williams attorney received a wire from St. Paul that the decision had been affirmed. Those who are familiar with the cases say that the company will take no further actions and that the loses will be paid without delay. They amount to many thousands of dollars, and should be a great help to the homesteaders in improving their property.

Mr. E. Bjorge, proprietor of the Farmers store, arrived here Monday evening to take charge of his new interests, and to make his permanent home here. His family will remain at Detroit until arrangements have been made for a residence here, which may take considerable time.

LOST GAME TO BROOKS

—o—

Number of Errors In Third Inning Lost Game to "Down-the-Line" Team.

That the "hoodoo" is still lurking around in this vicinity is evident. Just what the "hoodoo" is we have yet to be informed off, but whatever it is, it sure is a fine thing to have around. It has been suggested that it appears sort of in the form of a bird, whose presence anywhere is an omen of bad luck. Maybe! If it is, it certainly is a fine speciman of a bird, and if you don't believe it ask the baseball boys. Nothing is surer, however, than that the "hoodoo" power had a whole lot to do with the run of things in last Sunday's base ball game. Just as sure as the sun rises and sets, just so sure should the locals carried home with them the scalps of the opposing team, had it not been for a short ill-streak. The third inning proved the dow-fall of the locals; an over-throw and a few minor errors caused a rally by the Brooksites that netted them a neat sum of four scores. This proved to be too big a set-back for the locals to overcome, and despite all their efforts they were unable to bring in the winning score.

At the end of the third the game stood 4 to 2 in favor of Brooks; the Plummer team having scored twice in the first inning. Another score was recorded by the locals in the fourth and the veil of gloom was lifted, and the chances of a victory became pretty certain, but were dispelled in the seventh when the "down the line" bunch managed to run in a couple more. The situation became hopeful again for the home team in the eight when they brought in a like number of scores but the score sufficient to tie the game was not to be made, and the game closed with a score of 6 to 5 in favor of Brooks.

The game was interesting and comparatively clean all thru. Krueger, the first sacker for the locals, had the misfortune of spraining his ankle which will put him out of the game for a couple of weeks at least. This was the only accident to any of the local players.

A large number of people from town went down to take in the game in addition to the band which went down to furnish music for the game and Plummer was represented by an excellent delegation.

The following is the line-ups and the summary of the game:

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN

Rebellion In Herzegovina.

SHE was a young girl, one who had seen very little of the outside world, the world of men, women and affairs. Her seventeen years had been largely spent with her tutors and her attendants, numbering perhaps a score, and her worldly experiences consisted of attending balls, formal receptions and reviews of the government troops.

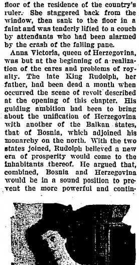
She stood at a window on the second floor of the palace and gazed apprehensively into the street below. The afternoon sun streamed through her golden hair, accentuating its natural beauty in a wave of shimmering light, and her delicate features were revealed in all the loveliness that had spread her fame throughout the land that had given her birth.

The broad Avenue Alexander, along which the palace extended, was in a tumult. A badly organized mob of rioters, men, women and even children, were attacking a regiment of the government soldiery which was in alignment at the southwest gate of the courtyard. Most of the men had carbines obtained from some mysterious source, others used pistols or brandished knives, and the women, a few of them veritable amazons, threw cobblestones which they pried from the street.

Suddenly one of the women, a tall, rawboned peasant, pointed with a crooked, bony finger toward the side of the palace, crying, "The queen, the queen!"

A carbine shot rang out, and the leaden missile shattered the glass above the head of the girl peering through the window on the second floor of the residence of the country's ruler. She staggered back from the window, then sank to the floor in a faint and was tenderly lifted to a couch by attendants who had been alarmed by the crash of the falling pane.

Anna Victoria, queen of Herzegovina, was but at the beginning of a realization of the cares and problems of royalty. The late King Rudolph, her father, had been dead a month when occurred the scene of revolt described at the opening of this chapter. His guiding ambition had been to bring about the unification of Herzegovina with another of the Balkan states, that of Bosnia, which adjoined his monarchy on the north. With the two states joined, Rudolph believed a new era of prosperity would come to the inhabitants thereof. He argued that, combined, Bosnia and Herzegovina would be in a sound position to prevent the more powerful and continually overreaching nations of Europe from encroaching on their territory and rights.



She Staggered Back From the Window.

Some of the dignitaries of his realm, when called into consultation with the king to consider his project, had at first protested against it with a deep sense of the importance of Herzegovina. Had not Herzegovina herself at least 250,000 inhabitants? Was she not fifty miles wide, 150 miles long and in some places three miles high? Surely what need had she of an ally among nations!

"Only think," interjected the chancellor of the exchequer, "if Herzegovina were to be merged with another state a country would be formed that would prove too large for any one man to govern."

"Yes," replied King Rudolph, vainly attempting to suppress a laugh, "it would be a big country—just big enough to allow a tall man to stretch himself without getting a passport."

The method chosen by Rudolph to unite the two kingdoms was to bring about the marriage of his only daughter and heir to the throne, Anna Victoria, to the ruler of Bosnia, Stephen IV. In fact, Stephen and his advisers were also in favor of the proposed joinder of interests with his neighbors on the south, and King Rudolph had drawn up a formal contract of betrothal between his daughter and the Bosnian ruler. Stephen, who was not yet thirty, considered himself fortunate, moreover, in respect to his intended alliance with the family of King Rudolph. He had met Anna Victoria only once, and then for a brief period, but her beauty, poise and charm of manners made an impression on him that not even his active mode of living could efface.

Young, approachable, with an enthusiasm for life and disinclined to overtax his subjects, Stephen was well liked among the natives of Bosnia, for the most part simple folk who tilled the soil, tended the herds of cattle and flocks of sheep or who labored in the mines. Although frequently referred to as "Stephen the debonair," he had conceived and caused to be put into effect various governmental measures which evidenced a sincere desire on his part to perpetuate economic principles which he believed would work to the advantage of his country.

Queen Anna had not formed a decided opinion regarding King Stephen. On the occasion when she met him a military review was in progress, when, naturally, but little opportunity was presented for her to gain a trustworthy estimate of the qualities of the future husband that had been chosen for her. He looked like a king, she thought, and, to be sure, he acted like one, though perhaps his brilliant uniform had something to do in giving him a truly regal aspect.

However, the plans of kings, like the plans of mice and men, "gang aft agley." The rise of Myrza, once a lieutenant in King Stephen's bodyguard, to be commander of the Bosnian army was an element to be reckoned with, though little was his sovereign cognizant of that fact. General Myrza, bold, resourceful and of an innate capacity for intrigue, headed a court cabal which had for its purpose the overthrowing of the reigning families of both Bosnia and Herzegovina by means of simultaneous revolutions. Through the culmination of this design he aimed to obtain controlling power and with it a portion of the royal lands befitting what he believed to be his superior qualities.

The death of King Rudolph across the border gave Myrza his opportunity. His plans, already well laid, were coolly perfected, and shortly before midnight, March 28, a cipher message sent from an outpost on the Bosnian border was received in Mostar, the capital of Herzegovina, by the colonel of one of Queen Anna's regiments, who treacherously had agreed to influence his men to turn against their sovereign.

"Strike now—spread the news!" read the message when interpreted. As the midnight hour struck the deserting soldiers formed in a position to menace the royal palace. Quickly the tidings spread, and riotous disorder broke forth in Herzegovina's capital that soon swelled beyond control of the leaders. Scores of the peasants who a few hours before would have bitterly resented a charge that they did not love—aye, worship—their girl queen now thronged the streets, the insensate fury of the mob usurping the abiding place of the spirit of kindliness and reason.

While in Mostar the Myrza conspiracy prospered chiefly through the hotheadedness of the excitable populace, and so whatever advantage the scheming general obtained might be reversed when the clamoring masses subsided in their unrest, yet in his own country, Bosnia, he secured absolute control through his station as chief of the army.

So far as Herzegovina was concerned the revolution, of course, centered in Mostar; and it had reached a pitch terrifying to the defenders of the queen at the time of the attempt to slay her.

She had been conveyed to her bedchamber at the order of the court physician, who, in constant attendance at the palace, had been hurriedly sought when she fell at the window. She was not long in regaining consciousness. She was full of sorrow because she loved her people and she had believed that they had love for her, but the thought of the danger that shadowed over her nerved her to action.

There was but one man of all her advisers on whom she felt she could absolutely rely. He, the Baron Cosaca, had been court chamberlain for almost thirty years and the trusted confidant of her father. The earliest recollections the queen had were of the statue of her grandfather in the public gardens of Mostar and of the dignified, gray haired Baron Cosaca of military bearing, who was happiest when engaged in promoting the safety or comfort of the then Princess Anna.

She sent for the baron, and the expression of worriment which clouded the aged dignitary's face when he arrived revealed something of the nature of the crisis confronting the queen.

"Your majesty must leave the palace the first possible moment," he insisted, "if such a course is open. None of us grasped the magnitude of the uprising at the start, and perhaps escape from the palace is now impossible."

"Where could you go?" asked the queen.

"Where could you go provided a way is found to leave?" asked the queen in agitated manner.

The baron was silent. He stood with arms folded and gazed piercingly at his youthful sovereign. Finally he spoke:

"If we can get through the rebel guards surrounding the palace and the public buildings (and our only chance would occur after darkness falls) we could, I am sure, make our way across the Bosnian frontier to seek protection of King Stephen until means are found to suppress this uprising."

"To King Stephen!" gasped the queen excitedly. With an effort she regained a measure of composure.

"Yes; that is the only way," responded the baron.

The wise old chamberlain had seen and comprehended all. She had lived in a little world of her own, a world of imagery, where brave knights wooed and won the ladies fair they loved. A story book world had been hers, which had taught her that a woman married the man she loved and lived happily ever afterward. Although a queen, she was every inch a girl, and with all her soul she dreaded the thought of marriage to the Bosnian king, "Stephen the Debonair," whom she had seen but once.

Although Baron Cosaca appreciated the delicacy of the queen, which prompted her to turn in any direction except toward the Bosnian court, he believed that there was the one haven of safety. Little did he know that Bosnia was in a condition of chaos more pronounced than was Herzegovina and that the enemies of his beloved queen were in firmer control across the border than in her own native land.

"I have a plan," went on the baron, "that I consider feasible. I am sure I can bribe the guard at the northwest gate of the palace. A carriage will be there at 11 o'clock tonight, an inconspicuous private vehicle, not one of the royal equipages, as that, of course, would attract attention. You will go down the servants' stairway sharply at 11 and step boldly forth and enter the carriage. I will be inside. Carry as much money and valuables as you can procure. I shall do likewise. Above all, your majesty should save your crown jewels."

The queen, forced to accept the baron's statement that her safety lay in seeking the protection of the court of Stephen IV., proceeded eagerly to prepare for flight.

"Of course I must wear a disguise!" she cried to the baron, who vainly insisted that such procedure was unnecessary.

"You see," continued Anna Victoria animatedly, "all the queens and kings that ever escaped from their enemies had to wear disguises. I've read that in ever so many books."

Baron Cosaca bowed before the inevitable and hastened to perfect his plans for the rescue of his queen.

Anna Victoria chose one of her maids, her faithful Sophie, whom she knew could be trusted, to get her in readiness for her departure. She could take but one trunk, and this she filled to the bursting point with her best gowns. Seizing a bandbox, she crushed her royal crown into it, also throwing in carelessly a handful of rings and necklaces, some of them gifts from the crowned heads of Europe and Asia.

A Glance at Current Topics

MORE and more attention is being given to the suggestion that only the physically fit should be permitted by law to marry. At Catlin, Ill., there has been formed a "mothers' protective association" whose object it is to watch the eligible young men of the town so far as their habits and conduct are concerned. Both ideas sound reasonable to many persons. True, the last mentioned plan is open to ridicule, but when sober, conservative limits are not exceeded isn't there something good in it?

There can be less criticism of the crusade for the marriage of only healthy persons. Some states already require certificates of health from the prospective contracting parties, and perhaps it is not a rash prediction that the time is approaching when such certificates will be required in every state throughout the United States. It is a matter that instantly appeals to thinkers. It cannot be denied that marriages of unhealthy men and women usually lead to much mental anguish and bring into the world children whose struggle for existence is a pertinent commentary on the wisdom of the matrimonial health doctrine.

Italy's First Subway.

The estimated cost of the first subway railroad to be constructed in Italy, that in Naples, is $5,790,000, which sum is to be met by the French-Italian company to which the concession was granted and without subsidy or grant of any kind. The line will be both urban and interurban, the former with a total length of eight kilometers (4.97 miles) and the latter ten kilometers (6.21 miles) and is to be completed in four years. Subway projects are under consideration for Genoa and Rome.

Home Rule For Ireland.

Shorn only of Gladstone's magnificent voice and great personality, the occasion of the presentation of the third Irish home rule bill by Premier Asquith in the British house of commons was as striking as the occasion of the presentation of the last previous home rule bill in 1893. Thus cabled a London correspondent. The renewed agitation for Irish home rule recalled the memorable day when the first government of Ireland measure in commons rent the Liberal party and caused a political sensation. The 1912 movement in the same direction has been receiving the close attention of all nations. Premier Asquith had promised that the present year would witness action on this momentous question one way or the other. Denounced by Unionists as more dangerous than the Gladstone bill, the Asquith measure rekindled the flame of opposing opinion anew and created a tense political situation.

Andrew Bonar Law, Unionists' Leader of the Opposition.

A series of meetings had been held in opposition to the government home rule plan, and the leading speaker at these demonstrations has been Andrew Bonar Law, the Unionists' leader in the house of commons.

The Tariff Question.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh believes that the only way to take the tariff issue out of politics is by evolution. "I think," he said recently, "that the country is becoming determined to have a tariff policy that is national and that represents the whole people. And when that comes about then the tariff will cease to be partisan. Both parties now are working in the same direction, though dealing in different shibboleths and adhering to antagonistic theories. Both want reduced tariffs, and so we see that an evolution is at work which promises an undisputed national policy."

A Table That Made History.

The table on which the American Declaration of Independence was signed is not for sale. This historical piece of furniture is in the Bismarck museum at Schonhausen, near Berlin, Germany, having been presented to Prince Bismarck by German American admirers. Would be purchasers have been informed that it will not be sold under any circumstances.

Title to the treasures in the museum, which contains hundreds of gifts received by the Iron Chancellor, is now vested in Princess Herbert von Bismarck, the statesman's widowed daughter-in-law. She declined to permit the sending of the Declaration of Independence table across the ocean in 1904 for exhibition at the St. Louis fair.

New Mexico's U. S. Senators.

Albert B. Fall, one of New Mexico's members of the United States senate, was born in Kentucky in 1861. He served two terms as attorney general of New Mexico and was in the New Mexico legislature. He is a lawyer and has been on the supreme court bench. In the Spanish-American war Judge Fall had the command of a company of volunteers. When he went to New Mexico he took up the study of law and established a modest little newspaper. His senatorial associate, Thomas B. Catron, is twenty years his senior.

Moral Instruction.

A course of moral instruction in the public schools of Sioux City, Ia., has been approved by the board of education, with such general topics as the code of sportsmanship, thrift of time, good fellowship and the utility of going to school. Nothing relating to sex matters will be presented in the new instruction.

The Honest Old Work Horse.

The day of the usefulness of the work horse has not passed in the cities in spite of the inroads of motor vehicles. In one city alone, New York, it is estimated that there are 72,000 work horses, and on May 30 they will appear on parade. It will be the sixth annual turnout of the sort under the direction of the New York Women's League For Animals, of which Mrs. James Speyer is president. The league has a farm and dispensary for the care of broken down horses.

Newspapers and Truth.

"Are newspaper and magazine writers free to tell the truth?" "If not, why not, and what is to be done about it?" These questions are to come before a national newspaper men's conference to be held at Madison, Wis., from July 29 to Aug. 1, under the auspices of the extension division of the University of Wisconsin. Participating in the discussions on newspaper work and editorial policies will be William T. Stead of London, Melville E. Stone, William Allen White, William J. Bryan, Norman Hapgood and Fremont Older.

Education In the South.

In connection with the address delivered last month by President Robert C. Ogden of the conference for education in the South it is interesting to note that prominent women of Tennessee have taken steps to engage in the advancement of education among illiterate southern children, white and black. These women are all writers, and they contemplate a program of wide scope. Mr. Ogden says of the past year's work of the conference: "Public opinion has been created, educators have been inspired, legislation has been more intelligent, taxation has been increased, careful study has been stimulated, plans of development have been put in operation, and the whole spirit of the movement has been kept in constant, progressive and intellectual activity."

Robert C. Ogden, Head of Educational Conference.

$466,000,000 In Gold.

The world's gold output for last year has been estimated at $466,000,000, a gain of $14,000,000 over the 1910 output and of more than $200,000,000 over that of ten years ago. [21 B]

CONSIDER A GRAIN OF WHEAT.

Some Interesting Facts About How Seeds and Stalks Multiply.

M. Phillipari, professor of botany, in 1842 cultivated at Versailles, near Paris, France, successfully 372 varieties from combinations of the following standards: Five main kinds—first, Egyptian; second, spelter wheat; third, Polish wheat; fourth, single grain wheat; fifth, common bearded wheat; three general kinds: hard, soft and Polish ordinary.

M. Deslongchamps reported that he counted 450 grains from one seed and that he also saw 152 stalks coming from one grain, says the Narrator.

Mr. Shaw of St. Louis received once from a governor of an Algerian province a plant of eighty stalks and mentions one of 120 stalks in possession of a pasha of Egypt.

Sir Humphry Davy mentions one of 130 stalks.

Duhamel speaks of two seeds each that produced 140 stalks and 6,000 grains.

At Kerinon, near Brest, France, in 1817, 155 ears from one root were reported.

D'Albert, chief gardener of Louis Philippe (1830-48), reports of a plant near Maules of fifty-two ears, with 2,240 grains.

The Chinese, by planting single seeds, frequently obtain twenty to thirty ears from one seed.

Charles Miller of the botanical gardens at Cambridge, England, in June, 1776, selected a grain ready to branch out, pulled it up and Aug. 8 divided it into eighteen parts. Each was carefully replanted, which sprouted again, and in September were divided and replanted, making seventy-six separate plants, which went through the winter and were redivided during March and April and gave in all 500 plants, from which came 71,109 ears, producing forty-seven and one-half pounds of grain, or, just think of it, 4,768,040 seeds.

Sir William Symonds of Hampshire, England, brought a few grains from Thebes, Egypt, which must have been about 3,500 years with the mummy from which they were taken in his presence. One seed only was planted, and it produced fifteen stems, with more than 1,600 grains.

THE BLUE AND THE GRAY.

Very peacefully they rest
Who, in life by peace unblest,
Caught the warcry, fierce and shrill;
Felt the battle's shock and thrill,
Heard the dreadful cannon's roar—
Death behind and death before—
Fighting on the sea and land,
Foot to foot and hand to hand.

Very peacefully they rest,
North and south and east and west,
While the heaven descending dew
Falls alike on Gray and Blue,
While the cheering light of day
Shines on Blue and shines on Gray;
Weary march and battle sore
Past for them forevermore.

Very peacefully they rest,
And the babes whose cheeks they pressed
In a last goodby have stood
O'er their graves in proud manhood
And in holy wedlock true
Plighted hearts of Gray and Blue
In the light of hearthstone fires
Tell the deeds of soldier sires.

DUST MAKES SKY BLUE.

Countless Particles Diffuse Light of the Sun, Causing Illusion.

The reason for the blue in the sky was discovered by John Tyndall, an English professor of natural philosophy. Tyndall, says the New York Sun, observed that the sky was not blue at night, but almost black except in moonlight. He also noticed that the blue of the sky is not the same in all parts of the world, so he concluded that there must be something in the air that was blue and not in the sky at all and that as there were different things in the air at different places this would account for the difference in the color of the sky.

The air that surrounds the earth is full of countless tiny specks of dust. If you see a sunbeam streaming through a small hole in a dark part of a barn you will easily see millions of tiny specks of dust floating all through the ray of light.

When we are so close to them they appear to be a reddish yellow, or we might call them white, but when these specks are a great distance off, away up in the sky, and the sun shines on them they cannot reflect any of the color rays back to our eyes except the blue ones, and so the whole sky looks blue to us.

You may have been in the mountains when some of the peaks were so far off that they looked blue, although you know quite well that they are covered with green trees.

If it were not for the dust in the sky, which reflects and diffuses the light of the sun, there would be no colors in the sky and the whole thing would be just like a black hole in the ground with a great ball of fire burning in the midst of it.

ODD WAR OMENS.

"Harbingers of Ill" That Superstitious Used to Fear.

SIGNS IN THE HEAVENS.

The War Comet of '61 and a Mysterious Cross In the Sky—Eagle That Hovered Over Spot Where Starry Emblem Was Raised.

The chance question of a child as to certain mysterious signs and wonders told of in history as preceding some war of ancient times started me upon an interesting search. I have been looking through old newspapers, old scrap books and letters of 1861-65 and have found much relating to the omens preceding or accompanying the war, writes Annie T. Slosson to the Hartford Courant.

Of course our war had its comet. Was there ever a war that lacked one? History is full of accounts of these flaming prophets. I remember well my first sight of what was then and is sometimes still called the "war comet of '61." I watched it in the northern heavens from the old house on Asylum hill, as my father pointed it out to me and told me of other comets he had seen in the past. The newspapers of those days gloated over it.

They called it a "harbinger of ill," a "dire omen," a "celestial seer." The New York Tribune spoke of it as "the mysterious monitor."

The rural newspapers wrote of it in varied style. Humorous editors made it a butt for their wit, punning on the name, joking over the tail and proving to their readers by this light and flippant touch their courage and freedom from superstitious fear. A New Hampshire journal in an article on what is called "our celestial guerrilla" quoted from a poem by John Phoenix, pseudonym of a well known humorous writer:

Sail up, sail up! Keep thy tail up,
Yellow war dog of the sky.

A witty editor in Maine alluded to the comet's "plain, unvarnished tail," and another from the same state avowed his belief that the stranger meant to show by his presence that the south could not "come it" over the north. There also were other signs and wonders in the heavens seen and regarded as portents or warnings.

The New Orleans Picayune gave an account of a "well defined cross seen in the sky over Kingston, N. C." Several editors of the same state referred to this phenomenon, which was "witnessed by many persons and was visible for nearly three hours in the evening."

The old Boston Journal, the New York Times and other papers told in 1862 of a marvelous "scroll in the heavens" seen—but only in a dream this time—by two soldiers the same night in different localities.

One of these dreamers was a member of Hawkins' zouaves, the other an artilleryman at Fort Warren, Boston harbor. The Journal added the information that the artilleryman was "the venerable Mr. Wright, a member of Captain Cabot's company." The scroll seen in the dream bore the inscription, "Peace, April 23, 1863."

There were ornithological presages, too, in those days. The eagle, of course, took a prominent part in these. The Harrisburg Patriot and Eagle told of "a thrilling incident taking place a few days before at Camp Curtin. While some people were raising the stars and stripes over the officers' headquarters a large eagle came from no one knew where and hovered over the encampment till the flag was run up." The writer adds that "thousands of eyes were upturned, and as the noble bird looked down the cheers of fully 3,000 men rent the air." The bird, here styled the "imperial bird of Jove," lingered only a few minutes, then "cleaved the air with his pinions, disappearing on the horizon."

Another eagle, according to a communication in the New York Times of July, 1861, attended a religious service held in Camp Butler, Newport News. While the chaplain, Rev. P. Franklin Jones, was preaching, and just after he had quoted certain loyal sentiments from Patrick Henry and John Adams an eagle appeared, hovered over the chaplain's head, circled around it, then flew away.

DO IT NOW.

Some time you mean to mend your ways.
Why don't you do it now?
You hope to win the whole world's praise.
Why don't you do it now?
You've always read in prose or rime,
"The present is the golden time."
If you are ever going to climb,
Why don't you do it now?
Successful men are never late.
You'll fail if you procrastinate.
If you have vowed to conquer fate,
Why don't you do it now?

Extraordinary Finger Nails.

Men and women belonging to the upper classes of China take great pride in the length of their finger nails, which often attain enormous length. In Siam, Anam and Cochin China this extraordinary custom is practiced sometimes to indicate that the wearer leads a religious life. The nobles of Anam permit their nails to grow to such length that the hands are absolutely useless for any practical purpose. The nails of the second, third and fourth fingers are often four or five inches in length. On the first finger alone the nail is kept short.—Tit-Bits.

HORSE ILLNESSES

Glanders and Distemper Look Alike, but Differ In Effects.

FORMER MEANS SURE DEATH.

Danger In It Not Only to Animals, but to Human Beings as Well—Best Way When In Doubt Is to Call In a Veterinarian.

Dr. C. L. Barnes of the Colorado Agricultural college writes thus concerning glanders and distemper in horses:

The question often arises on the farm, Has the horse that is ailing a case of glanders or distemper—strangles? Unless one be familiar with the symptoms of the two diseases it may be difficult to arrive at a correct diagnosis.

Most every one who has handled horses has seen cases of distemper, the symptoms being as follows: The colt is more often affected than the mature horse and is seen to be "off its feed" and having some difficulty in swallowing. The animal's coat is rough, and a general unthrifty condition is very noticeable. In a very few days a doughy swelling appears in the angle of the lower jaw, thus causing the animal to carry the head stiffly. The swelling eventually softens of its own accord, breaks and discharges a thick, creamy pus. Along with the symptoms will be seen a discharge from one or both nostrils, usually continuing until complete recovery.

Distemper is highly contagious and may run its course in three or four weeks, ending in recovery.

Glanders, on the other hand, as usually seen, is more of a chronic disease. The most marked symptom observed is a chronic, bloody discharge, usually from one nostril. If one examines the nose carefully ulcers will be observed, from which the pus escapes and drops from the nostrils. After several months the lymphatic glands located inside the lower jaw will be found to be enlarged and extremely hard. These lymphatic glands do not form pus as in distemper, but remain hard throughout the course of the disease.

Skin glanders is called farcy. With this form of glanders will be noticed a swelling of the lymphatics along the inside of the legs. These glands in time soften and form pus. The pus from a farcy leg is of a greasy nature, so that it does not stick to the hair the same as ordinary pus.

Distemper is what might be termed a benign disease, while glanders is exeremely contagious and deadly, not only to other horses, but to man, and, is incurable. For this reason when in doubt as to whether a horse is suffering from a distemper or glanders it is well to have him tested by a skilled veterinarian.

ADVICE ON POULTRY.

Dampness is fatal to chicks; hence they should not be allowed on the wet ground, but boards should be provided for them to exercise and run about on.

It would seem hardly necessary to state that pure, fresh water should be accessible to the chicks at all times, but it is oftentimes neglected, and when water is given them they gorge themselves with it badly.

Wire netting as effectively shuts in fowls and shuts out health.

The United States department of agriculture advises that the general purpose breeds of poultry, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons, should be kept on the farm, rather than small egg breeds or small mongrel stock.

It is not a good plan to save up eggs for hatching for a longer period than one week. The nearer they are alike in age the more uniform will be the hatch.

To avoid disease keep the poultry premises constantly clean. Whitewash the buildings inside and out and scatter lime over the floor and grounds. Spray the roosts with coal oil or a solution of carbolic acid.

Young Cheesemaker at Work

Photograph by University of Wisconsin Agricultural college.

More than half of all the cheese factories in the United States are in Wisconsin. The quality of cheese made in these factories is excellent. The state of Wisconsin improves her dairy products by maintaining in the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin one of the best dairy schools in the world. The picture shows a student in the dairy school learning how to make cheese. The instruction is supplemented by actual work in the creamery. The creamery uses the milk produced by several hundred cows on the surrounding farms, and each day the students have opportunity to learn how to manage the factory.

THE GENEROUS GRAIN CALLED CORN.

The steady spread and development of Indian maize into a world crop has been the agricultural marvel of our age. The corn of the Bible, the corn of Great Britain, is our wheat, not our "king crop." But all the world has come to know and bless the generous grain. Though upward of 80 per cent of the 3,500,000,000 to 3,750,000,000 bushels, which constitute the world's yield, is grown in this country, Argentina, Hungary and Italy, yet the cultivation of corn has been gradually diffused around the globe.

Next to our western hemisphere and Europe the most important areas are now planted in southern and southeastern Asia, chiefly in British India, French Indo-China and the Philippines. In 1910 the Philippine crop amounted to 14,276,846 bushels. The culture of corn is now general in Africa. It is the Egyptian fellah's staff of life and is even produced for export in the Union of Africa, where the product is known as "mealies." In Mexico the tortilla, prepared from the grain, is the chief food of the masses. Canada and Cuba raise corn, and it is grown in a small way in Australia and New Zealand. Save in Ireland it is rarely used as a human food throughout northern Europe, says the Philadelphia Press.

Outside of the United States the cultivation of corn is most extensive in southern Europe—centralized in a group of states comprising Austria, Hungary, Roumania, the Balkan states and Bessarabia in southwest Russia—where the production ranges from 500,000,000 to 600,000,000 bushels annually.

Corn is not only our king crop; it is also an uncertain and variable one. Last year, for instance, there was a great decline in the world yield. The aggregate product of the four leading countries was more than 550,000,000 bushels less than the crops of 1910 and 200,000,000 short of the returns for 1909. The yield in 1911 in the United States was about 355,000,000, and in Argentina about 148,000,000 bushels less than in 1910. There were relative shortages in Hungary and Italy. Just why this should be so our agriculture statisticians have not made clear, and there has been no sinister rumor of an international combination to restrain the acreage planted.

KILL SPARROW, SAVE FRUIT.

Noisy Bird Pest Spreads San Jose Scale With His Little Feet.

The San José scale can to a great extent be controlled by the constant use of sprays, but it can never be entirely exterminated as long as there are sparrows. Every farm with its set of buildings harbors a flock of these pests. Each year they increase in number. As the numbers increase they usually seek food farther away from home, and the larger the flocks the longer the flights. This is where the English sparrow does its work in carrying scale from one tree to another. Suppose that Jones keeps his orchard sprayed and nearly free from scale; a flock of sparrows about 500 strong comes from Johnson's orchard and alights in Jones' trees. Their feet are plastered with the scales from Johnson's unsprayed orchard. The result is a new supply of scales for Jones to fight.

The cure lies in the destruction of the sparrows. I know of a neighbor and his boys who went on the sparrow warpath for just one night and, with the aid of paddles, a light and nets, have as their record seventy-eight dead sparrows, says a Country Gentleman writer. Another neighbor uses a light in the cupola of the barn and, when they fly toward it, kills them with a paddle. His farm is almost free from the pest. He does this to protect the other song birds around the farm and does not realize the good he is doing in preventing the spread of the scale. In this same neighborhood the grange has organized several times for a hunt, chosen sides and treated the winning side to an oyster supper. I know of no better ways to destroy the birds than these, although poison may be used successfully. It entails a risk, however.

FOUL AIR KILLS COWS.

Ventilation In Barns a Prime Necessity In Dairy Business.

One great cause of disease of animals is unfavorable external conditions. All animals have a certain capacity of enduring unfavorable influences. This capacity is usually spoken of as "vital resistance." This may be great or small, but every animal must have more or less of it or it cannot continue its struggle for existence. It was recognized more than a century ago that impure air induces disease. Impure air is not the cause of the disease, but constitutes an unfavorable surrounding condition. The vitiated air of stables reduces the vital resistance of an animal, rendering it less adaptable to the extremes of conditions to which it may be exposed and more susceptible to infection, against which it has no sure defense.

Dairy barns are frequently poorly ventilated. The dairy cow is then not only required to live, but to work under unfavorable influences, and she often falls a victim to such diseases as tuberculosis, pneumonia, bronchitis and colds. Foul air is one of the prime factors in the production of such diseases. Since the advent of sanitary science in connection with ventilation the air space allowed for each animal has been increased.—Washington Agricultural College.

An Ambitious Mother Whose Plans Failed

By WILLIAM M. RUMNEY

On the James river some miles below Richmond is a plantation manor house that was built in 1660. About the middle of the last century the owner of the estate was a widow, Mrs. Margaret Ritchie, who had two twin daughters, Barbara and Elizabeth. Mrs. Ritchie was very wealthy and very ambitious. She took her daughters to Europe with a view to their marrying noblemen. A German baron proposed for Barbara and was accepted by the mother, who did not consult her daughter in the matter, intending, if necessary, to enforce obedience. The mother did not know that Barbara had a love affair with a lieutenant in the United States army, Theodore Benton, a fine young fellow, but without a cent in the world except his pay. Had she been aware of this attachment she would not have brought her daughter back to America, which she did, thinking it proper that the baron should come for her at her own home.

Soon after her return Barbara met Lieutenant Benton at one of the houses facing the capitol over which soon was to float the Confederate flag. Already there were mutterings of the great struggle to come. Benton was a northern man, and both knew that this would be an additional reason why Mrs. Ritchie would never consent to their marriage. Barbara told her lover of the contract her mother had entered into in her behalf abroad. Benton urged her to marry him at once without her mother's consent, but she dared not. Soon after, while Benton and Barbara were still in Richmond, came the news of the firing on Fort Sumter. Benton hastened to find Barbara, told her that he must at once make his way north and again urged her to marry him. She consented, a clergyman was called, and the two were made man and wife. Benton reached Washington safely. Barbara went home to her mother and broke the news of her marriage.

The next summer those at the Ritchie plantation listened every day for a week to the distant boom of cannon in the battles about Richmond. Then the sounds, like a storm that had come, roared from the top of Malvern hill, but a short distance away. Evening had come and with it only the cracking of rifles on the picket line when a young officer rode up to the plantation, announced himself as Lieutenant Theodore Benton and, upon being told that the family were there, demanded to see his wife.

Mrs. Ritchie came into the drawing room and received him with a haughty manner by no means softened by the fact that he was an invader of her state and her plantation. She told him that Barbara was ill and that she did not wish to see him. When the war ended she would apply for an annulment of the marriage. Benton flatly refused to believe the statement. Since he was with an army Mrs. Ritchie could not have him ejected. She therefore resorted to strategy.

"If my daughter comes into this room and confirms what I have said will you believe her?"

"I will."

Half an hour later a young girl stood upon the threshold, pale apparently with illness. Benton, seeing what appeared to be the shadow of his wife, stepped forward. The girl motioned him back.

"Theodore," she said, "I did wrong in marrying you without my mother's consent. Go away. I wish never to see you again."

Benton staggered from the house, mounted his horse and rode away.

Two years later Grant laid a pontoon bridge across the James, advanced to Petersburg and besieged the place. During the passage of the Union troops across the river an officer rode up to the Ritchie plantation and without dismounting handed a negro a note addressed to Mrs. Theodore Benton. It read:

> Are you of the same mind as in the summer of 1862? If so, I will go away, and when you wish an annulment of our marriage I will not oppose it.
>
> THEODORE.

In a few minutes Barbara appeared at the door and between hysterical tears and laughter held out her arms. Benton sprang from his horse to her embrace.

The first piece of news the husband received was that Mrs. Ritchie had died; the second was an explanation of the renunciation which had occurred when Benton had been there before. Mrs. Ritchie was a woman who when her mind was made up would stop at no means which she regarded legitimate to accomplish her object. She considered that her daughter had been stolen from her. Therefore she had a right to repossess herself of her own property. She would not lie. She had asked Benton, "If my daughter comes into this room and confirms what I have said will you believe her?" Then she ordered Elizabeth to personate her sister. Elizabeth, without strength of character to resist her mother, had done as she was told. Barbara on the arrival of her husband had been locked in her room and had not known of the outrage that had been committed until after her mother's death, when her sister confessed and begged forgiveness.

Barbara when she learned how she had been misrepresented to her husband was in agony. She had resolved to go north in search of him when the Union troops appeared.

Benton sent a note to his commanding officer announcing that he had found a loving wife and asking for a leave. It was granted, and that night the wedding was celebrated, not by the attendance of the neighboring planters, but by the rejoicings of the negroes, for whom, with their new master, the day of jubilee had at last come.

CHINA'S VAST FOREST WASTE.

This Is Said to Be Chief Cause of Disastrous Famines.

"China's life sapping famine, in which millions are suffering, is largely traceable to the wasting of the forests. One of the most horrible tragedies of the world might have been prevented by the careful use of these resources," said President John T. Proctor of the Baptist college at Shanghai in explaining the causes for the great famine in China, says the Chicago Tribune.

"China's hills and mountains are deforested. This is particularly true in the hilly country drained by the Yangtze river, whose valley comprises the stricken district. The river brings the soil down with it. That is the reason why we have the Yellow sea. For 300 miles out from land the ocean is discolored by the silt brought down by the Yangtze. The hills are washed bare of soil. There is some hunting in these hills, but the animals live among the brush. For want of better fuel the natives burn this brush.

"Last August the Yangtze overflowed and flooded about 40,000 acres of densely populated territory. This flood placed a population of 3,000,000 in want. In fifty years there has not been such another flood. Some of the victims have been drowned out for two consecutive years, some three years, some four years. They not only have lost food—they have lost hope.

"Much of the land that was inundated is at sea level. It is drained by the most intricate system of canals in the world. I know of one city of 30,000 which is surrounded by canals. There are no roads to it, because a road could not go half a mile without touching a canal. There are not even footpaths. The people make their way to and from the city in boats. This is their only means of communication.

"Lack of transportation facilities is another cause of the famine. It costs too much to carry food on men's shoulders. I know a province where rice costs twice as much in the west of it as in the east. But the cost of transportation between the two points made up the difference.

"Chicago can ship food to the famine district quicker and cheaper than the food can be transported from western China. Chicago is actually nearer the district than a great many places in the empire."

GOVERNMENT'S BULB FARM.

Plants 869,000 This Year at Bellingham, Wash.

Comparatively few know of the interesting experiments that are being carried on at the bulb garden near the town of Bellingham, Wash., under the direction of the secretary of agriculture. For years the United States has been sending to Holland and European countries many thousands of dollars annually for hyacinth, tulip, narcissus and crocus bulbs. The purchase of these bulbs had constantly increased until the past year over $1,000,000 worth were imported.

In 1908, says the New York Post, the secretary of agriculture decided to establish on the Pacific coast a garden for the culture and propagation of Holland bulbs, and a point on the Puget sound near the town of Bellingham was selected as having a suitable soil and climate for this work. A tract of ten acres was leased through the Bellingham board of trade, and the necessary buildings were erected and turned over to the department of agriculture for the purpose of demonstrating whether or not the Holland bulbs could be grown successfully at that point. The department commenced work at once, and the same year planted over 170,000 bulbs. From that time the work has gone on increasing until the present year, when over 869,000 bulbs were planted. The increase in the number of bulbs raised has been very gratifying, each bulb yielding the maximum number of young ones, which have proved equal, if not superior, to the results obtained in Holland.

It is believed that bulbs can be grown on the Pacific coast and of a quality that will compare favorably with and in many ways surpass the imported article, the cost of production and marketing being now the chief obstacles.

TRICKS OF SOUND.

Peculiarities Which Are Met In Study of Acoustic Science.

A PUZZLING PHENOMENON.

Sound Ghosts Strangely Make Themselves Heard From Foghorn or Signal at a Distance, but Become Inaudible Upon Approaching Source.

One recent mansion in New York city, says the Boston Transcript, was a remarkable example of failure to make a sound proof room. The owner was exceedingly sensitive to sound and in addition to his great house had built next to it his own private apartments. A brick wall of eighteen inches separated the two houses, with only two openings through it and no pipe passing into it or through it. The private portion of the house consisted of a library on the first floor, the roof arched and concreted, three inches of sand laid on that for a deadener, then three inches of blocking and then the floor of the sleeping room. This room was really a box. Its walls separated from the brick walls on every side. But nevertheless a tapping on the walls of the servants' quarters in the main house two floors below was heard intensified in the chamber of the private apartment.

An investigation showed that in the first place the wall was of hard brick laid in cement. These two items have about the same transparency to sound, and it goes through it in much the same fashion as through a wall all of the same material. This might not have mattered as much, but to steady the inner wall of the chamber certain braces connected with the brick wall, and thus it became a sort of sounding board. If the wall had had soft bricks and hard mortar the successive surface where the co-efficiency of transmissibility changed, which would be at every joint, would have absorbed the sound, or, if it had been the same hard brick with soft mortar, it would have been sound proof, but in the desire to have the best construction the materials were used that made the wall practically homogeneous in its ability to transmit sound.

Two other examples were noted of buildings in which practice rooms for musicians were designed with best intentions, without regard to expense, and the use of many intermediate partitions, wall space and even deadening packing; but without nearly the success that the efforts warranted. In both these it appears to have been an unsuspected relationship between the walls and the floors that caused the trouble. The sound progressing along the floors was caught up by the partitions. In this relation a most telling experiment was shown of the transmission of sound practically in a telephonic way by a wire from a cylinder containing a music box to a diaphragm. The music box was so well insulated as to be normally inaudible, and with a plain wire its tune could be heard all over the hall. A second wire, differing from the first only in being loaded with lead weights, reduced the sound greatly, because each of the sinkers gives a point where the sound is reflected and dissipated.

To any one in the direction toward which the wind is blowing the velocity of the wind is added to the velocity of the sound, so that one down the wind is more advantageously placed. There are various complexities in all this, since there must be assumed an equal velocity of wind in all the layers, which never happens. Sound at night is stronger than sound by day in the sunshine because the sun heats objects irregularly, according to their nature, and these objects—grass, bricks, sidewalks, rivers, asphalt, etc.—heat the air above them very differently.

The atmosphere is therefore in a great many portions of different temperatures, and every border between two temperatures absorbs sound. At night there is an even temperature throughout, and the air moves nearly homogenous. In fog the reason is not that there is water in the air and conducts the sound better, for that is not true. The vapor in the air would, if anything, have an opposite effect, but the moisture in such quantities is a great evener of temperature and quickly makes uniform any variations from local causes.

The sound ghosts have been indeed a puzzling phenomenon. The effect is that at a distance from a fog horn or signal it may be heard perfectly, and on approaching the signal it may become inaudible. This has been the cause of many wrecks. The explanation of this phenomenon is, in brief, that through lack of homogeneity in the air the sound waves become distorted and actually tilted, so that their range may be above the heads of persons at the surface.

My Neighbor.

My neighbor passed me in the street,
She dropped a word of greeting, gay.
Her look so bright, her tone so sweet,
I stepped to music all that day.

The cares that tugged at heart and brain
The work too heavy for my hand,
The ceaseless underbeat of pain,
The tasks I could not understand

Grew lighter as I walked along
With air and step of liberty,
Freed by the sudden lift of song
That filled the world with cheer for me

Yet was this all: A woman wise,
Her heart untouched by doubt or fear,
Had faced me with her brave, true eyes,
Passed on and said, "Good morning dear!"

It is said that three of the stinglest men in the state were in town yesterday. One of them will not drink as much water as he wants unless it be from another man's well. The second forbids any of his family from writing anything but a "small hand" as it is a waste of ink to make large letters. The third stops his clocks at night in order to save wear and tear on the machinery. All of them decline to take their county paper on the ground that it is a terrible strain on their spectacles to read newspapers, even in the day time.

One thing commendable for which the Governor can be given credit is the calling of the special session of the legislature to convene June 4th, for the purpose of enacting a state wide primary for the election of state officers. The action of the Governor is based on a resolution adopted by the state convention held at Minneapolis last week favoring the direct primary. It was hardly hoped that an action of this kind would be taken this year, but the action of the convention prompted the Governor to respond quickly and there is little doubt that the legislature will adopt the measure.

The man who pays his debts and his taxes may be a blessing or a curse to the community. It depends on what else he does. In making this statement it is to be understood that by the word "debt" is meant the ordinary cash obligations which a man incurs in the transaction of his business. There are men who appear to believe that so long as they are not indebted to their neighbors for goods purchased, or the municipality of the state for the last tax levy they have discharged their whole duty and nothing more can be asked of them. But in reality a man's duty to his neighbor is limited only by his power to do his neighbor good, and his duty to the community by his ability to be of service to it. The community in which the prevailing statement is "What do I get out of it?" is one which does not and cannot prosper.

Don'ts For Farmers.

Don't try to please your wife.

Don't appreciate one thing she does.

Don't help care for the children. That is what you got her for.

Don't ever plan your work so as to be able to take her to any entertainment.

Don't be ashamed to read that the majority fo insane women are farmers wives.

Don't get a bucket of water from the cistern when asked. Any one can pump who half tries

Don't fail to invite company for Sunday dinner without letting her know so she can have a day for rest.

Don't fail to ask your wife if she wants you to do all the house work, if she asks you to put some wood in the stove.

Don't wonder that your food has a peculiar flavor for it is seasoned with blasted hopes, and sighs of disappointment.

Don't neglect asking what she has done with all the egg and butter money, for it will more than supply the table, help pay the hired man and get the children books and clothes.

We are in receipt of the sad intelligence of the death of Alex. F. Lattimore, founder of the Eleven Towns and for a short time last fall editor and publisher of the Plummer Pioneer. Death occured at a sanitorium in Florida, Tuesday of last week, from a complication of deseases of about two years standing, and which in spite of all care of the most renowned specialists, claimed its victim. Mr. Lattimore was forced to leave here last fall after a brief period as the head of the Pioneer, to endeavor to seek relief from his illness at the Isle of Pines, near Cuba, but the change did not prove beneficial to him and he returned to Florida a little later where he remained until the time of his death. His remains have been taken to the home of his boyhood at Erie Penn., for burial.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

At Sunbeam, on Saturday, May 18, 1912, in the presence of a few neighbors and friends, Justice John T. Lattimore, of Erie, officiating, Mrs Harriet G. Black, of Raymond, Washington and William G. Hunt, of the Sunbeam, were united in marriage. This last move of Hunt's was a great surprise to his many friends and acquaintances throughout eastern Pennington county but all admit that it is the most sensible move he has made for some time. His living alone so long has gotten the Sunbeam so "touchy" that it has been hard for his professional brethren to keep up friendly relations. Now, however, we expect everything will be different. The bride is an intelligent middle-aged lady with a bright little girl of 13 years of age and has friends and acquaitances in that neighborhood who came from the same locality a year ago. All will join with the Eleven Towns in wishing the Sunbeam family many years of happiness and prosperity. We are requested to give notice that the wedding will be celebrated by an entertainment to be held at Kolski's hall on Saturday evening, June 8th, which all are cordially invited to attend. Refreshments of every nature will be served and a general good time guaranteed all who attend.—Eleven Towns.

MY! IT WAS AWFUL!

There was a big time on the local diamond last Sunday. The old battle ground that has seen some terrific crashes in the past was alive with curious lookers-on who stationed themselves on the ground early to get room on the "bleachers" in anticipation of the appearance of the famous St. Hilaire base ball team, with drums and symbles, to crush the local army of base ball tossers much like Nero and his cohorts crushed the rebels in the middle ages. "Doc" Owens headed the attack and as customary did all the talking for his team. Despite all his entreaties and threats in the latter part of the game for his men to stand-off the slaughter there was nothing to it, and crest-fallen and sick at heart they had to take their medicine. We want to say right here, however, in support of both teams that the game was not the best ever recorded in the local baseball annal, but it was a fast game; that is to say the scores were made with remarkable rapidity. The usual courtesy, of course, as extended to visitors, St. Hilaire was first at bat, and—well the bottom fell right out of the band wagon. Eight scores were recorded and the score-keepers struck right away for higher wages. There was just time enough between hits and runs to put out three men, and then the locals filed in for their turn at bat. There was a repetition of the heavy work with the big stick and when the last man died there was four scores to their credit. St. Hilaire came right back at 'em in the second with the same amount. To quote the darky St. Hilaire "had done played their last tune" and made two scores thereafter and like good Indians bit the dust. The scenes were peaceable for the next two acts, and then the turmoil began. The fourth inning saw four men cross home plate for the home team, and the fifth capped the climax when they wore out the bases by bringing in seven scores. My! it was awful! This even did not satisfy the locals and in the sixth they played tag around the bases some more, and brought in the score of three. The score was 18 to 11 in favor of the Plummer team, and with this the contest closed and the curtain went down for refreshments and a stroll in the lobby. The following is a record of the awful slaughter and the line-ups:

Score by innings:										Total

SUCH A LITTLE QUEEN

Novelized by FREDERICK R. TOOMBS.
From Channing Pollock's Great Play of the Same Name

Copyright, 1909, by Channing Pollock

PROLOGUE OF THE STORY.

Myrza, commander of the Bosnian army, starts a revolution against the kingdoms of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The young queen, Anna Victoria, ruler of the latter country, although beloved by her people, is forced to resort to flight. She is accompanied by the prime minister, Baron Cosaca, court chamberlain and trusty confidant of her late father, the king.

Flying From Herzegovina.

AS the great clock in the west tower of the palace began to strike 11 a dainty little figure stole down the servants' stairway, the "back stairs," of the imperial residence at Mostar.

There was grace in its movements and aristocratic fineness to the finger tips clutching a bandbox and a cloak that to an observer would have seemed incongruous with the threadbare scullery maid's garments she wore. And Anna Victoria of Herzegovina, last of a line of forty kings and queens, was thrilled as never before at the novelty of her situation. How like the heroines of the middle ages was she! Only she was not stealing forth from a paternal roof to plight her troth with the gallant prince of her dreams. She was merely trying to save her life, and that realization, after all, lost the venture much of its romance.

The alert Sophie directed the royal fugitive to the entrance leading to the west gate. Deftly the faithful maid wrapped her mistress in the hooded cloak which concealed her face, and after glancing in all directions through the softly opened door she whispered tremulously:

"No guard is in sight; the carriage is just outside."

Clasping her precious bandbox, the queen, trembling in mingled fear and excitement, darted across the rough stone pavement to the side of the coach, which, without lamps, was a blur in the darkness of a starless night. Her footsteps were heard by the occupant, for as she approached the door swung open and Baron Cosaca dragged her inside unceremoniously and sat her in a corner of the vehicle.

The horses started. Scarcely had the wheels revolved when a sharp voice cut the night air:

"Halt, in the name of the republic!"

The driver pulled up sharply. Baron Cosaca set his jaws grimly. To this long serving court attache the word "republic" had a sinister sound. He drew two revolvers from underneath the cushions of the coach and leaned forward to shield the queen's body with his own. He thrust slightly aside one of the curtains which had been drawn over the coach windows and peered into the blackness without. He saw a disheveled rioter point a pistol at the driver.

The driver, who was none other than Franz Onderzek, the stalwart private armorer of the late King Rudolph, answered:

"Let me go on. I have a pass signed by the proper authorities. I am for the republic, and God curse the queen!"

"Let me see the pass," was the reply.

The armorer jumped to the ground. Stepping close to the peasant, he fumbled in an inner pocket. Then, with a sudden spring, he clutched the throat of the rioter, preventing any outcry, and, giving him the "back heel" with all the dexterity of a trained wrestler, he bore him heavily to the ground.

From the knotted hands of Franz, the armorer, there was no escape. The pistol dropped from the hand of the fallen revolutionist. His eyes bulged outward in horror and pain. His face took on a purplish tinge. His struggles gradually ceased, and a few moments later his lifeless body was thrust under a piece of hedge that bordered the northerly side of the driveway.

Hardly had the armorer gained his seat when the queen, who in gripping terror had heard his struggle, turned the coach door handle and started to step outside.

"Your majesty," cried Baron Cosaca in alarm, "what do you"—

"Oh, I have forgotten something," was her reply.

The baron was rapidly becoming a complete nervous wreck, owing to the prolonged suspense he had endured.

"What can it be?" he snapped. "I have the royal jewels. Is it your crown that you want?"

"No," announced Anna Victoria as she stepped from the carriage. "It is something more important than the crown. It is my canary bird."

Her aged attendant choked in his rage, an emotion which he had never before exhibited in the presence of the queen.

"But if you go back you will surely be caught," he protested.

"No matter. I'd rather die than leave my precious little bird, my Bimbi," she answered as she darted away and toward the palace doorway.

After a few moments of suspense, during which the Baron Cosaca was in a torment of fear, a slight, girlish figure came swiftly from the palace doorway. In one hand she carried a silver birdcage, in which a frightened little yellow inmate fluttered. The other hand clutched a cape, which was drawn over her head.

Suddenly out of the gloom lurched the bulky form of Johan, the paid spy of Merza, who had been instructed to take particular pains to prevent the escape of the queen.

Merza was confident that with the queen in his possession he could dictate whatever terms he desired to the nobles as well as the peasantry of Herzegovina.

Johan had supped late and wined well, as befits the new importance of a one time plowman commissioned by no less a personage than a general to imprison no less a personage than a queen.

"Hold there—stop!" he cried huskily as he drew a pistol from his gaudy sash and aimed at the fleeting figure.

Anna Victoria paused and turned toward the man, who leered suspiciously at her. Then, with a gay, careless laugh, she gathered her cloak closely about her and walked deliberately across the courtyard to the carriage.

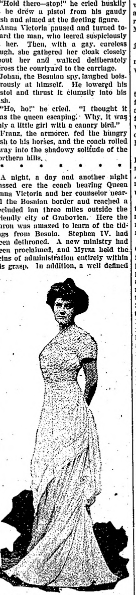
Johan, the Bosnian spy, laughed boisterously at himself. He lowered his pistol and thrust it clumsily into his sash.

"Ho, ho!" he cried. "I thought it was the queen escaping. Why, it was only a little girl with a canary bird."

Franz, the armorer, fed the hungry lash to his horses, and the coach rolled away into the shadowy solitude of the northern hills.

* * * * * * *

A night, a day and another night passed ere the coach bearing Queen Anna Victoria and her counselor neared the Bosnian border and reached a secluded inn three miles outside the friendly city of Grabovica. Here the baron was amazed to learn of the tidings from Bosnia. Stephen IV. had been dethroned. A new ministry had been proclaimed, and Myrza held the reins of administration entirely within his grasp. In addition, a well defined rumor was afloat that the arch foe of Anna Victoria was forming an army of invasion to proceed southward immediately to occupy Herzegovina. Myrza claimed that he had the support of Austria in his coup d'etat, and he proved able to substantiate this boast to such an extent that the powerful princes in both countries considered it an admirable policy to rally to his support.



"Is there no other coast to which we can go?"

To the Queen Anna Victoria and the Baron Cosaca the situation was intensely threatening. Momentarily the web of the craftily spinning human spider in Bosnia's capital was drawing around them. There was no telling at what hour his troops would move across the frontier and block all routes of egress from the northern end of Herzegovina, and withdrawal toward Mostar would, of course, be an act of colossal folly.

Wearied by the hardships she had been forced to endure and pining for the freedom of action she had always enjoyed, the ill starred successor of King Rudolph turned to Cosaca.

"Is there no other coast to which we can go?" she asked.

He shook his head sadly.

"There are many courts where we can go, but there is none where we can stay."

"How strangely you speak!" remarked the queen in bewilderment. "How can and why should such a state of affairs exist? Am I a proscribed being, an outlaw, that no person in authority can give me a place to lay my head?"

The prime minister turned away his head and gazed thoughtfully through the window and down into the rugged valley that led past Grabovica. Finally he spoke:

"Your majesty, you have fallen heir to a land that has long been the battleground of mighty powers. When an emperor wants to exercise his army he sends it down here in the Balkans to steal a state or two. When they have wrung every possible penny they can from us they hand us back to ourselves until by persevering industry we become worth stealing again. All this means that if we go to one court others will rise up and make trouble, fearing that our presence means that we plan an alliance, or, very probably, any country we flee to will hold us in restraint in order to make terms with Myrza for its own benefit, for"—

"But we cannot remain here," interjected the queen.

"No. And after all, in spite of our mistrust of years' standing, I feel that we should go to Austria."

"Austria!" exclaimed Anna Victoria.

"Yes; I have strong personal friends there in court, in spite of political differences. Our persons will be safe, at any rate, and by appealing to my friends in Vienna I am sure that we will obtain justice, in spite of Myrza's claims that Austria is supporting him."

Trieste is a picturesque seaport city. Its important position at the head of navigation in the Adriatic sea gives Austria an influence in southern Europe's maritime affairs that is rarely underestimated by its neighbors.

It was to this ancient mercantile center that the Baron Cosaca brought his royal charge, purposing to proceed directly to Vienna, 367 miles distant, by rail.

It was an April morning. The Baron Cosaca started out at an early hour for the Hotel Schilling, where he had procured quarters for the queen. He purchased railway tickets to Vienna and completed other arrangements necessary for their journey, on which they would start late in the afternoon. Shortly before noon, on his return to the hostelry, facing the Piazza della Borsa, he found her highness attired for a drive, and she informed him that he should accompany her. She brushed aside the baron's protest that they might miss their train.

"I want to drive along the water front," she said. "It is all so new to me—the great wide water, the waves, the ships and the curious men from all parts of the world that sail them. You forget, my dear baron, that the largest body of water I ever saw before our flight to Grabovica was the pool in the fountain of the public park in Mostar."

Overruled, the baron sat beside her as they whirled along the boulevard skirting part of the harbor and leading northwest to the chateau of Miramar, once owned and occupied by the unfortunate Maximilian. It was on their return that occurred the event, due to one of the unaccountable vagaries of a temperamental young woman's mind, that was to change radically the fortunes of the baron and shape in fantastic mold the destiny of Herzegovina's queen. While driving along the Passegio di Sant Andrea and nearing the vast Lloyd company wharfs an ocean liner drew close in, with gay streamers floating on the breeze, the band playing lively airs.

"Where does that ship come from?" asked Anna Victoria.

"From America."

"America!" she cried, clapping her hands enthusiastically. "That is the place. That is where we are to go. I have always wanted to see that great country, where, people say, all the money in the world comes from."

Baron Cosaca was thunderstruck.

"Wh-wh-what, your majesty?" he stammered.

Anna Victoria was insistent.

"Now is the time for me to go there. I will never have such a chance again."

"You can go when you are again queen."

"No; I would not like to go to America as queen. I would be dragged around continually to dinners, receptions and army affairs."

She paused and gazed wistfully to one side, resting her cheek in her dainty hand. Then she said, with a note of infinite sweetness in her voice:

"I want to go as a little girl."

The venerable courtier was not yet convinced.

"But we are going to Vienna, and I already have the tickets," he expostulated.

Anna Victoria turned imperiously upon him.

"I am the queen of Herzegovina," she exclaimed, "and when I issue a command it is not for my prime minister to question. We sail for America on the next steamer leaving Trieste."

A Glance at Current Topics

VASTLY important is the fifteenth international congress on hygiene and demography, which will be held in Washington Sept. 23-28. It will be the first time since the congress was organized sixty years ago to deal with the scourge of cholera in Europe that its sessions have been held in the United States. Arrangements for the coming session were made in response to the direct invitation of the president and congress. The governors of states have appointed committees of representative physicians and other authorities on hygiene to participate in the discussions and to arrange state exhibits in the general health exhibition, which will be part of the program.

Announcement of medical discoveries of worldwide interest, which will rival those of the discovery of antitoxin for diphtheria in 1893 and the Pasteur treatment for hydrophobia in 1889, are expected at this memorable professional assemblage, in which 3,000 distinguished specialists and more than a score of nations will participate. Standardization of hygienic methods throughout the world is one of the aims of the convention.

The congress will be divided into nine sections, each of which will have its own program. The exhibition will be held in a specially constructed building in Potomac park.

"The work of the congress is of special importance to the government and citizens of the United States," said Dr. John S. Fulton, secretary general of the organization. "Problems of the greatest importance to the United States will be discussed and illustrated in the exhibition, such as the cure and prevention of tropical diseases, the inspection of animals and meat products, and federal, state and municipal organization for the preservation of public health."

President Taft, honorary president of the congress, will open the convention.

Harvard's Commencement.

In setting Harvard's commencement for June 20 the faculty inaugurated a new condition. It was decided that the commencement be set for the Thursday preceding the last Wednesday of June. This arrangement takes six days away from the college year. Class day was set for the Tuesday preceding the commencement, affording the seniors an opportunity to hold their annual memorial hall banquet and dance Monday night and also giving time for the Phi Beta Kappa celebration Monday. Wednesday will be given up to class dinners, etc., and the commencement celebration will close Thursday.

The changes are due to recent conflicts in baseball dates with class day and the difficulty experienced in arranging satisfactory date for the boat races.

Harvard and Yale commencement weeks now coincide.

The Olympic Games.

Sporting circles in the United States are eager for the Olympic games which take place in Stockholm the latter part of this month and in which hardy American athletes will compete for honors. It will be the fifth revival of the Olympic games, the biggest international sporting event of the year, and many records will go to smash. James E. Sullivan, the secretary of the American Olympic committee, has been appointed by President Taft as the American Olympic commissioner.

New Senator From Tennessee.

A recent new face in the United States was that of Newell Sanders of Tennessee, who went to Washington to complete the term of the late Robert L. Taylor. Senator Sanders is a product of Indiana, where he was born in 1850. His birthday anniversary is July 12. He was in the limelight while the fight for the governorship was being waged in Tennessee, and which battle Ben W. Hooper won. Governor Hooper sent Mr. Sanders to the national capital. The senator has been chairman of the Tennessee state Republican committee at various times since 1894.

Newell Sanders, Who Is Completing Term of Late Senator Taylor.

Princeton Survivors of '52.

A feature of the commencement at Princeton university this month will be a reunion of its historic class of 1852, twenty of whose members are believed to be living. One of these is James Donald Cameron, who was appointed by President Grant as secretary of war May 22, 1876, serving until elected to the United States senate the following year to fill out the unexpired term of his father, Simon Cameron. Don Cameron was re-elected in 1885 and again in 1890.

In the days of these old time graduates Princeton comprised three buildings—namely, Old Nassau (then called North college), East college and West college. The Rev. James Carnahan was president. He graduated with the class of 1800 and served as president of his alma mater for thirty-one years, or from 1823 until 1854, the longest period for a single individual in the history of the institution.

Return of Minister Wu.

That quaintly interesting statesman from China, Wu Ting Fang, has got a "third term" at any rate. He returns to the United States as the representative of the new republic after having been here twice before as the representative of the empire. Among other things, Wu Ting Fang is famous for his observations on American women. And he is the diplomat so far as they are concerned, the diplomat to a nicety. Minister Wu speaks English fluently and is accounted a scholar of wonderful attainments.

Wu Ting Fang, Who Comes Back as Minister to United States.

The Sane Fourth of July.

With the approach of the pyrotechnical celebration of Independence day, or the Fourth of July, as it is better known, the "safe and sane" idea looms up again. In its favor it can be said that the extraordinary precautionary measures which were taken by many cities last year reduced the casualties to a minimum. Until the public was impressed with the advisability of eliminating many dangerous features attending the use of fireworks the death harvest of the Fourth was appalling. This horror list taught its lesson, and the safe and sane Fourth was the result. The Titanic sea disaster taught another lesson and has brought reforms. It takes something immense to impress the present generation, but when it has been impressed sentiment is so overwhelming that a remedy is forthcoming.

The Navajo Reservation.

The initial movement for the opening of the Navajo reservation to settlement was taken in a memorial which the legislature of New Mexico sent to the president and congress and the officials of Utah and Arizona, which are also involved

The New Mexico memorial set out that the reservation contains about 2,300,000 acres of land. As the tribe numbers fewer than 2,000 members, this would give 1,200 acres apiece to each.

It is declared that the new state has been handicapped because of large reservations of land in it by federal officials on account of forests and minerals. Similar conditions exist in Arizona.

The Navajo reservation is rich in minerals. White men who have been at the government station tell of gold and silver ornaments they have seen among the Navajos and of tales of large deposits that have been worked by the Indians. Some prospectors who have ventured within the reservation limits in search of gold have disappeared, and cowboys have told of seeing Navajos wearing their clothing.

There is also much land within the reservation that might be turned to agriculture. Many opportunities are offered for building dams to irrigate what is now desert country.

The Navajos are regarded by men who know Indians as the proudest tribe in the country. They have kept to themselves in all the years of invasion by the white men, and there have been few intermarriages. They are averse to progress.

Gettysburg Anniversary.

Survivors of the battle of Gettysburg, the greatest of the civil war, are interested in the arrangements to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary next month of that memorable engagement between troops of the north and south. The battle of Gettysburg, which resulted in a Union victory, cost the victors 23,001 in killed, wounded and missing and the Confederates 20,448. General George G. Meade commanded for the Union side and General Robert E. Lee for the Confederates. [22 B]

WORLD'S CURIOUS BOOKS.

Pages of the Smallest Volume Contain Only Nine Lines.

The smallest book in the world was made in Italy. It is not much larger than a man's thumb nail. It is four-tenths of an inch in length, a quarter of an inch in width and contains 208 pages, each with nine lines and from 95 to 100 letters. The text consists of a letter written by the inventor of the pendulum clock to Mme. Christine of Lorraine in 1615.

The next smallest book is an edition of the "Divine Comedy" of Dante. This is something less than an inch wide, with type so small that a microscope is needed to read it.

There is a Hebrew Bible in the Vatican for which in the year 1512 the Jews offered Pope Julius II. its weight in gold, $100,000, but the pope declined the offer.

Even more costly, if not more valuable, is the official history of the war of the rebellion issued by the United States government at a cost estimated to be nearly $3,000,000. Of this amount nearly one-half was employed to defray the cost of printing and binding. The remainder of this huge sum was expended for salaries of workers thereon, rental of buildings and purchase of stationery and supplies, together with money spent in research. It took ten years to complete this work, consisting of 112 volumes.

There is in the Chinese department of the British museum what may correctly be termed the vastest literary work in the world, says Harper's Weekly. This is an encyclopedia of the literature of China from the year 1000 B. C. to 1700 A. D., a period of twenty-eight centuries. The copy in England was purchased for $6,000, being one of the three in existence. Forty years were consumed in the compilation of this stupendous work. The task was ordered by the Emperor Kang Ho, who reigned from 1662 to 1722.

RETRIBUTION.

You harmed me once in another life—
I know not where or when.
I only know that my soul is rife
With the grief of it again.

You broke my heart, and you bruised
my breast.
Oh, say, where was the sphere?
And why is it, why, I can't divest
My soul of the sorrow here?

I loved you then—I remember it—
But you broke me like a toy.
Oh, where in the awful infinite
Did your scorn my peace destroy?

You love me now, but I love you not.
Is it retribution? Say,
Do you suffer now for the wrong
you wrought
In that vague remembered day?
—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NOVEL WEATHER SIGNS.

Your Coffee, Pipe and Cane Will Help You Forecast Weather.

When you go for your holiday don't grumble if you find that your newspaper has misled you as to the weather in your particular district or given you a report too general to be of any use. Instead use your powers of observation and be your own weather prophet.

You need go no farther than your own breakfast table to start with, says London Answers. Watch your cup of coffee. When the bubbles collect in the center of the cup and form a "kiss" you can plan that picnic with confidence. When they rush to the side of the cup you had better go carefully. Rain is not absolutely certain, but it is very likely. Of course it is the condition of the atmosphere that affects the tiny bubbles.

Your after breakfast pipe will confirm whatever opinion you have formed from your coffee. If you use wax matches you will find that they are specially difficult to ignite. You may succeed the first time, but by striking half a dozen in succession on a morning when rain is to be expected you will use six matches for two flares.

You will find further weather prophets waiting for you in the hall, anxious to tell you the news. Pick up your walking stick. If it is hard and dry, take it with you even if the sky is clouded, but if the handle is moist drop it and take your umbrella. If fifteen minutes after rubbing the handle with a dry cloth the moisture reappears you had better take your mackintosh as well, for you are in for a "soaker."

USES OF THE SUNFLOWER.

State Emblem of Kansas Nourishes Man and Beast.

There are more than forty different species of sunflower scattered from New England to the gulf of Mexico and from ocean to ocean. Generally the plant is not esteemed, but it has many valuable uses.

Many of our Indians make bread of the seeds. It is cultivated in the south of Europe sometimes as a field crop, the seeds being used as food for cattle and poultry and also for making oil of a quality little inferior to olive oil. It is burned in lamps and used in the manufacture of soap.

Meal and bread are said to be got from the seeds in Portugal, and these, roasted, are often substituted for coffee. The seeds are also used, like almonds, for making soothing emulsions and in some parts of the old world are boiled and fed to infants. The leaves are good fodder for cattle. The stems serve for fuel and contain much potash.—Harper's Weekly.

THE OLDEST BIBLE

Coptic Papyrus Shows Christianity's Early Spread In Egypt.

EARLIER DOCUMENT COPIED.

Find Indicates That St. Anthony Heard the Scriptures Read In His Native Tongue—Codex Bears Many Signs of Antiquity.

Revealing in a most remarkable manner the early spread of Christianity in Egypt, an ancient Coptic manuscript, probably the oldest in existence, has been printed by the British museum. This is one of the important finds of recent excavations in Egypt, as the papyrus contains the text of most of the book of Deuteronomy, the whole of Jonah and nearly all the Acts of the Apostles and the epistles.

Commenting on the notable discovery, the London Times said:

"The new codex proves beyond doubt that copies of an Egyptian—that is to say, Coptic—translation of some books of the Testament were in use among Egyptian Christians in the early portion of the fourth century. Therefore the origin of the version itself cannot be placed later than the third century.

"There is, therefore, every reason for believing that St. Anthony heard the Scriptures read in his native tongue and that the earliest monks in the deserts of the Red sea and upper Egypt learned to repeat the Psalms and whole books of the Bible by heart from Coptic and not Greek manuscripts.

"The evidence afforded by this papyrus confirms the early monastic traditions concerning the spread of Christianity in Egypt. The codex is the oldest known copy of any translation of any considerable portion of the Greek Bible. Indeed, it is probably as early as any copy now in existence of any substantial part of the Bible."

As to its general character the Times articles continued:

"Coming to perhaps the most important section of the book—namely, the Acts of the Apostles, we find that, although it is written in a good hand, it is quite clear that it is a copy from a pre-existing document. The mistakes in spelling both Greek and Coptic words are numerous, and there are many blunders in the writing, which could only be made by a very careless copyist or by one who was copying from an old or partly obliterated text. Omissions of words and whole lines are frequent. Only rarely are there signs that the copyist was conscious of the mistakes he had made.

"The general appearance of the codex suggested that it was carried about by its owner either wrapped in a cloth or in a rough leather wallet.

"Throughout the book there are no decorated margins and no ornamental initials, facts which point to its great antiquity. There is one column of writing to a page, but the number of lines varies from twenty-nine to thirty-eight. All three texts are written in one hand."

FIRST CHILD THE WEAKER.

Not as Efficient Mentally and Physically as Those Born Later.

Experiments completed in London brought out the curious fact that the first two children born in a family are not as bright and strong and efficient, either mentally or physically, as those born later. This discovery means much for the people of the United States, where the tendency in recent years has been to keep down the size of families.

If the size of families in this country does not show a marked increase and the cost of living does not go down our race is bound to deteriorate both mentally and physically, says the New York American. The experiments referred to showed that most of the defects, such as insanity, tuberculosis, criminality and such things, in the average family are possessed by the first and second born child.

The size of families in England has shown a decided decrease, and this is attributed to the passage of stringent child labor laws a generation or so ago. These laws kept young children from being sent to work in factories. The working people who depended on the earnings of these children could not afford to maintain the large families formerly so common, and there was in consequence a falling off in the birth rate.

When the decrease in families became an economic necessity for the poorer classes there followed an increase in the number of cases of tuberculosis, crime, insanity and albinism. This discovery puts an end to the old theory on which the law of primogeniture is based—that the firstborn is the one most likely to possess the desirable family qualities which ought to be conserved.

In the Line of Duty.

"You are my wife's social secretary?" he asks of the beauteous creature who is seated at the small desk in the study.

"Yes, sir," she smiles. "I am supposed to take Mrs. Blirrup's place in as many social details as possible."

"Well—er—she doesn't seem to be coming downstairs this morning, and it has always been her custom to kiss me goodby when I start for the office."—Judge.

A doctor's report would properly come under the head of the news of the week.

PASTURE CLOVER.

Animals of All Sorts Thrive on Sweet Variety.

SOME OF ITS ADVANTAGES.

Grows on and Builds Up Poor Soils, Survives Midsummer Drought and Produces Early and Late Pasturage. Look Out For Tendency to Bloat.

Sweet clover makes excellent pasture for horses, sheep, cattle, hogs and chickens, says a United States department of agriculture bulletin. Probably the easiest way to create an appetite for the plant is to commence pasturing the stock on it very early in the spring before other green feed has started. A sufficient number of animals should be kept on it to keep it eaten down close, so that at all times there will be an abundance of fresh shoots for grazing purposes. An acre of sweet clover pasture will ordinarily support twenty shotes, in addition to furnishing a light cutting of hay. For the best growth of the hogs, however, a pound of grain per hundredweight of the stock per day should be given. When pastured on the first season's growth of sweet clover it is well to place rings in the hogs' noses to prevent them from digging up the roots of the young plants.

Stock when pastured upon sweet clover makes gains which compare very favorably with those obtained from either alfalfa or red clover. The advantage which sweet clover has over the crops just mentioned is that it will grow on some soils too poor in humus for the successful production of either alfalfa or red clover. A few cases of bloating of cattle have been noted when they were pastured on sweet clover fields, but these cases are much less frequent than on red clover or alfalfa fields. The best method of avoiding the slight tendency to bloat is to refrain from turning the stock on the sweet clover when it is wet with dew or rain or when the animals are unusually hungry for green feed. Most of the grazing on sweet clover is confined to regular pastures, but in an increasing number of localities roadside grazing is becoming common. In several sections sheep are reported to have obtained valuable sustenance from grazing on sweet clover, especially during droughts when the ordinary pastures were dried up. It is doubtful whether sweet clover will ever do more than supplement other pastures. Its chief advantages are its ability to grow on and build up poor soils, to survive midsummer droughts and to produce early and late pasturage.

Cattle often refuse to eat it at first on account of its bitter taste and strong odor, but when once induced to eat it by sprinkling it with brine or by other means they apparently relish it as much as any other forage, and many animals show a preference for it.

HOGS PASTURING ON SWEET CLOVER IN IOWA.

FARMING WITH BRAINS.

Lend your crops to your live stock and see what a big interest they will pay and how promptly they pay it.

The farmer who skins his land will get skinned himself in the end sure.

The good farmer looks around his neighborhood and learns by what others are doing. The best farmer looks around the country through the columns of an up to date farm paper and learns a lot more.

Nut trees in the fence corners and along the streams of farms not only add to the beauty of the place, but yield a crop that is annually becoming more important in the markets.

If your seed appears to be mixed or falling off in yield it will pay you to get pure bred seed of the best strain adapted to your soil and climate. If you have any doubt as to what varieties to plant write the state experiment station and ask which will do best in your soil and climate.

Too many people buy too large farms. Almost any one can make poor crops on large areas, but it takes brains to make good crops on small areas. There is a market for brains on the farm, as elsewhere. The farmer who cannot think and will not learn should get a job in town.

APPLICATION OF FERTILIZER.

Pokes Fun at Habit of Supplying Plant Food by Spoonful.

On all great subjects there is diversity of opinion; therefore it is not remarkable that soil tillers vary in their ideas regarding the application of materials used to preserve the soil's fertility. The greater number in this country, because of convenience and apparent economy, have become addicted to the peculiar habit of putting a teaspoonful or more of fertilizer in a hill or placing a delicate application in a furrow. Some back this up by giving another application to their growing plants by spreading on the surface, as a rule, close to the plant. This is hardly in line with common sense, and in dry seasons particularly it has proved time and time again an absolute waste of money.

We have proved conclusively by yearly experiments running over a goodly number of years that the feeder rootlets of practically all plants, excepting such things as beets, parsnips, carrots and others of the taprooted family, practically cover every square inch of the acre on which they are growing with their food supplying rootlets, says the Long Island Agronomist.

We rather upset a famous potato grower who contended that potatoes should be planted four feet apart because by so doing the roots of one row went only to the middle of the open space and did not "rob" food from the rows on either side. Time and time again we followed without difficulty, roots running not only to the next row, but through, on and to the row beyond, a number of rootlets measuring nine and one-half feet. It is very evident that the potato, therefore, is not assisted to any great degree by a little dab of fertilizer underneath its stalk, for its roots are hunting food many feet away from the high priced material calculated to help it out. Manure is frequently handled in practically the same way, the results being of equal small value, for again the roots which need the nourishment which manure gives, the moisture which manure holds, are doing business elsewhere and mainly in the territory which lacks either totally or in part the moisture holding ability and decaying vegetable matter contained in the manure. The dry season proves this to be the fact most conclusively.

Fields that have had the extremely small quantity of ten tons of manure to the acre hold the moisture through the driest of seasons, and good crops are the result.

Low Windows Best For Hens.

Put the windows in the poultry house low down to the floor so that the hens will get the benefit of the light and sunshine when scratching for their feed. The trouble with windows set high up is that they let the sunshine in on the perches when the hens are on the floor scratching and when they are on the roost the sun doesn't shine. —Farm Journal.

FARM CHILDREN INTERESTED.

Club Movement For Better Farming Reaches Out For Both Boys and Girls.

Figures gathered by Thomas A. Early, special agent for the federal department of agriculture in charge of the boys' corn clubs in twenty-seven counties near Memphis, Tenn., show that much good is being done in behalf of agriculture by the movement to interest farm children in growing things, says the New York Times.

In the clubs under Mr. Early's jurisdiction 2,400 boys have been enrolled and have taken lessons in the scientific production of corn, spurred on by financial assistance and the offer of prizes that are worth getting, both for the value and the honor. In addition to the government and state funds provided for this purpose, $6,811 was raised by business men and officials of the counties concerned.

The fifteen high prize winners on corn in this territory last year averaged a net profit of $86.46 an acre. Bernie Thomas of Lake Cormorant, Miss., showed a net profit of $146.50 on an acre, and Norman Smith of Covington, Tenn., was next with $132.96. In cotton in Mississippi Fred McCracken of Water Valley made $70 on an acre. The corn growers will turn their attention to cotton next and will then go on to other crops.

Girls' clubs are now being organized for training in gardening, chicken raising and homekeeping.

REAL JUDGES OF MEN RARE.

The living face in its relation to the real character might be likened to an expert juggler manipulating the various articles of his mystic trade. Except in moments of reverie or abstraction, the expression is constantly changing. It scarcely remains the same for five consecutive seconds. It is a case of "now you see me and now you don't," and it is extremely difficult to determine when you may be catching a glimpse of the real character and when the fleeting expression may be a misleading token, involuntary, perhaps, on the part of the individual, but cunningly calculated by nature to deceive the eye of the spectator.

Hence the genuine ability to "read character" in facial expression is much rarer than is commonly supposed, says the Providence Journal. It is not only a fine art, but an intricate one. Most persons who fancy that they possess it in some degree are really proceeding upon a sort of blind instinct, which is likely to be deceived entirely by superficial indications. The accurate judges of men are extremely scarce. Their gift is one which should invariably lead them to success if they are blessed with half an opportunity.

The appraisal of character by photographic evidence may be as erroneous as that which is based on the living face, but at least the photograph gives opportunity for continuous study and shows none of those shifting moods which are sure to confuse the judgment. The camera catches its subject as he or she may appear at the given moment. It may be an inopportune moment, the camera may be a poor one, there may be a fault in the plate or the photographer may lack skill, but something of the true soul and character of the subject is bound to appear on the surface and to stand revealed to all who see it.

The truth may be somewhat qualified by the fact that the average person in front of a camera is invariably more or less self conscious, but in general effect the dominant qualities are at least partially revealed, so that in almost any photographic portrait one may see strength of character, vanity, self esteem, nobility, meanness, fussiness, unscrupulousness or what not, as the case may be.

An Informer's Reward For Revealing a Conspiracy

By CHAPMAN R. GUILD

In one of the South American republics, where revolutions are the rule rather than the exception, the president sat behind a mahogany desk. Before him stood a man with a hook nose, glittering black eyes and a stooping figure.

"Well," said the president, "tell me about this conspiracy."

"First, your excellency, I desire to come to some agreement. I wish to be surprised with the rest, tried with the rest and executed with the rest."

"Executed!"

"Yes. I must go through all the forms or they will suspect I have betrayed them."

"I understand. Go on."

"The plan is to ask an interview with you in order to submit certain proposed reforms—reforms that are impracticable. From amicable discussion they will come to angry words, and then they will rush upon you and murder you."

The president winced. The plan was not unlike that by which he had removed his predecessor.

"Then?"

"Then Jose Burtado will be proclaimed president."

"Burtado?"

"Yes; Burtado."

"And what are you expecting to receive for this revelation?"

"I leave that to your excellency."

"Very well. I will take care of you."

A week later a deputation of citizens waited on the president to propose certain reforms. Among them was the spy. They were admitted to the presence of his excellency, who sat behind the very desk at which he had received the information of the intention of the conspirators. They began in a very respectful tone to urge their plans, and the president quietly showed them why they were impracticable, whereupon they pretended to be unconvinced and clamored for their acceptance. The din growing apace, the president touched a bell on his desk, and several doors communicating with the room opened, and in a second it was full of armed men.

The president had not stipulated with the informer for evidence. Might was right in the republic, and, being himself convinced of the guilt of the deputation, he ordered them out to be shot without even a pretense to a trial. But before the execution he directed that the informer be conducted to his presence.

"Your reward," he said, "will have to be paid to your heirs. Will you name them?"

"But, your excellency, why not pay it to me?"

"You especially stipulated that you were to be shot with the rest."

"But," paling, "this was to be merely a pretense."

"Then why did you not say so?"

"I supposed your excellency understood."

"Nothing is understood with an informer, a spy. Had I been obliged to grant your terms I doubt if I should have availed myself of your information."

"Have I not saved you from murder?"

"Yes, and for gain. The others acted partly for what they considered the welfare of the republic. Come, name the person or persons to whom the reward of your perfidy shall be paid."

"I have no heirs. I implore you"—

"Guard!" called the president, and the man was taken away.

At sunrise the next morning the conspirators were led out into the jailyard and placed with their backs against a wall. They stood ten feet apart, and opposite each man was a soldier with a rifle. The signals were given to aim and to fire. A report came from every gun. Some of the conspirators stood as erect as before the fire; some swayed, but recovered themselves without falling, and one, the spy, fell on his face. He was carried away. Then the officer in command read a communication from the president, stating that they had been punished—punished with blank cartridges—and what they had endured without flinching showed them to be brave men. If they would hereafter support the republic under his administration, he would be glad; if not, they were welcome to seek homes in other lands.

Every one of those who had manfully stood the terrible test gave in his adherence to the existing government.

When the spy recovered from the shock of fright he was conducted to the president.

"There," said the executive, pointing to a bag standing on his desk, "is $10,000 in gold. Since you have not died you may appropriate it yourself. It is the reward of your treachery. If you are found within the limits of the republic tomorrow, a ball cartridge will finish your career."

The conspirators knew well that one of their number had given up their plot and rightly judged that he was the coward of their ring. When, therefore, they saw the spy fall after the mock execution they decided that he was the Judas. From the moment they were at liberty they kept a watch on his movements, and when he started to leave the republic one of their number followed him.

The next day the chief of the conspiracy called upon the president and deposited on his desk a bag of gold.

"We respect your excellency," he said, "for keeping faith even with an informer, but since your magnanimous treatment of us we do not care to see you robbed. The man to whom you gave that bag will not need it. I have the honor, senor, to bid you good morning."

SPRING HOUSECLEANING.

A Mere Man Respectfully Suggests That the Method Be Changed.

We have no desire to pose as one criticising another's method of work. Our notion is that a man who has spent his life running a hotel knows how to do it better than we do, who patronize hotels only for toothpicks, matches and writing paper. Our motto is, "Shoemaker, mind your own business!" and we adhere strictly to it. Ordinarily we let the lady who runs our house alone. If we think she is making a bed backward or putting too much baking powder in the biscuits we say nothing. Bedmaking and cooking are her profession; ours is paying the bills.

But with housecleaning time here we pause a moment to suggest that there is no overwhelming anxiety on the part of mere man to have a house cleaned from cellar to dome in a single day. Admitting that we know very little about housecleaning as an art, we declare that it seems unnecessary to rip up every room in the house as a starter. We cannot see why it is necessary to take the rug off the back bedroom floor in order to get all the dust off the parlor pictures. We may be wrong, but it strikes us as curious that she cannot clean behind the sofa in the den unless the downstairs hall is barricaded with the dining room furniture. Why it is necessary to dump everything out of the front bedroom in order to clean the kitchen windows has never been made clear to us.

We realize that we are treading on dangerous ground. But surely if there ever was anything in need of a little system it is spring housecleaning.—Detroit Free Press.

STORMS OF THE NORTH SEA.

Many Fishermen Lost Yearly In These Dangerous Waters.

Dangerous as are some points along the Atlantic coast, there is nowhere a spot where storms wreak such havoc as along the coast of the North sea, said Frederick S. Womberg of Hamburg, according to the Washington Post.

In the semitropical waters of the Florida coast, off Hatteras, and along the upper New England coast your storms often rage with extreme severity, but off your coast one does not find the thousands of small fishing vessels that swarm the waters of the North sea.

The Doggerbank, one of the famous fishing grounds of Europe, is perhaps the best known, but good fishing prevails all along the coast. Off Holland and Belgium, from the decks of any steamer, the sails of these picturesque little boats may be counted by the thousands, each vessel manned by a crew of from five to eight men.

Regardless of the weather, these boats venture far out at sea, taking their chances with the elements. If storms overtake them these tiny craft have no recourse but to fight the elements as best they can. If inshore they stand their chances of being driven aground. Every big storm claims its victims, and doubtless the toll of death will continue so long as men are compelled to earn a livelihood in this fashion."

TWENTY-ONE YEARS BUILDING

Kansas Man Has Been Working That Long Erecting a Mill.

For years there has stood at Holsington, Kan., and still stands, a flour mill in which never a wheel has turned. Twenty-one years ago J. M. Rearick started building this mill. Today, at the age of eighty-three, he is still working on it, and he says he hopes to have the mill finally completed ready to grind this year's wheat crop into flour.

The building is completed, and all that is necessary to put the mill in working order is part of the flourmaking equipment. Every year for a score of years past Mr. Rearick has "hoped to have the mill ready for next year's crop," but something has always happened, says the Kansas City Journal.

Every stick of timber, every perch of stone, every bit of the mill machinery, has been put in by Mr. Rearick, alone and single handed. He has lived in Barton county for thirty-five years. He began building his Holsington mill soon after the town was laid out, and he has been working on it ever since.

TARTAR TORTURE.

Tagieff, Russian Monster, Paid For Deed of Reckless Rage.

OVERESTIMATED HIS POWER.

Jealous Old Man Relied Upon Money and Power to Save Him—Victim Lured to Palace—Women Forced to See Mutilated Body.

All Caucasus, southern Russia, was stirred to its depths when it became known that Tagieff, the king of Bacon's exchange, was to be put on trial on a charge of attempted murder. No case in recent years created such a sensation in Russian social, political and commercial circles.

Gadji Leinal Abdin Tagieff half a century ago was an unskilled laborer and porter, whose earnings were barely sufficient to put food in his mouth and clothes on his back. But he had what Americans call a "hunch," and little by little he acquired a large tract of land around Bacon for almost nothing, and later it proved to be rich in oil. Tagieff made an enormous fortune and became owner of an entire commercial navy and many manufacturing industries, besides banks, newspapers and theaters.

He bought a magnificent palace and surrounded himself with every luxury. He spent millions on improvements of various kinds to make his palace one of the most gorgeous in the world and millions more for works of art until today his palace is a veritable museum of costly paintings and statues, representing the best work of modern and ancient masters.

Some time ago he erected a huge prison, complete in every particular and according to his own ideas, and presented it to the Russian government.

His political power and influence soon became so great that he was called "the second viceroy of Caucasus," and the local authorities preferred the employment of Tagieff to the service of the government. M. Bykoff, governor of Tiflis, resigned to become his chief legal adviser.

Tagieff was seventy years old, but he possessed a rugged constitution that withstood the encroachments of age in a marvelous way. Several years ago he married a beautiful girl, aged only fifteen years. His family opposed the marriage in part because the girl was the sister of the wife of Tagieff's eldest son and partly because they feared that her charms would enslave him to such a degree that he would leave her his entire fortune at his death. They were married with all the pomp and magnificence of royalty.

M. Bebutoff was a young engineer in Tagieff's employ. It wasn't long before his good looks and polished manners attracted the attention of the girl bride.

Tagieff watched his beautiful wife grow more and more fascinated with Bebutoff, and jealous rage burned in his breast.

Tagieff could have discharged Bebutoff from his employ and in a measure ruined his career, but the enraged husband would not have been satisfied with such a petty revenge. One day Bebutoff received a special invitation to go to the palace. On his arrival he was conducted into a room where Tagieff, a Persian prince of the blood and two or three officers of the army were awaiting him. No sooner had he crossed the threshold than they leaped upon him, knocked him down and bound and gagged him. Then they subjected him to peculiarly Asiatic torture. First they beat him with a heavy whip, the thongs of which were knotted at the ends and tipped with bits of steel. Bebutoff's back was crisscrossed with stroke after stroke of the knout, and he writhed in his bonds until he became unconscious. They revived him by the application of cold water and then mutilated his face in a horrible fashion, pricking it with redhot needles until his face looked like a sieve. Next his body was burned to a crisp in a dozen places with flaming candles.

But the climax of the bloodthirsty Tartar's scheme of vengeance was yet to come. Bebutoff's wife was lured to the palace, and then Tagieff forced his own wife to accompany her to the room where Bebutoff lay half dead upon the floor. The two women fainted at the terrible spectacle, and Tagieff's revenge was at last complete.

Powerful and rich as he was, Tagieff did not expect and indeed could hardly imagine that any one would ever have the courage to bring him to trial. Nevertheless, after Bebutoff had been in bed several months, recovering from his soul racking ordeal, he engaged lawyers to prosecute his former employer for attempted murder. As a result Tagieff was sentenced to spend two and a half years of his life in the prison that he had built himself and presented to the government.

Before and After.

She kissed a rose—a sweet red rose—
And dropped it to the floor;
He picked it up and pressed his lips
Where hers had been before.
"And may I keep it," he implored,
"To treasure all through life?"

She said he might, and later on
He won her for his wife.
She weeps today who kissed the rose—
'Twas seven years ago—
Last night she asked him where it was;
He said he didn't know.

The Minneapolis Tribune reserves a space on its editorial page in which it runs a few clippings from the rural weeklies, under the caption of "Minnesota Siftings", and which as far as we can see is printed more as a source of ridicule to the country press than for its news value. Such items as are purely of a local character and what we suppose seems ridiculous to the mut-head that gets up the "siftings" column are cut out of the papers from the smaller localities of the state and reprinted in the Tribune. The rural weeklies sometimes have to make use of matter in order to fill up space that would appear somewhat out of place in the columns of a big daily, but it is news to our readers and we are placed under the same obligations as the larger papers in the matter of giving our readers what is reasonably demanded of us. It is easy enough for the city lunch counter "fiends" to titter about some of the news items in the country press, but we are willing to bet our last dollar against a doughnut that if they were assigned to grinding out news on a small sheet they would last about as long as a snow ball in Hades.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

The increase of butter production of the state is one of the things which have interested the men who have the advance of the state at heart. Each year the land that provides for the dairy cow is growing richer while the farms that are devoted exclusively to growing and marketing grain in its raw state are grwing poorer and less productive. The reason is not hard to discover for it is a known fact that with every ton of corn sold of the farm bringing from $18 to $20 goes $5.50 worth of fertility; a ton of wheat worth $35 removes $7.50 worth of fertility; a ton of beef worth at highest prices from $150 to $200 takes with it about $17 worth of richness, while a ton of butter worth today on the market of the world $600 takes with it only 49 cents worth of fertilizing ingredients, and by providing those nitrogenous foods which are necessary for greatest butter production—alfalfa, cow peas, soy beans fed in connection with ensilage—returns to the land with many times this amount.

Corn Worth More Now.

—o—

They tell a story in Kansas which is not without its application in Minnesota. Twenty years ago or so corn was so plentiful that it was used for fuel in many places in the middle west. It could not be sold for ten cents a bushel. In those days a Kansas farmer bought a wagon for $60 and paid for it in corn. He came back after another the other day and was asked $75 for as good a wagon as he got before. When the farmer demured to the price, the dealer offered to give it to him for 600 bushels of corn as he did in 1894.

In addition to the wagon he also offered a carriage, a self binder, a range and all the kitchen utensils his wife could use. Corn was then worth 65 cents a bushel, and the farmer was offered $390 worth of machinery for the same amount of corn which in 1894 bought only a wagon. He paid cash for the wagon.

When comparison is made with the prices of farm products at one time and another, it is usually seen that the farmer is getting as much as any one.

Memorial Day.

—o—

Yesterday was Memorial day. Outside of the closing of the post office and the bank there was no exercises of any kind provided for. As a tribute to the noble dead and alive Governor Eberhart has issued the following beautiful proclamation:

A Proclamation:

The Grand Army of the dead continues to grow. The Grand Army of the living is in the aftermath. The evening shadows of life are falling about them. They are as brave in confronting the great enemy of mankind that has never been vanquished as they were on the battlefield that saved the nation. Love, reverence and patriotism demand that we obey our more than willing hearts and concentrate to their memory May 30, when flowers by land and sea will be the testimonials of a grateful people Therefore, I, Adolph O. Eberhart, governor of the state of Minnesota, so issue this proclamation and earnestly urge the observance of Thursday, May 30, 1912, as Decoration and Memorial day.

GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

States His Views to Special Session of Minnesota Legislature.

St. Paul.—Governor A. O. Eberhart sent the following to the special session of the Minnesota legislature:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Minnesota:

You have been convened in extraordinary session at this time for the purpose of enacting into law three measures demanded by the people of this state, to-wit:

1. A statewide direct primary law for the nomination of all elective officials, national and state.

2. A stringent and effective corrupt practices act, applicable to both the nomination and election of all public officials.

3. A reapportionment of the legislative districts as required by and in accordance with the constitution of the state.

These three measures were fully considered by you at your last session and you are therefore thoroughly familiar with the subject matter of each. Hence no elaborate or detailed discussion of them is required of me at this time, but a brief reference to each measure is due and proper.

Direct Primary Law.

Minnesota has been a pioneer in the enactment of direct primary legislation. The first step was taken in 1899, when a direct primary law was enacted for Hennepin county.

At the following session—1901—this law was amended in some particulars, extended to the whole state and included all positions except state officers and certain minor officials. Since that date it has governed our political action in making party nominations for office.

Tried by more than ten years of actual experience in this state, the direct primary law has so established itself in the judgment and convictions of the people that no aspirant for public favor would have the hardihood to propose its repeal. It simply substitutes the direct action of the people themselves for the system of delegated authority exemplified in conventions. It makes public officials directly responsible to the people and it makes the people directly responsible for the selection of their representatives. It eliminates the domination of special interests by placing the people—who are the source of all political power—in direct control.

The insistent demand of the people for the right of direct and unhindered participation in all matters of government is attested by their unswerving support of the existing direct primary law and by the passage at your last session of a law for the direct nomination and practically direct election of United States senators. The recent action of the congress of the United States in proposing an amendment to the federal constitution providing for the election of United States senators directly by the people is a further proof of the settled purpose of the people to exercise their political power directly and not through representative bodies.

Under the constitution, you are the lawmaking power of this state, and it is primarily your right and duty to determine what the law shall be, and in reaching that determination it is for you to consider the various details of the proposed legislation. Whether or not the direct primary law shall be non-partisan, what provisions it shall contain as to second choice, just how it shall be applied to the selection of delegates to national conventions and many other questions of detail which will arise in the consideration of this measure, are for you to primarily determine, and it is not my purpose to suggest any particular plan of direct primary, but confidently relying on your wisdom and patriotism, I earnestly recommend the prompt passage of a law providing for the nomination of all public officials by a direct vote of the people.

Corrupt Practices Law.

To pass a direct primary law without enacting a stringent and effective corrupt practices act would be to merely adopt the nomenclature of reform and reject the reform itself. The present law on the subject—passed over seventeen years ago—has, according to common report and belief, been "more honored in the breach than observance," and should be supplemented by a law that absolutely eliminates the improper use of money in conducting campaigns for nomination and election.

Legislative Reapportionment.

Section 23, Article IV, of the Constitution of the state, provides: "The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of this state in the year 1865 and every tenth year thereafter. At their first session after each enumeration so made and also at their first session after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall have the power to prescribe the bounds of congressional, senatorial and representative districts, and to apportion anew the senators and representatives among the several districts, according to the provisions of Section 2 of this Article."

Section 2, Article IV, provides: "The number of members who compose the senate and house of representatives shall be prescribed by law, but the representation in the senate shall never exceed one member for every 5,000 inhabitants, and in the house of representatives one member for every two thousand inhabitants. The representation in both houses shall be apportioned equally throughout the different sections of the state, in proportion to the population thereof, exclusive of Indians not taxable under the provisions of law."

The last legislative apportionment was made in 1897, over fifteen years ago, and it is a matter of common knowledge that representation in our legislature today is grossly unequal under the constitutional provisions just quoted.

In the last campaign all political parties in their platforms distinctly pledged the people a legislative reapportionment as required by the constitution. You were unable to pass a legislative reapportionment at the last session, but in this special session, with but few subjects pressing for your consideration, failure to pass a legislative reapportionment in accordance with the constitution would be a deliberate defiance of the right of the people to govern themselves. To deny the people equal representation in the lawmaking branch of their government is to strike down the fundamental principle of popular government by subjecting the majority to the rule of the minority.

I earnestly recommend the early passage of a legislative reapportionment according to the constitution.

Direct Election of United States Senators.

The legislature of Minnesota has repeatedly memorialized the congress to provide for the direct election of United States senators, and congress has at last proposed such an amendment. I herewith transmit this amendment for your consideration and recommend its immediate ratification.

Federal Income Tax.

The last legislature failed to ratify the proposed amendment to the United States constitution providing for a federal income tax, and I herewith again transmit this proposed amendment for your consideration and recommend its ratification.

Congressional Reapportionment.

Since your adjournment congress has assigned ten members of the national house of representatives to the state of Minnesota, instead of nine, as at present. This necessitates the redistricting of the state into ten congressional districts, and there is no valid reason why this session should not provide for such congressional reapportionment.

A. O. EBERHART,
Governor of Minnesota.

Reapportionment, the rock upon which state administration and legislature split last session, is the issue between house and senate in the special session of the legislature which, convenes at 11 o'clock this morning. A deadlock between the two house: is threatened.

Effort on the part of the senators to sign up a majority of members pledged to consider nothing but the passage of a direct primary law and a corrupt practices act, succeeded, and the quiet announcement was given out that the senate was prepared to "stand pat." Before doing so, an alliance with the Democrats was formed.

On the other hand, the house members gathered and decided upon a course of action in direct opposition to the position of the senators. They drew a circle around six things for which they propose to stand.

These measures are:

State-wide primary law.

Corrupt practices act.

Federal income tax amendment.

Federal amendment relative to election of United States senators.

Increase in the gross earnings tax for railroads.

Reapportionment.

Insistence by the house members upon this program means a deadlock between house and senate, which may become a test of endurance. It was decided by the house members that they would agree upon a program relative to the state-wide primary, the corrupt practices act and the two federal amendments to the constitution, but gross earnings and reapportionment might come from the floor if there should develop a desire to introduce them, and there is no doubt but such a desire exists.

Are We To Celebrate ?

"To be or not to be" is the question that will be decided by the commercial club at a special meeting called for 8 o'clock this evening, and the question at issue is wheather or not Plummer will celebrate the grand and glorious Fourth. It is about three years since Plummer had a celebration and it has been suggested that it would be a good idea to make the Eagle scream once more. Everyone should join in the effort of having a celebration this year and to try to make it bigger and a better event than any had before.

To Play Brooks Sunday

The Plummer base ball team has scheduled a game with the Brooks aggrigation on the local diamond for next Sunday. Brooks has the team that snatched a victory from the locals by a hair's breath a couple of weeks ago and the local boys intend to get revenge this time or else they will know the full reason why. However, who may be the victors it is a safe bet that the event will be an interesting one as the teams are very evenly matched. Manager Rice informs us that he has tried at various times to arrange a game with the Okl e aggrigation but up to the present time he recived no answer to his challenge.

The St. Hilaire base ball team and the "Red Sox" of Red Lake Falls are reported as having played a fast game at the former place last Sunday. After a closely contested game St. Hilaire landed the game by a score of [illegible] [illegible] 8th inning on account of [illegible].

Contract Is Let

Bids for the errection of the proposed new bank building were recived at the bank last Thursday and the most favorable bid was that presented by A. S. Randolph, of Detroit, who was awarded the contract. Work of excavation for the basement was commenced yesterday, and the other supplies will arrive here in a short time so to carry on the work. The bank building will be completed about the middle of August and expects to be ready for occupancy by the first of September. Mr. Randolph is the man that erected the bank building at Brooks and has the erection of many other fine structures to his credit.

Man Coughs & Breaks Ribs

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few teaspoonsful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure it is a God-send to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia, Mo. "for I believe I would have consumption today if I had not used this great remedy." It's guaranteed to satisfy; and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all druggists.

DR. CLARK PASSES AWAY

Summons Came Shortly After 6 O'clock Sunday Evening

Residents of this section received a severe shock last Sunday evening on receiving the sad news of the death of Dr. Robt. Clark, which occurred here a few minutes after 6 o'clock Sunday evening. Just at what time the summons came is not known, but on returning to the office a few minutes after six Dr. Hanson found that life was extinct. The Doctor had been at the office of Dr. Hanson since coming down from Thief River Falls last Friday morning. Coroner Joseph Belaire of Red Lake Falls was summoned and in company with Dr. Lemieux of that place, came over to hold a post mortem examination and pronounced death due to chronic alcoholism. Relatives of the deceased were notified and on Monday evening Charles P. Clark, of St. Paul, a brother of the deceased arrived here and had the remains brought to the home of the parents at Elysian, Minn., that evening, where interment will take place.

Dr. Clark was an old resident of Plummer, having taken up the practice of medicine here about six years ago. About two months ago he desired to seek a new location and was just preparing his new quarters at Thief River Falls when he was stricken by death. During his residence here Dr. Clark was widely and favorably known and enjoyed an immense practice. Some time ago he became addicted to the liquor habit whose relentless hold caused him to thread the downward path and lastly called him to his grave.

He held the office of mayor of the village of Plummer for two years, and various positions of trust. He held the esteem of his acquaintances, and they were many, and whose hearts are saddened by his unfortunate ending. Dr Clark was called to the great beyond in the prime of manhood, being at the time of death only 34 years of age. He was a man of remarkable talent and unquestionable skill, and had he been spared the unfortunate circumstances which lead to his death would undoubtedly have gained the heights of his ambition and would have made a name for himself in his chosen profession. He leaves besides his parents three brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss.

5,000 New Settlers.

Based on reports from correspondents in various counties of the state H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, estimates that between 3,000 and 5,000 new settlers have come to the state this spring. This represents a good growth for Minnesota as a whole. The settlers are of a better class financially than those who have come in other years according to the report. This means that the state will be developed still more rapidly. Most of them have settled on farms and their coming has boosted the average price of state land. Real estate men in various parts of the state report renewed interest in lands and at better prices.

Coroner Joseph Belaire of Red Lake Falls was summoned and in company with Dr. Lemieux of that place, came over to hold a post mortem examination and pronounced death due to chronic alcoholism. Relatives of the deceased were notified and on Monday evening Charles P. Clark, of St. Paul, a brother of the deceased arrived here and had the remains brought to the home of the parents at Elysian, Minn., that evening, where interment will take place.

Dr. Clark was an old resident of Plummer, having taken up the practice of medicine here about six years ago. About two months ago he desired to seek a new location and was just preparing his new quarters at Thief River Falls when he was stricken by death. During his residence here Dr. Clark was widely and favorably known and enjoyed an immense practice. Some time ago he became addicted to the liqour habit whose relentless hold caused him to thread the downward path and lastly called him to his grave.

He held the office of mayor of the village of Plummer for two years, and various positions of trust. He held the esteem of his acquaintances, and they were many, and whose hearts are saddened by his unfortunate ending. Dr Clark was called to the great beyond in the prime of manhood, being at the time of death only 34 years of age. He was a man of remarkable talent and unquestionable skill, and had he been spared the unfortunate circumstances which lead to his death would undoubtedly have gained the heights of his ambition and would have made a name for himself in his chosen profession. He leaves besides his parents three brothers and two sisters to mourn his loss.

5,000 New Settlers.

Based on reports from correspondents in various counties of the state H. J. Maxfield, state immigration commissioner, estimates that between 3,000 and 5,000 new settlers have come to the state this spring. This represents a good growth for Minnesota as a whole. The settlers are of a better class financially than those who have come in other years according to the report. This means that the state will be developed still more rapidly. Most of them have settled on farms and their coming has boosted the average price of state land. Real estate men in various parts of the state report renewed interest in lands and at better prices.

A woman at Seattle, Washington, advertised for a man to whip a wife beater. She was flooded with applications. She selected a young man, six feet and weighing 190. Her prize was $10. This young fellow said he would do the job gratis; that it would be a pleasure to do it. The papers say the husband has not been able to be out since the job was completed.

The boy stood on the back yard fence, whence all but him had fled, the flames that lit his father's barn shone just above the shed. One bunch of crackers in his hand, two others in his hat, with piteous accents loud he cried, "I never thought of that." A bunch of crackers to the tail of one small dog he'd tied; that dog in anguish sauth the barn and mid its ruins died. The sparks flew wide and red and hot, they lit upon the brat, they fired the crackers in his hand and eke those in his hat. There came a burst of rattling sound—the boy! Where was he gone? Ask of the winds that far around strewed bits of meat and bone, and scraps of clothes and balls and tops and nails and hooks and yarn, the relics of the dreadful boy that burned his farher's barn.

Be a booster! Tell the truth, but don't continually hunt up unplesent truths. Encourage the man who is trying to build up the country.

To steal a kiss is natural. To buy one is stupid. Two girls kissing is a waste of time. To kiss one's wife is obligation. To kiss one's sister is proper. To kiss an ugly woman is galantry. To kiss an old, faded woman is devotion. To kiss a young, blushing girl is quite a different thing. To kiss one's rich aunt is hypocracy. Kissing three girls on the same day is extravagance.

A Swede was courting his girl one night, and overcome by the tender passion, asked her to marry him. She readily consented, after which both were silent for a long time. Finally the girl asked Ole why he didn't say something. He replied "I tank der bane too much said already.

Tom Norby, Wilfred Morrisette and John Walker composed a trio who went over to Bemidji last Sunday on the special train, to take in the ball games played in that city on that day.

This weeks issue of the Pioneer comes to our readers in the form of a 5 column quarto instead of a 7 column folio as has been the size of the paper for some time. This is the second time that we have been forced to enlarge the size of our paper since the Pioneer came into our possession, by reason of our rapidly increasing business.

Tricking a Game Warden.

When a game warden bought seven pounds of meat and paid a dollar a pound for it he thought he was getting some pretty convincing evidence against a man in Herkimer county whom he supposed to be a chronic violator of the game law. The protector found this particular piece of meat in an icehouse one hot August day, and he spotted it for venison.

"What will you take for that chunk of meat?" he asked the owner.

"That's a tender piece of meat," replied the woodsman, with a wink at the stranger, "and meat is dear way back up here. I wouldn't part with it for less 'n a dollar a pound."

"Well, give me a pound."

"Nope; couldn't do that. It would spile the piece for cookin' to do that."

The game warden had to take the whole thing, and he paid $7 for it, satisfied that he had caught one of the worst game law violators in the Adirondacks. Down to Albany he sent the meat for the forest, fish and game commission to analyze to prove it venison. But it wasn't. It was veal. The backwoodsmen tell the story as one of the best jokes ever played on a game protector.—New York Tribune.

Columns of St. Mark.

Two memorable granite columns known as the columns of St. Mark, brought from the Holy Land in 1120 and standing in front of the quay and landing steps of the Piazzeta, have been associated with the fortunes of Venice for many years. At first they lay prostrate for a long time, while no one would undertake to raise them. But a reward offered by the doge at length induced one Nicolo Barratiero (Nick the Blackleg) to offer his services. He succeeded and claimed as his reward the privilege of carrying on between the columns games of chance, elsewhere prohibited by law. To neutralize this as much as possible it was enacted that all public executions should take place on the same spot. One column is surmounted by the Lion of St. Mark. The other carries a fine figure of St. Theodore, the patron saint of the city, who stands upon a crocodile and with sword and buckler gives token that the motto of Venice is "Defense, Not Defiance."

Quite a crowd from Plummer wen over to Brooks last Sunday to witness the game of ball between the Brooks and Oklee teams. The game turned out a victory for the former team by the large score of 13 to 2. Henry Enderle, from here, officiated as umpire and as evidence of fair play he was never even threatened with his life.

E. L. Wichterman suffered a very painful accident last week which will keep him from his regular duties for a couple of weeks at least. While attending to one of his teams of horses at the barn the horses attacked him and for a while he had to use every effort in trying to keep from being trampled under the horses feet. He finally managed to get up in the manger where he was safe from the horses vicious attacks. On investigation it was found that he had sustained a fractured rib which has proved very painful to him.

It is estimated that the great school army eligible to school privileges in the United States will number approximately fourteen millions, for according to the census of 1900 there were 15,367,147 scholars of which 62 per cent were white. Of the total number about one-half of them are between ten and fourteen years of age; those from fifteen to seventeen constitute less than thirteen per cent and those of eighteen and over about five per cent. There is a significant fact in the research which was made in estimating the actual and the possible strength of the school army of the United States that out of the entire number of children ranging between five and nine years of age available only half attended school; of those from ten to fourteen years of age substantially four-fifths, and those of from fifteen to seventeen a little over two-fifths.

A Reformer

By SARAH BRICE VAUGHAN

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"Ticket for Buffalo," said a young lady, opening her satchel and hunting for her portemonnaie. Then suddenly she exclaimed: "Oh, heavens! I've been robbed!"

"Two tickets to Buffalo," said a young man next in line.

The tickets were handed out, paid for and one of them slipped into the girl's hand before she had time to recover from the effect of her loss.

The young man caught up a suit case the girl had set down beside her and hurried her off to the train. Having found her a seat and racked her suit case, he was about to leave her when she made room for him beside her.

"Please let me know who you are and the price of the ticket," she said, "that I may send you the amount."

The young man took an old envelope from his pocket, wrote on it John Sparkline, with his address, and gave it to her. Then they fell to talking of how the thief could have got the pocketbook.

"There was but one moment," she said, "that it was out of my possession. I was sitting in the waiting room and a candy boy came along. I had small coins inside my glove, and I laid my bag down on the seat beside me while I paid for some candy."

"A candy boy is the most dangerous thing a girl can meet," said Mr. Sparkline dryly. The girl looked up at him, but as his face was perfectly serious she continued:

"A man sat in the seat next the one in which I had the satchel."

"What did he look like?"

"I haven't an idea."

"Complimentary."

"What do you mean?"

"You evidently weren't attracted by the man's appearance."

Again she looked at him.

"Are you sure you wouldn't recognize him again?"

"No, I wouldn't."

The couple talked for three hours, which seemed but one, and when they were within a short distance of their destination the young man turned to the girl and said impressively:

"Did you ever take the first step in crime?"

"No," she replied in astonishment. "I have."

"Oh, heavens! Are you a criminal?"

"I stole your pocketbook."

"You stole my pocketbook?"

"Alas, I must confess it."

"But you have loaned me half as much as it contained."

"That came from remorse."

"But it seems to me the remorse came very quickly."

"I couldn't bear to see you troubled."

She looked at him sidewise.

"I don't believe a word you say."

He took the portemonnaie from his pocket and handed it to her.

"Please don't have me arrested," he pleaded. "I am the child of poor but dishonest parents, who taught me to steal when I was a little boy."

"I thought you said something about a first crime."

"Did I? They taught me to lie too."

"Poor child!"

"When I saw you lay your bag on the seat between you and me I could not resist the temptation. Oh, why did you leave it there?"

"I'm so sorry. I didn't know I was tempting any one. Why don't you reform?"

"I haven't any one to reform me."

"But is it necessary that you should have some one for that? Can't you do it yourself?"

"No; I'm too far gone."

"What do you want any one to do to help you?"

"Why, I think that if I could see you once a week and you would encourage me I might pull through to a permanent reformation."

She thought awhile, then said:

"If you really think I can help you I shall be very glad to have you come every Saturday to tell me that you haven't picked any one's pocket during the week."

"Oh, how I thank you! I know you can save me and make an honest man of me."

"The only thing that troubles me," she said thoughtfully, "is that I must tell father, and I'm afraid he'll object."

"Tell him to go to Mr. William Evans, —— Locust street. He is interested in me and knows something to my advantage."

When they reached the station the penitent handed the girl out to a carriage, and she drove away, giving him an encouraging smile and promising to let him know the decision in his case. She told her father about it, and he gave her a scolding. But she forced him to make the inquiry of Mr. Evans. When he had done so he said to his daughter:

"Sis, the fool killer is coming this evening to carry you away."

"What do you mean, papa?"

"Evans, whom I have long known, tells me that this man is Jack Sparkline, his nephew, worth half a million and full of the Old Nick. I've given permission for the young rascal to call."

"But he did steal my purse."

"Of course he did, and with a view to making your acquaintance."

"Oh, my goodness gracious! And I told him he might come on Saturdays to assure me he hadn't picked a pocket during the week!"

QUEER TITLES.

Bestowed on His Favorites by an Emperor of Haiti.

Among the whimsical titles which appear on the pages of national history few are more apparently frivolous than the Duke of Marmalade, the Count of Lemonade and the Earl of Brandy. They are or were, however, real titles bestowed by a genuine monarch on three of his favorites, and that, too, during the last century.

In 1811 a revolution occurred in Haiti, and Christophe, a negro, declared himself emperor. Through conspiracy and plot, his life often attempted, he retained power till 1820, preserving to the last the pageantry of a royal court and creating a numerous nobility. Among them were the three already mentioned, and the oddity of the titles has suggested to many writers the frivolousness of the African character.

In fact, however, all three names were those of places, the first two being originally plantations, but latterly towns of some importance. This not being generally known, a misapprehension has arisen with regard to the titles themselves, which, however absurd, were scarcely more so than some which were bestowed in France and Germany during the middle ages.—Pearson's Weekly.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring, and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for milk cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country. . . . .

Plummer to Celebrate July Fourth

PLUMMER WINS GAME

Plummer-Brooks Game last Sunday Proved a Good Game.

LOCALS WON BY SCORE OF 6 TO 3

Both Teams Do Good Work Despite Extremely Strong Wind.

A very creditable exhibition of the National game was displayed last Sunday afternoon when the Brooks aggrigation and the local Athletes met to combat for first honors on the local diamond. The strong southeast wind proved quite a handicap in many different ways but despite this both teams overcame this difficulty admirably well and played a good, clean game. Brooks made a score in the first inning, which was tied in the same inning by the locals. The next inning both teams buckled down and gave each others a goose egg. These conditions were not to last, however, and in the third Johnson crossed home plate for the locals, which again was tied by the Brooks team in the fourth. After the score in the 5th, which again relieved the troubled minds of the local favorites, the locals again was at the head of the list and from then on piled up scores to their own satisfaction.

It is safe to say, and as will be noticed by the summary, that the game was close and full of interest. In the early part of the contest it seemed dark as to which tribe would carry off the other's scalp, but as the game progressed it became more and more apparent the the Athlets were getting a stronger grip on the victory melon.

The local team will go down to Brooks and play for championship honors on St. John's Day, Monday, June 24th.

The following is the line-up and the score by innings:

Plummer:	Brooks:
Pahlen	C. Moreau
Rice	L. Moe
Johnson	C. Barrow
Enderle	G. Nays
Rose	Conners
Krueger	Melberg
Fulwalter	H. Halles
Brink	R. Halles
Gilbertson	H. Moe

Score by innings:

Brooks,	1	0	1	0	0	0	1	0	0—3
Plummer,	1	0	1	0	1	1	1	1	0—6

Nation's Birthday Will Be Observed In A Most Fitting Manner.

LARGE LIST OF AMUSEMENTS

No Efforts will Be Spared to Make The Event A Hummer.

A meeting of the Plummer Commercial Club was held last Friday evening to consider the ques of a Fourth of July celebration here this year. A committee of three were appointed to ascertain the financial aid to be gotten among the citizen in case of a celebration, and was composed of Dr. Hanson, C. O. Carlson and E. Hermauson. The meeting was then adjourned until Monday evening to hear the report of the committee and to take definite action. A liberal amount of money was pledged in behalf of the celebration, and at the meeting Monday night committees to arrange the programs and to make the necessary preparations were appointed.

With the amount subscribed it is safe to say that an excellent program of sports and various other amusements galore, and should be a record-breaker over any event ever pulled off in Plummer.

Just what the program will consist of has not as yet been decided, but will be arranged this week so that we will be able to give the program in full in our next week's issue.

DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Ole Burstad Hanson, 4 Miles West of Town Answers Summons.

PLURESY THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

Death Comes As a Relief After A Lingering Illness.

Ole Burstad Hanson, who resides about four miles west of Plummer, died very suddenly Monday afternoon, after a lingering illness of a year's duration. Mr. Burstad, as he was familiarly called, laid down on the bed shortly after having his dinner and in a few minutes passed away. The deceased has been a resident of Red Lake county for a number of years, during most of which time he has resided on a farm west of Plummer. He leaves a wife and a number of children, to mourn his loss. We have not been informed as to when the funeral services will be had.

The Old Way

One of our exchanges truthfuly says that when pa was young, people who had bad colds, soaked their feet in hot water and took a few draughts of catnip and got well. Now they have la grippe, take quinine and feel sick all summer. Then they had sore throat, wrapped a piece of bacon in an old wool stocking, tied it around the neck at night and went to work the next day. Now they have tonsilitis, a surgical operation, and two weeks in a hospital. Then they had stomach trouble and took castor oil and recovered. Now they have appendicitis, a week in the hospital and six feet due east and west and six feet perpendicular. In those days they wore underclothes. Now they wear lingerie. Then they went to a restaurant; now they go to a cafe. Then they broke a leg; now they fracture a limb. People went cazy; now they have brain storms—or are born crazy, we don't know which. Politicians then paid good, hard cash for support; now they send government seed instead. Yes, times have changed and we all change with the times. That's progress.

Mixed-Blood and Full-Blood White Earth Indians.

ALEX M'KENZIE.

MA-DAUSH.

There are 1,070 full-bloods and 2,448 mixed-bloods on the present official roll of the White Earth reservation, known as the Hinton roll.

The average white blood is 55.8 per cent and Indian blood 44.2 per cent among the mixed-bloods.

Alex McKenzie is seven-sixteenths Indian and nine-sixteenths white. He is the average mixed-blood of the White Earth tribe.

Ma-daush is a full-blood Indian.

The mixed-bloods live by farming, working for wages and by business, exactly the same as white people. They are fairly well educated and have been self-supporting for many years.

The full-bloods live by hunting, fishing, gathering of wild rice and raise a little garden. They get rations from the Indian agency when destitute. They are generally ignorant and are weak physically. They object to cleanliness and a large percentage of them are afflicted with trachoma and tuberculosis.

The mixed-bloods were given the right to sell their lands by the Clapp act, but the full-bloods were not given such right, and have not been affected, except that some of them have managed to sell to over-anxious speculators who were disposed to take long chances on low prices. These deals were not because of the Clapp act, but contrary to it, and such sales will be annulled and the full-bloods get their land back.

The route of the Graham committee was through the full-blood settlements.

Ball Games Elsewhere

From the reports of different ball games last Sunday it would appear that the heavy sou'-easter must have proved a great handicap as the unsatisfactory score goes to show. The following games have been reported to us up to date:

Winnipeg, 18. Grand Forks Pickets 13.

—o—

Red Lake Falls, 5. Thief River Falls, 20. At Thief River Falls.

—o—

Red Lake Falls "Red Sox" 15. St. Hilaire, 14. Ten inning game, at Red Lake Falls.

—o—

Red Lake Falls "Red Sox" and Terrebonne, at Red Lake Falls. Terrebonne is reported the winners, altho we have been unable to learn the official score.

—o—

Grit, 17. Mayfield, 16.

Move On Now

says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if they don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. Kings New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They generally persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at all druggists.

Chief Wa-de-na in Summer Quarters.

This is a chief of the full-blood White Earth Indians. They constitute less than one-fourth of the tribe, a majority of the White Earth Chippewas being more white than Indian. Gus Beaulieu, whom Congressman Graham said it was a joke to call an Indian, is very near an average mixed-blood. The full-blood Indians are the ones who are reported diseased and destitute. That they are diseased has been known for years, and Congressman Steenerson and others have tried to get the Indian Bureau to help them. If they are destitute it is the fault of the authorities on the reservation, for they have power to and are expected to issue rations to those in need.

They were not affected by the Clapp act, which provides that only mixed-bloods could sell their lands. The effort to connect their disease with the land legislation is ridiculous. They have been diseased for a generation, and they could not possibly be destitute if the Indian agent issues the rations that are paid for from the tribal fund.

The Northern Minnesota Development meeting will be held at International Falls next week, June 20th and 21st.

We like to see and hear a man who is prowd of his native town. He is an indispensible citizen, although he may be as poor as church mouse; but his name should be written in large letters at the entrance gate of his town as an honor to his memory. We have such with us and they are worth more to progress of our town than their weight in gold. They know every point of interest and of advantage for miles around; and any stranger falling into their hands will be most favorable impressed. Such persons overlook with true patriotisum all shortcomings and magnifies with honest citizenship every advantage.

This was the note which was haned to one of the graded teachers the other day:

"Dear mum—Please excuse Jonny today. He will not be at school. He is acting as time keeper for his father. Last night you gave him this eximple, if a field is four miles square how long will it take a man walking three miles an hour to walk two and a half times around it? Jonnie ain't no man, so we had to send his daddy. They left early this morning, and my husband said they thought they ought to be back late tonight, though it would be hard going. Dear Mum, please make the nixt problem about laidies, as my husband can't afford to lose the day's work. I don't have no time to loaf, but can spare a day off accasionally better than my husband can. Resp'y yrs, Mrs.——"

When a business concern invests a large sum of money in a handsome store and equipment for retail merchandising, the public feels a certain degree of confidence that the concern has goods worth examing. People argue that unless they had establish ed a reputaion for fair dealing and unless they had goods that they knew filled a need, they would not dare spend so much money.

Advertising, likewise, acts as a guarasee of substantial business character. When a firm spends money freely on this necesary form of salesmanship, the public concludes that it must have goods back of it that have demonstraded their worth, or the firm would not have set apart this sum of money for selling them through the newspapers.

A concern that does not advertise impresses the public as merely an experiment. The fact that it may have in existence for many years does not help it so very much. The public may even look at mere existence for a long term of years as a disqualification, indicating preference for old time methods. It takes advertising to prove that you have confidence in your goods.

Oklee Items

—O—

From the Tribune:

The Commercial club met last Thursday evening and elected a committee to arrange the program for the 4th, of July celebration, another to look after the erection of our new hall and a comto attend to the street crossings which we need badly.

Walter Anderson, vice president of the Merchants State Bank arrived in town last Friday from Badjer, a distance of 125 miles, which he traveled by anto. He will assist with the work at the bank until Dr. Torgerson returns.

Arrangements have been completed for a game with Brooks, the battle to be staged on the Oklee diamond Sunday June 16th. A very large crowd is expected as this is the deciding game, both teams having won each a game of two games payed.

Walter Anderson autoed over to Gonvick and back last Thursday evening, on a pleasure trip in company with Dr. Torgerson, C. O. Bakke, P. A. Langlois, Charles Seeger and Melby Bros.

The hoodoo followed the Oklee Red Sox to Brooks a week ago last Sunday when they went down to defeat before the Brooks team. Luck was with the Brooks team from start to finish, every ball batted right in their mitts. This was the second battle staged between these two teams, the Oklee players getting away with the first game easily.

Mrs. P. A. Langlois and her two children arrived here a few weeks ago to join their husband and father Mr. Langlois and to make their future home here. They have gone to housekeeping in the building adjoining the hardware store.

Homer Miller, of Red Lake Falls, was in town the week before last for a few days visit with his brother Nap Miller.

The Goose Tower.

In the early years of the fourteenth century the "free cities"—Hamburg, Lubeck and Bremen—sent a delegation of seventy-seven members to King Valdemar to demand increased rights and privileges in their trade with Denmark. The delegates were not very respectful in their language and demeanor, and the king, who was at Vordingborg, told them they acted like a drove of geese and clapped them into prison in the tower, telling them they would stay there until they learned better manners. Over the heavy tower door the king put up a stone with the inscription:

Sieben und siebenteg Hause:
Sieben und siebenteg Ganse;
Ware nicht so viele Hause
Hat ich auch nicht so viele Ganse.

Translated this reads: "Seventy-seven houses and seventy-seven geese. If there were not so many houses I would not have so many geese."

On top of the tower, which still stands solid and strong, was placed a big gilt goose, with neck outstretched as if it were hissing.

The Jerboa and the Melons.

An odd fact relative to a little African melon is thus related by an official of Khartum:

The jerboa or kangaroo rat is found in considerable numbers in places miles and miles away from any water or even dew, and I was at a loss to understand how these little animals could exist through the ten months of drought. It appears, however, that after the scanty rains a small wild melon of bitter taste, but full of juice, flourishes in the desert. The jerboa, as soon as the melon is ripe, bites off the stem and proceeds to dig away the sand under the melon, so that it gradually sinks below the level of the ground. The constant wind soon covers it with six to eight inches of sand, which protects it from the scorching sun and from drying up. When all other moisture has evaporated the jerboa goes to his larder and drinks the juice of the melon till the rains come on again. One jerboa will bury as many as forty of these little melons to last him through the dry season.

The Automobile.

In some respects the automobile is the most marvelous machine the world has yet seen. It can go anywhere at any time, floundering through two feet of snow, ford any stream that isn't deep enough to drown out the magneto, triumph over mud axle deep, jump fences and cavort over plowed ground at fifteen miles an hour. It has been used with brilliant success in various kinds of hunting, including coyote coursing on the prairies of Colorado, where it can run all around the broncho, formerly in favor, since it never runs any risk of breaking a leg in a prairie dog hole. Educated automobiles have been trained to shell corn, saw wood, pump water, churn, plow, and, in short, do anything required of them, except figure out where the consumer gets off under the tariff law.—Outing.

Reports from out east are to the effect that the heaviest rain this spring fell there Monday night. The bridge across the Clearwater river was completed last week, and as soon as the woods have been cleared away west of the river it will be opened for traffic. On Wednesday afternoon County Commissioners Daymond, Pidgeon, and Kankel met with the Village Council of Plummer and accepted the work of the Great Northern bridge company. The work of clearing away the woods and of building the road to connect with the main highway about half a mile west of the river will be commenced as soon as teams and men are available to do the work.

One would think people would get tired of being killed in automobiles crossing railroad tracks. It seems such an avoidable manner of death. It may be true that the same person is never killed twice that way, but that is no help. The experience of the dead ought to teach the living. Apparently it doesn't. Every motorist must know from repeated and repeated demonstration that when a motor car and a train of steam cars dispute at a crossing as to which shall past first the motor car invariably gets the worst of it. And yet, week after week and month after month, the arguments go on and contestants on the motor car side proceed to the hospital or the cemetery.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season, in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine, tame, grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for m il cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

A CONVINCING FEEDING TEST.

The Oklahoma experiment station completed a hog feeding test not long ago that should have a practical value for hog raisers. Three pens of five pigs each were arranged. The first pen was fed cornmeal only, the second cornmeal and tankage in the proportion of seven to one, while the third pen was fed cornmeal and tankage at the ratio of eleven to one. In each case the pigs were fed all they would eat. In the feeding period, which lasted forty-five days, it was found that pen No. 1 consumed 1,888 pounds of meal, 630 pounds of cornmeal being required to make 100 pounds of pork. Lot No. 2 consumed 1,855 pounds of cornmeal and 265 pounds of tankage, or a total of 2,121 pounds of feed. In this case it took but 367 pounds of feed to produce 100 pounds of pork. With lot No. 3 the total amount of feed consumed was 2,026 pounds, a trifle less than in lot No. 2, but the pigs made a slightly larger average gain, only 344 pounds of feed being needed to produce 100 pounds of pork.

THE FOOL WITH THE GUN.

Many a farmer gets the reputation of being stingy and unaccommodating for posting "No Hunting" signs on his place when the truth of the matter is quite likely that he has been compelled to do this to protect his animals in pastures and feed lots. If there is any fool that needs tying up in his own back yard it is the chap in city or country who shoulders a gun, takes a hike to the nearest wood lot and who seems incapable of distinguishing a cottontail from a 1,200 pound cow or a gray squirrel from a nanny goat. At any rate, these larger quadrupeds are killed frequently by these hunters, and it matters little whether it is due to ignorance, carelessness or intent so far as the loss which the owner has to stand is concerned. If men and boys will not exercise good horse sense when out on such hunting jaunts the only other thing to do is to warn them off, and if they persist in trespassing to prosecute them.

STINKING SMUT.

The plant disease known as stinking smut is responsible for an annual loss to the wheat crop of about $11,000,000. The disease ruins the wheat for flourmaking. The germs of the smut are on the grain at the time of sowing, and it develops as the grain grows and ripens. A simple preventive of the trouble is a treatment of the seed with a formalin solution, using one pint of the chemical to about forty gallons of water. The seed wheat should be spread out to a depth of four or five inches on the barn or granary floor, sprinkled with the solution, then shoveled into a pile and covered with gunny sacking and allowed to remain for five or six hours, at the end of which time the fumes will have penetrated the pile and killed all germs. The same solution is also used in preventing the development of other grain smuts and scab in potatoes.

SEEDLESS APPLE AGAIN.

A newspaper dispatch under a Reno (Nev.) headline states that an apple tree on a fruit ranch in Modoc county, in northeastern California, bears seedless and coreless apples, the placenta being forced out of the apple during the process of growth, the withered stamens and pistils being visible on the exterior of the mature apple. This particular "find" has been hailed as something brand new, the owner taking samples of the fruit to Burbank for the purpose of having him propagate it. Some seven or eight years ago considerable interest was aroused in connection with a seedless apple, but in this case there was a solid string at the center of the apple. While freaks of the above kind are interesting in a way, they have little to commend them for one who would produce apples in a commercial way.

DIHYDROXYSTEARIC ACID.

Investigations conducted for some time past by expert soil chemists in the department of agriculture at Washington have brought to light the interesting fact that a large influence tending to make soils unproductive is that they contain dihydroxystearic acid. In samples of soils taken from unproductive fields in eighteen states this acid was found. This new theory seems to make clear why some soils, apparently fat and rich, do not produce the crops one would expect. The presence of this acid in the soil is supposed to come from mold, to be connected with soil fungi and to be the result of improper oxidation. The difficulty is overcome by drainage, which dries the soil and increases the amount of air it contains, and by the application of lime, which neutralizes its acid tendency.

In the early days of its history the earth is believed to have grown rapidly by the addition of meteoric matter. It is still growing in the same manner, though scarcely to an appreciable extent, for the mass of meteoric matter added yearly is reckoned to be only 20,000 tons.

ATHLETES WON AGAIN

Wins A Fast One From Red Lake Falls "Red Sox."

The local "Atlnetes are continuing to reap their harvest of scalps and if the good work continues will have a fine collection before the season closes. Another was added last Sunday afternoon when they won a decided victory over the Red Lake Falls "Red Sox" by a score of 8 to 4. The unvanquished hereos from the "Falls" on honors bent invaded the local camp and were happy in the anticipation of another victory, but somehow things turned out different from what was figured. Both teams hooked horns in the first two or three innings that made it hard to determine who would finally carry of the honors, but it was little show of a victory for the visitors after the terrible slaughter in the third inning when the locals made four scores, placing them at the head of the list by a safe margin. The good work in the third is attributed to some mighty hard swatting on the part of the local team. Enderle was the first to cross home plate for the "Athletes" and was quickly followed by Kruger, Fulwaiter and Johnson. Another score in addition was nearly landed when Brink managed to land safely on third base but died on bases. Gilbertson, first man up in the fourth for the locals, made a wallop that netted him three bases, but was unable to score as his successors died in quick successon.

Brink, the fast twirler on the "Athletes" force, held his opponents down in very good shape, and fanned eight men against the visiting pitcher's five. The game was a very close one but despite the threatening weather a number rallied to attend.

The following is the line-up and the score by inning:

Plummer:	R. L. Falls:
Gildertson	Lacoursiere
Froiland	Findieson
Rose	Marchand
Enderle	Linnihan.
Kreuger	Guilmette
Fulwaiter	Mayhew.
Johnson	Porrier
Brink	Cyr,
Pahlen	Huot.

Why We Fight Tuberculosis.

People used to think tuberculosis was inherited. If your parents had it, you were sure to have it, was the idea. When it was studied more this was proved to be false and it was also found that tuberculosis killed more people than any other disease, and that it can be prevented. There is no need of getting tuberculosis.

Cleanliness, light and air in the house do much to prevent development of germs which may lodge there from those who already have the disease.

There were 1635 people killed on the Titanic and yet in Minnesota each year over 2,000 people die of Tuberculosis. Most of there lives can be saved. Isn't it worth fighting for?

Tuberculosis very often takes the man of the house when he is in his prime and children are dependent on him. And yet tuberculosis is easily controlled.

The state spends three cents per capita to keep the public healthy and $1.59 per capita to educate the children. It spends more to protect and develop the game and fish of the state than it does to guard public health.

Move On Now

says a policeman to a street crowd, and whacks heads if they don't. "Move on now," says the big, harsh mineral pills to bowel congestion and suffering follows. Dr. Kings New Life Pills don't bulldoze the bowels. They generally persuade them to right action, and health follows. 25c at all druggists.

Practical Education

While our schools are being conducted very satisfactorily, we believe many of the problems in mathematics are not practical. Why not have problems useful in everyday life? For instance the following:

If it takes a boy twelve years of age twenty-two minutes to bring in six sticks of wood, a distance of seventeen feet, how long will it take him to travel a mile to see a circus show procession?

A woman placed four pounds of cold meat and eight slices of bread before a tramp. At the end of twenty minutes how much was left?

A housewife sold a coat to a peddler for a vase worth nine cents, a pair of boots for a china dog worth six cents, and a vest for a glass bottle worth four cents; how much did she receive for all and how much over $9 clear profit did the peddler make?

A man pays thirty cents for three pounds of evaporated apples and gets a $14 newspaper puff for sending them to an orphan asylum. Does he gain or lose and how much?

A man winks his eye an average of 30,000 times a day, and a woman's tongue makes 78,000 motions every twenty-four hours. At this rate how long will it take the man to catch up?

If it cost's $200 for a young lady to learn painting' and she turns out two landscapes worth forty cents apiece. what is the net profit.

It takes twenty blows of a hammer in the hands of a woman to drive a tenpenny nail three inches. She misses the nail twice where she hits it once. How many blows does she strick in all and how far can her voice be heard when she strickes her thumb?

Ends Hunt for Rich Girl

Often the hunt for a rich wife ends when the man finds a woman that uses Electric Bitters. Her strong nerves tell in a bright brain and even temper. Her peach-bloom complexion and ruby lips result from her pure blood; her bright eyes from restful sleep; her elastic step from firm, free muscles, all telling of the health and strength Electric Bitters give a woman, and the freedom from indigestion, backache, headache, fainting and dizzy spells they promote. Everywhere they are woman's favorite remedy. If weak or ailing try them. 50c at all druggists.

Word was received here the first of the week by Mr. Bjorge, of the farmer's store, to the effect that N. Nelson a well known business man of Detriot, had drowned at Mason Bay, Detriot Lake, last Sunday afternoon. The communication does not state how the accident came about other than he was at the time in company with Mr. Butler, and it is a possibility that they were out in a launch. Mr. Nelson was 50 years of age and had been engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years.

To a Poet.

To learn poetry "for recreation" is doubtless a means of cultivating a knowledge of literature; but schoolboys sometimes regard the authors of poems learned as task-masters and personal enemies. This view is amusingly expressed in a letter found among the papers of the venerable German poet Geibel. It was written to him by some schoolboys of Lubeck, and signed, "Karl Beckmann, II. Klasse."

After stating that two boys had been flogged because they could not learn Herr Geibel's "Hope of Spring," the letter reads:

"We suppose that you did not think of such things when you wrote the poem. The Herr Lehrer says it is a very beautiful poem; but there are so many beautiful poems, and we are obliged to learn them. Therefore we beg and entreat you, esteemed Herr Geibel, make no more beautiful poems. And to make it worse we have to learn the biography of every poet, what year he was born in, and what year he died in. We write to you because you are the only poet still living, and we wish you a very long life."—The Sunday Magazine.

MARRIED TUESDAY

Miss Laura Halseth & Alcid Morrisette United In Wedlock.

Last Tuesday at Thief River Falls occurred the marriage of Miss Laura Halseth, of that city, to Mr. Alcid Morrisette, one of the popular young men of Plummer.

After the usual festivities following the marriage ceremony the bridal couple left on the Soo Flyer that evening on a honeymoon trip of a couple of weeks duration to the Twin Cities and other points.

The young couple needs no introduction to the people of Plummer and vicinty, as their long residence here has made for them a large circle of admiring acquaintances. The bride has taught in the public schools of Plummer for the last three terms while the groom has been employed as clerk at the Langlie Bros. store for a considerable length of time. They will go to housekeeping in Mr. Morrisettee's new residence, just recently completed.

They have the best wishes of their large circle of friends for an abundance of happiness and prosperity as they journey thru life together.

Man Coughs & Breaks Ribs

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few tea spoonsful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure it is a God-send to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia, Mo. "for I believe I would have consumption today if I had not used this great remedy." It's guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all druggists.

A Card Players Sermon

Man's life is a game of cards. First it is "cribbage." Next he tries to "go it alone" at a sort of "cut, shuffle and deal" pace. Then he "raises" the "deuce," when his mother "takes a hand in," and, contrary to Hoyle, "beats the little joker with her five." Then with his "diamonds" he wins the "queen of hearts." Tired of "playing a lone hand" he expresses a desire to "assist" to his fair "partner," "throws out his card" and the clegyman take a ten dollar bill out of him on a "pair." She "orders him up" to build the fires. Like a "knave" he joins the "clubs," where he often gets "high" which is "low," too. If he keeps "straight" ofttimes "flush." He grows old and "bluff," sees a "deal" of trouble, when at last he "shuffles" off his mortal coil and "passes in his checks," and he is raked in by a "spade," life's fitful "game" is ended, and he waits the summons of Gabriel's "trump" which shall "order him up."

It is one of the paradoxes of life that the more expensive your fishing tackle, the lighter your fish basket is apt to be.

—O—

It is a poor excuse of an old hen, if permitted to run loose in town, that cannot make at least one enemy out of a good neighbor.

—O—

We can understand the ease with which a fool and his money are parted, but what puzzles us is how the fool got the money to part with.

—O—

Don't marry a woman for her taper fingers and lily hands alone, for married life and its rugged experience calls for a wife that knows how to make a pot boil and can spank babies systematically.

—O—

When the assessor calls this year it is not necessary for you to put on that poverty stricken look. He has a right to ask you what you have and it is your duty to tell him. The man who lives honestly 364 days in the year should not spoil it all by lying to the assessor on the 365th day.

—O—

The annual worry over depredations of neighbors' hens in your new garden bed is about to begin. It is suggested to set a steel trap in the bed, catch the hen and eat her. This practise might be hard on the hen, but as the lamented Josh Billings used to say, "It would save a heap of kussin' that could be put to better use."

Dr. Torgerson and son returned from Greenbush, on Wednesday of last week, making the trip by auto.

Clarence Knutson and D. O. Olson were over to Plummer, the first part of last week on matters of business.

Walter Anderson left last Thursday for his home in Badger, leaving here in his auto with Mr. L. Doucet acting as guide as far as Thief River Falls. They rode as far as Crookston, where they were forced to stop because of the condition of the roads, Mr. Doucet giving up the balance of the trip and returning here Friday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Tessier and Miss Tessier and Charles Seeger motored to Red Lake Falls a week ago last Sunday, spending the day on the farm of Mr. Seeger's folks, returning in the evening.

Mrs. W. O. Tessier left on Monday of last week for Annandale, the home of her childhood, where she will visit for a short time returning the latter part of this week with her father Mr. Rahier

Ole Dale, of Yellow Medicine County, was in town last week visiting his old time neighbor Ole Homme, and taking in the meeting at Mc Intosh.

The school closed Friday, with an entertainment in the evening given by the school children and their teacher Miss Foley. The program consisted of twenty three numbers, all of the numbers making a hit with the audience. Some of the numbers making the biggest hit were for instance, the playlet Little Bo Peep, the Mother Goose play, the Indian drill, the Butterfly drill and the recitations by Miss Kolstoe. The entertainment was a big success from the beginning to end and enjoyed by every one present.

Miss Foley left Tuesday for her home in Minneapolis, after finishing a successful term of school here.

Bertha Medchel, of Plummer, was in town last week for a few days visit with her cousin.

Typewriters are now made for use in nearly a hundred different languages, and they are sold all over the world, but there is still one great nation which, for a very simple reason, has no typewriters that write its tongue. That nation is China.

The English alphabet has twenty-six letters, the Russian thirty-six. The typewriter produced for the Russian market is the largest made, but no typewriter could be made that would begin to be big enough for the Chinese language, which has no alphabet, but is represented by sign characters, of which there are about 50,000. Of the great number of words found in the English language only a small proportion are used for the ordinary purposes of speech, and the same would be true as to the characters used in the Chinese language, but the number of Chinese characters commonly employed is still far greater than could be put on any typewriter. So this nation of 400,000,000 people has no typewriter in its own tongue.

But that doesn't mean that no typewriters are sold in China. More and more Chinese are learning other languages besides their own, and Chinese merchants and resident foreign merchants use typewriters, and they are used in legations and in consular offices and in banks and shipping offices and colleges and by missionaries, by various people. Altogether there are sold in China a good many typewriters.—Washington Post.

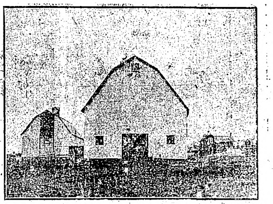
Bisson Farm at Ogema.



This farm is owned by A. Bisson, a mixed-blood of the White Earth reservation. Since the passage of the Clapp act a large number of mixed-bloods have gone into farming. Many mixed-blood families had as much as 1,000 acres of land in allotments, but could raise no money to buy stock or machinery to work with, previous to the passage of the Clapp act. When that law was passed, in 1906, they sold off part of the land and used the money in improving the balance of it.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to fine tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil l cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country. . . . . . .

WOULD WRECK ENTIRE TARIFF

Northwestern Senators Threaten to Support Democrats.

MOVEMENT LED BY DIXON

Republican Opposition to Reciprocity Would Join Movement to Lower Duties on Manufactures.

Washington, June 20.—Republican opposition to the Canadian reciprocity bill in the senate reached the stage of open revolt. Led by Senator Dixon of Montana, who again failed in his demand for an explanation or a speech in favor of the bill from some of the Republican leaders who champion the measure, the Republican opponents declared that, if the bill passed, many Republicans would join the Democrats in an attempt to lower the duties on all manufactured products.

"When the corner stone is pulled out of the system of protective tariff," said Senator Dixon, "when the farmers' products are thrown into a free market while his purchases continue to be protected, there are many good protectionists in the Republican ranks here who will vote to have the duties pulled down on iron and steel, chemicals, cotton and many other things."

Other Northwestern Republicans signified by their approval of the Montana senator's words that the passage of the reciprocity bill, which, it is admitted, will have a majority of the votes in the senate, will be attended with a fight that threatens to throw open the whole tariff subject.

"We want to make one killing," declared Senator Crawford of South Dakota. "We find the senators from Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine, states that have always reaped the greatest harvest of protection, advocating this measure to put on the free list every single article raised in the Northwest. I want to deal with this matter in its entirety. If Pennsylvania, Mississippi and Massachusetts have joined hands in a new political propaganda, it is time for the rest of the country to strike out on a new tack."

M'CUMBER ASSAILS MEASURE

Declares Reciprocity Will Injure the American Farmer.

Washington, June 15.—Senator McCumber of North Dakota opposed the reciprocity agreement in the senate on the ground that it would injure the American farmer.

"I believe this treaty," said Senator McCumber, "if enacted into law, would not only postpone for many years the consummation of a hope indulged by the farmers of the country, a hope held out to them by every speaker and writer who sought to secure and hold their votes for the protective policy of the country, but that its logical result would be to destroy the policy itself. I must, therefore, either repudiate all I have advocated for years or oppose the consummation of this agreement."

ROOT AMENDMENT MAY FAIL

House Leader Believes It Will Not Pass Senate.

Washington, June 15.—After a conference with President Taft at the White House Majority Leader Underwood of the house declared he thought the Root amendment to the Canadian reciprocity bill would not be adopted by the senate.

"If it should be," he added, "there would be a serious hitch between the house and senate, as the Democrats in the house are pledged against it."

The president also had a conference on the reciprocity bill with Senators Penrose and Smoot. They said the Root amendment was not discussed.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS OCCUR

Disturbance Felt in San Jose, Seattle and Denver.

San Francisco, June 16.—Earthquake shocks were recorded by a number of seismographs throughout the West. At Santa Clara college, San Jose, Cal., the record began at 6:28 a. m. The seat of the disturbance appeared to be a considerable distance away in the ocean floor.

At Seattle the sharp disturbance began at 4 p. m., lasting five minutes, followed by tremors for two hours.

The shock was also noted at Denver, Colo.

"ATHLETES" GRABBED ANOTHER

Fast Local Aggrigation Adds Another to Its Fast Growing List of Victories.

FINAL SCORE WAS FOUR TO ONE

After A Futual Struggle Visitors Manage to Land One Score In Eight Inning.

That the local "Athletes" are a hard nut to crack is becoming more evident with each succeeding game played. Their record so far is unquestionably a good one, as out of the number of games played they have dropped only one or two games. The showing is a remarkable one as in comparison with the work done during the entire season last year, and shows that the boys are playing ball in the full meaning of that word. The game with the fast Thief River Tigers here last Sunday is another example of the "survival of the fittest" The fast little bunch from the up-river town put up a good article of ball but some way they were unable to connect with the fast and crooked ones dished out to them by Brink, the local twirler. Of the few bingles sucured off the local pitcher the runner was unable to make much headway and was quickly returned to the bench. The game was a fast and interesting one as the score which was 4 to 1 is sufficient evidence. The contest started out with neither team scoring in the 1st inning but the second saw two local men—Enderle and Krueger—safely cross the home plate. The other scores made on the local side was the one by Enderle in the fourth and another one by Johnson in the fifth. It looked very much as though the visiting team would be white-washed entirely but managed to save them selves when Rube Olson brought in a score in the eight. The feature hit of the day was the home run by Krueger in the 2nd. While three bags was all the hit should have allowed excepting under the circumstances, by reason of an over-throw on third he was allowed to trot home uninterrupted.

The following is the line-up and the score by innings:

The local Athletes went down to Brooks monday afternoon to combat with the team there at the St. John's celebration, and handed a most severe drumming to the down river team. The awful score of 19 was piled up by the locals, against 6 by Brooks. The following is the score by innings:

NOTICE AS TO NOXIOUS WEEDS

—O—

The following notice issued by County Attorney Boughton and sent out for the purpose to aid and encourage the destruction of noxious weeds was received by Mayor Bottineau last week:

"The board of county commissioners has passed a resolution requesting me to notify you and all other chairmen of town boards, in the county, in regard to the law as to foul weeds.

No person owning, occupying, renting or controlling land, shall permit any wild mustard, wild oats, cocklebur, burdock or tumble mustard, Canada thistle, oxeye daisy or quack grass to grow or go to seed thereon, and shall not permit any Russian thistle to grow or remain thereon, at all.

For the purpose of this law, every man's land is considered to extend to the middle of the road, and is his duty to keep his half of the road free from any noxious weeds.

It is the duty of the chairman of the town board of each town to see that this law is enforced, and to give written notice to any person permitting any such weeds to grow upon his land, or his half of the road, to remove the same within six days after the service of the notice. Upon written complaint made to the chairman of the board, that noxious or other weeds or grasses are growing or standing upon lands upon his township in violation of the law, he shall forthwith inspect the premises; and if the complaint be well founded, he shall cause written notice to be served upon the person permitting the same, directing him to comply with the provisions of the law, within six days after such service.

All notices may be served by any citizen of the town in which the land is situate, and shall be served upon the occupant of the land, if any there be, otherwise upon the owner or person in charge of the land, and shall be personally served by giving a copy of the notice. If there is no person within the county upon whom service can be made the chairman of the board may file his certificate with the town clerk, stating that there is no person upon whom service can be made.

If the notice is not obeyed within six days, the overseer of roads shall forthwith destroy such weeds or grasses, and make report thereof to the town clerk, with an itemized account of his service and expenses in so doing. He shall be allowed $2 per day for the time of his necessary employment, and for men and teams employed he may be allowed the rates paid for labor upon roads or streets. Such expenses shall be paid by the town or village or city out of the roads or street funds and unless the sum be repaid by the owner or occupant before October next ensuing the clerk shall certify the amount thereof with a description of the premises to be charged to the County Auditor who shall extend the same upon the tax list, as an additional tax upon said lands.

When noxious weeds are so intermixed with a growing crop that they can not be removed without serious damage to the crop, a written agreement may be made by the owner or occupant with the officer providing for the destruction of the weeds upon specified parts of the land, and for the proper treatment of the remainder, after the crop has matured. All officials charged with the enforcement of this law may go upon lands infested with noxious weeds or suspected thereof, for any purpose necessary to the enforement of the law; but any necessary damage done thereon shall be paid by the town, village or city. Every person who violates any provision of this law, or refuses to comply with any proper notice given, pursuant thereto, and any officer neglecting to preform any official duty under this law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not over one hundred ($100.00)

Following the nomination of President Taft at Chicago, the following statement was issued by Sam Y. Gordon, Republican candidate for Governor of Minnesota: "The nomination of President Taft at Chicago, under the circumstances, means that he and the reactionaries who forced his nomination by fraudulent means will all go down in a heap at the November election If newspaper accounts of the Chicago Convention are true, and I believe they are, I cannot see that any self-respecting Republican is in any manner bound by the arbitrary and high-handed action of the National Committee welch has thwarted the will of the people by refusing seats to fairly elected delegates and by forcing upon the party a candidate for the presidency who has been repudiated by the Republicans of ice country in the primaries. If the President gives his approal to the outrages there permitted, he has forfeited the right to ask the support of all progressive Republicans. It is another case of bossism defying the people. Should I be successful in securing the nomination as a candidate for governor of this state, I now give notice that I will not consider it incumbent upon me to give aid or endorsement in any way to the reelection of President Taft, whose nomination I believe has been secured through political trickery and high-handed fraud."

It is the option of the county board that this law ought to be enforced more thoroughly than it has been in the past, as great damage has resulted each year to men who keep their land free from weeds, by the carelessness of some neighbor, and you, as chairman of the town board are requested to try to free your town from weeds this year.

GOPHER NEWS NOTES.

Minnesota Events of the Week in Condensed Form.

Brainerd.—Plats of the park addition to Oreland, Raymond's addition to Crosby, have been filed. These are all additions to towns on the Cuyuna iron range.

Minneapolis. — The exercises for the 63 graduates of the teachers' course in home economics at the Minnesota agricultural college were held at the college auditorium, St. Anthony Park, last night.

Owatonna,—Within a short time after attending the funeral of his brother, C. H. Reineke was stricken with the same ailment and died within a few moments. Both died of heart failure and both were aged pioneers.

St. Paul, Minnesota. — Gail Walker, two-year-old daughter of George B. Walker, right-of-way agent for the Northern Pacific railroad, fell two and one-half stories to instant death from an elevator cab in a St. Paul department store.

Belgrade.—Mrs. Annia Froehler of this city was buried at New Munich. She was 91 years old, and was one of the oldest settlers, being one of the first to settle between St. Paul and here. She is survived by two sons and one daughter.

Minneapolis. — Grace Presbyterian church's silver communion set, valued at $100, was stolen from the pastor's study and the individual glass cups thrown on the floor and smashed by thieves who came and departed in an automobile.

Cass Lake.—W. W. Goog died in a rowboat near his home about 15 miles from Remer and the body has been brought to Cass Lake. Corner Miskella visited the place and ascertained that Goog, who was on the other side of the river from his home, had evidently been taken with a hemorrhage.

Duluth, Minnesota. — Mrs. Eleanor Torrence who twice has been tried on a charge of having taken articles amounting to grand larceny from her women friends, has been granted her freedom. Two counts remained against her, but Judge Dancer dismissed the indictments. Mrs. Torrence claimed the charges had for their basis "spite

Minneapolis. — The Minneapolis Bankers' association opened a two-days' annual convention at the state agricultural college, D. S. Culver of St. Paul being in the chair. This association was the first organization of its kind to take up the consideration of agricultural development and education and state publicity, and the program for this meeting is given over to these topics to a considerable extent.

Minneapolis. — Twenty babies from two months to thre years old gathered in front of the library building at the University of Minnesota for the first university baby party. Every youngster was the offspring of an alumnae who had graduated from that institution since 1904. They were brought together that the mothers might compare notes as to their intelligence, beauty and good nature, and methods of caring for them.

Washington, D. C. — Practically every member of the Minnesota delegation in the house plans to return to the West within a few days, to remain until the national conventions have concluded their labors. Representatives Stevens and Nye have already departed and Mr. Steenerson expects to leave this week. Representative Lindbergh will leave Washington about June 15 to campaign throughout Minnesota in behalf of his candidacy for the senate. Mr. Miller and Mr. Hammond plan to remain in Washington.

Minneapolis, Minn., — The annual session of the Minnesota grand lodge of the Odd Fellows and the Daughters of Rebekah has ended. Miss Ella Kohn of St. Cloud, was elected president of the Rebekahs. Three candidates contested the secretaryship with Miss Lucy Bolton of St. Paul, but she finally triumphed over the others. Miss Lena Waber of West Concord was elected vice president, Mrs. M. McGilaroy warden and Mrs. Lulu Baker of Kasson treasurer. A present of $100 was voted to Mrs. Milville, retiring secretary.

St. Paul.—Attorney General Smith soon will bring quo warranto proceedings in the St. Louis district court to see if the town of Buycka has been legally organized. In case the writ is granted the town will go into a receiver's hands, $26,326.86 in the treasury will be returned to those persons to whom it belongs, and with a clean slate the town will start in business again. Buycka was organized in 1906. The law provides that twenty-five legal voters are necessary to organize a town, and it is claimed that Buycka had only eight voters at that time. Now the town has thirty voters. Buycka, which is in a wealthy community, was torn apart in 1910, when the authorities were compelled to restore $22,000 to the treasury. Bonds to that amount were issued to carry out some White Plains, N. Y., June 19.—Harry K. Thaw was a witness for 30 seconds in the proceedings which he has brought in the supreme court to have himself declared sane and free to leave the Matteawan hospital. He was called to the stand by William T. Jerome, who has opposed Thaw's every move to regain his liberty. Most of the session was devoted to reading into the record testimoney taken at previous hearings and at Thaw's trial in 1906. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will be on the stand.

Fake Convention Tickets.

Chicago, June 19.—While tickets to the convention were quoted at $100 each with the demand greater than the supply, hundreds of counterfeit tickets were sold to unsophisticated visitors at $5 apiece. The swindlers did a thriving business with the fraudulent pasteboards within a short distance of the Coliseum doors. A. Scholz presented one of the counterfeit tickets to Doorkeeper Thomas Halpin and when he was refused admission created a disturbance. He was arrested on a disorderly charge.

Man Coughs & Breaks Ribs

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah, Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few tea spoonsful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak, sore lungs. "I feel sure it is a God-send to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia, Mo. "for I believe I would have consumption today if I had not used this great remedy." It's guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at all druggists.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majority of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country. . . . .

WOULD WRECK ENTIRE TARIFF

Northwestern Senators Threaten to Support Democrats.

MOVEMENT LED BY DIXON

Republican Opposition to Reciprocity Would Join Movement to Lower Duties on Manufactures.

Washington, June 20.—Republican opposition to the Canadian reciprocity bill in the senate reached the stage of open revolt. Led by Senator Dixon of Montana, who again failed in his demand for an explanation or a speech in favor of the bill from some of the Republican leaders who champion the measure, the Republican opponents declared that, if the bill passed, many Republicans would join the Democrats in an attempt to lower the duties on all manufactured products.

"When the corner stone is pulled out of the system of protective tariff," said Senator Dixon, "when the farmers' products are thrown into a free market while his purchases continue to be protected, there are many good protectionists in the Republican ranks here who will vote to have the duties pulled down on iron and steel, chemicals, cotton and many other things."

Other Northwestern Republicans signified by their approval of the Montana senator's words that the passage of the reciprocity bill, which, it is admitted, will have a majority of the votes in the senate, will be attended with a fight that threatens to throw open the whole tariff subject.

"We want to make one killing," declared Senator Crawford of South Dakota. "We find the senators from Pennsylvania, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Maine, states that have always reaped the greatest harvest of protection, advocating this measure to put on the free list every single article raised in the Northwest. I want to deal with this matter in its entirety. If Pennsylvania, Mississippi and Massachusetts have joined hands in a new political propaganda, it is time for the rest of the country to strike out on a new tack."

M'CUMBER ASSAILS MEASURE

Declares Reciprocity Will Injure the American Farmer.

Washington, June 15.—Senator McCumber of North Dakota opposed the reciprocity agreement in the senate on the ground that it would injure the American farmer.

"I believe this treaty," said Senator McCumber, "if enacted into law, would not only postpone for many years the consummation of a hope indulged by the farmers of the country, a hope held out to them by every speaker and writer who sought to secure and hold their votes for the protective policy of the country, but that its logical result would be to destroy the policy itself. I must, therefore, either repudiate all I have advocated for years or oppose the consummation of this agreement."

ROOT AMENDMENT MAY FAIL

House Leader Believes It Will Not Pass Senate.

Washington, June 15.—After a conference with President Taft at the White House Majority Leader Underwood of the house declared he thought the Root amendment to the Canadian reciprocity bill would not be adopted by the senate.

"If it should be," he added, "there would be a serious hitch between the house and senate, as the Democrats in the house are pledged against it."

The president also had a conference on the reciprocity bill with Senators Penrose and Smoot. They said the Root amendment was not discussed.

EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS OCCUR

San Francisco, June 16.—Earthquake shocks were recorded by a number of seismographs throughout the West. At Santa Clara college, San Jose, Cal., the record began at 6:28 a. m. The seat of the disturbance appeared to be a considerable distance away in the ocean floor.

At Seattle the sharp disturbance began at 4 p. m., lasting five minutes, followed by tremors for two hours.

CREAMERY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Fire Breaks Out In Local Creamery Early Last Saturday Morning.

FIRE STARTS NEAR CHIMNEY

Only Fast Work by Citizens Saves Building From Total Destruction.

The ringing of the fire bell about half past seven Saturday morning brought the biggest portion of our residents from their respective breakfast tables into the streets, all eager to see where the fire was. It did not take more than a glance to discover this, however, when dense smoke was seen rolling from the roof of the local creamery. To an observer at a distance the building seemed doomed to be transformed into a heap of ashes.

The fire originated near the smoke-stack and went upward under the iron roofing. Helmer Reirsgaard, who was at the creamery at the time was attracted to the engine room by the smell of smoke, and discovered the fire in the ceiling.

He made his way up town as rapidly as possible to spread the alarm, which brought the fire departmentand the biggest portion of the male population to the scene of the fire.

After a futual attempt at making the fire pump work a bucket brigade was formed and after a few minutes of strenuous fire fighting the flames were extinguished. Outside of scorching the roof no other damage was done. The loss is covered by insurance.

Gollmar Brothers Circus

This is an age of immence proportions, the scale of every project is being constantly enlarged. This is certanly true of the circus busness. The sleeping cars of a circus are fitted with stationary berths that cannot be folded away, as in a Pullman. They are more commodious and commodious and comfortable than those in the palace cars.

An extra sleeper is required because of the manny preformers and musicians. This too, is a stateroom car, and cost in the neighborhood of $5,000. In order that they might prevail upon certain preformers, who had never traveled with a circus to join his galaxy of stars, the Gollmar Brothers have had several stateroom cars built. If the readers could look in upon the occupants of these cottages on wheels, they would be surprised by the homelike appearance of the furnishings, the shelves of books and magazinei, the cozy corners, and bric-a-brac. It all tends to make the life of the preformers a plesant one, but it is a very expensive undertaking for the circus manager.

About the only complaint heard of Gollmar Brothers Show last season was that it was to big. There was to much of it. In spite of this, the magnitude of this show will be more bewildering than ever this year. In order to secure the superior talent, the new and orignal acts to be seen with the Gollmer Brothers Circus, it is necessary that even for this year alone, there should be an outlay of $30,000 above the allotted amount.

When this modern great tented enterprise visits Red Lake Falls Tuesday July 16; Thief River Falls Wednesday July 17, the universal verdict will be that such preformers are entitled to all the comforts of home.

Mail Carries Will Fly

This is an age of great discoveries. Progress rides on the air. Soon we may see Uncle Sam's mail carriers flying in all directions, transporting mail. People take a wonderful interest in a discovery that benefits them. That's why Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs, Colds and other throat and lung diseases is the most popular medicine in America. The weather of the past week has been a good comparison to the boiling heat of the tropics. Last Friday the thermometer registered 100 in the shade and on Saturday afternoon went up to 104. This is the highest degrees registered here for a number of years. The heat has done a slight damage to crops on sandy soil but for the most part the fields are withstanding the heat without damage. The rain of Tuesday afternoon refreshed things a little but was not sufficient to be of any great benefit to the crops.

26 BALLOTS CAST WITHOUT ANY RESULT

No Way Seen to Break the Deadlock.

New Jerseyite's Vote Run to 407½—Missourian Drops to 436½—Dark Horse.

Baltimore, Md. — With Governor Woodrow Wilson gaining on each ballot and Speaker Champ Clark constantly losing ground in the race for the presidential nomination, the Democratic national convention at 11:05 o'clock Saturday night adjourned until Monday at 11 o'clock.

Twenty-six ballots had been taken since the first call of the states and there was no hope of a final verdict. It is against all political precedent for a national convention to sit on Sunday, but that day was a day of important conferences among the party leaders and a day of hard work for the campaign managers.

The ballot Saturday ran from the thirteenth to the twenty-sixth. Wilson began at 356 and ended at 407½, a net gain during the day of 51 votes. Speaker Clark began at 554 and fell to 463½, a loss of 91 votes. The anti-Clark leaders in the convention called attention to the fact that this almost exactly offset the 90 votes given to Clark by the New York delegation. Breaks to Governor Wilson were coming from many different delegations as the balloting closed. His managers believed that once he had overtaken Speaker Clark the switching of delegates would be complete. The Clark forces made a desperate effort Sunday to win back some of the delegates lost Sunday and in this they had the personal direction of the speaker himself.

WOODROW WILSON.

The Wilson forces, in the meantime, were fighting not only to hold their gains of yesterday, but to induce more to desert the other candidates.

Senator Stone of Missouri made a motion to eliminate the candidate receiving the lowest number of votes on each succeeding ballot after the twenty-seventh, until only one—the winner—was left in the race. There was a storm of objection and the subject was pressed no further.

The Harmon delegates from Ohio threw their support to Speaker Clark on several ballots, but they did not materially help him toward the necessary two-thirds vote because of the gradual inroads made by Wilson. They then changed back to Harmon and remained there until the last ballot of the evening.

The dark horse attempt was made when Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston cast 34 of the state's 36 votes for Eugene Noble Foss, governor of the state. The convention was not in a compromise mood and Fitzgerald was denied the five minutes he asked, on unanimous consent, although it was known that he wanted to place the name of Foss formally before the convention.

Foss stretched the 34 votes start Massachusetts had given him into 43 and held it there, but could get no further.

And so the convention was left.

Bryan is a factor that no one can reckon on. Bryan has sprung an average of one sensation a day since the convention started in.

Speaker Champ Clark broke with William Jennings Bryan, Sunday. Hastening over from Washington, intending personally to denounce the Nebraskan in the convention for Bryan's charge that Clark had "dealt" with Tammany to obtain the presidential nomination Clark arrived here to find the session adjourned. He conferred with his lieutenants and issued a statement demanding that Bryan retract the aspersion that Clark had entered into an alliance with the privilege-seeking interests. The statement is as follows:

Saturday in the national convention an outrageous aspersion was cast upon me and through me upon the democratic party by one who, of all men ought to be the last to besmudge or betray his friends or his party.

"So far as I am personally concerned, it is enough to say that the charge which reflects upon my personal or party integrity is utterly and absolutely false. I might afford to forget myself, but I am by the choice of the democratic majority of the house of representatives, the ranking official democrat in national public life. I cannot be false or corrupt without reflecting upon my party in the most serious way.

"Any man who enters into an alliance with any selfish interest or privileged class of this country to gain the nomination for the presidency is unworthy of the presidency and the speakership of the house. I have not entered into such an alliance and the democrat, however distinguished, who charges me with this act, is a traitor to the democratic party and to his professed friendship for me.

"I am not here to plead for a nomination or to defend any man's political action. I ask no undue consideration from any man, be he friend or foe, but I demand exact justice from every democrat either in this convention or throughout the nation.

"With William J. Bryan and his charge made in the convention, the issue is proof or retraction. I shall expect to meet that issue.

—"Champ Clark."

Among those present at the conference were Chairman Ollie M. James of Kentucky, former Governor David R. Francis of Missouri, Clark's floor leader at the convention; Senator Stone of Missouri, William H. Hearst, John Temple Graves, Representative Scott Ferris of Oklahoma, Delegate McGuire of California and Senator Reed of Missouri, who nominated the speaker.

Baltimore, Md. — Bristling with Democratic Progressivism, the platform on which the Democratic party will stand during the approaching campaign was completed by the committee on resolutions and awaits only the approval of the presidential nominee to be presented to the convention.

The document is the result of 48 hours of deliberation on the part of the committee.

It is an almost entirely new document, although the recommendations of the New York delegation were followed in many particulars.

From the first to last the committee's deliberations were characterized by harmony. The unanimous demand was for the most pronounced declarations in favor of Progressive policies all along the line and the only difference of opinion arose over the best methods of expressing them. The result is a platform of generally advanced views, although many of them are less radical than the party declarations of other years.

The document covers subjects of importance which has been the subject of party discussion during the last four years. None of them are elaborately presented, but the large number of subjects renders it voluminous.

Members of the committee express general satisfaction with the outcome of their vote, and Mr. Bryan, who took a most active part in framing the paper, made the prediction that it would arouse the disapproval of not to exceed a dozen members of the convention.

Speaker Goes to Baltimore and Demands Retraction of Tammany Charge.

Under the new rule adopted, the platform will not be presented to the convention until after the nomination of the candidates.

Its submission will follow the selection of a vice presidential candidate.

Same of its latient points are:

Favors immediate downward revision of present duties, especially upon necessities of life. Also favors gradual reduction so as not to interfere with or destroy legitimate industries. Denounces President Taft for vetoing tariff bill of last congress.

Condemns Republican party "for failure to redeem its promises of 1908 for downward revision."

Takes issue with the Republican platform as to the high cost of living, contending it is largely due to high tariff laws.

Favors vigorous enforcement of the criminal features of the anti-trust law. Demands such additional legislation as may be necessary to crush private monopoly. Favors prohibition of holding companies, interlocking directors, stock watering, etc.

Denounces as "usurpation" the efforts of Republicans to deprive states of their rights and to enlarge powers of the federal government.

"There is," says the platform, "no twilight seen between the nation and the state in which exploiting interests can take refuge from both."

Urges support of proposed constitutional amendments pending in various states' legislatures, providing for an income tax and election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. As justification of the demands of the party for publicity of campaign expenditures attention is directed "to the enormous expenditures of money in behalf of the president and predecessor in the recent presidential contest."

Declares for presidential preference primaries: Directs national committee to provide for election at primaries of members of national committee.

Pledges party to enactment of law prohibiting campaign contributions by corporations and unreasonable campaign contributions by individuals.

Favors single presidential term and making president ineligible to re-election.

Favors efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines and a valuation of these companies by the interestate commerce commission, and also legislation against overissuance of stocks of these corporations.

In connection with a demand for such a revision of the banking laws as will give temporary relief in case of financial distress, there is a denunciation of the Aldrich bill prepared by the monetary commission. The present method of depositing government funds is condemned, and the party is pledged to the enactment of a law for the deposit of such funds by competitive bidding in state or national banks without discrimination as to locality.

Pledges party to enactment of legislation to prevent devastation of lower Mississippi valley by floods and the control of the Mississippi is declared to be a national rather than a state problem. The maintenance of a navigable channel is also recommended.

Favors national aid regarding post roads.

Favors encouragment of agriculture and legislation to suppress gambling in agricultural products.

Believes in fostering growth of a merchant marine and urges speedy enactment of laws for greater security of life and property at sea.

Favors reorganization of the civil service and says laws should be honestly and rigidly enforced.

Demands for Alaska full enjoyment of rights and privileges of territorial American citizenship at home and abroad."

Favors such encouragement as can be properly given Panama canal exposition.

Renews declaration of last platform regarding generous pension policy.

The conclusion of the platform says: "Our platform is out of principles which we believe to be essential to our national welfare," and invites cooperation of "all citizens who believe in maintaining unimpaired the institutions and traditions of our country."

Cure-All Poured Into Sewer.

Washington, July 1. — The department of agriculture, through the pure food board has just put the ban on a remarkable remedy. The product was a "healing balsam," manufactured in New York. Chemists at the bureau discovered that this astounding discovery which would "cure" almost every disease in medical books, was composed of a plain balsam mixture, with rosin added apparently to cheapen the solution. The "cure" was poured down a sewer.

Murder at Des Moines.

Des Moines, June 9.—With a bullet through her heart, Mrs. Mary Phillips, aged 28, was found dead in bed at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Whitcomb, here, and on the floor with a bullet hole through his head was the body of a man supposed to be Walter Scott, a business man. While the police think it a case of murder and suicide, over a lovers' quarrel, they are working on the rumor that it was committed by a jealous rival. A revolver was found behind a picture frame.

Two Die in Louisville Fire.

Louisville, Kentucky. — Two persons were killed and three seriously hurt in a fire that attacked a second floor dormitory in a business building here. One of the victims was a homeless woman. Detective John Galvin, keeper of the Bertillion gallery, saw the flames running up the wall. He ran for a pail of water and turned in a fire alarm. Jailor Needham also grabbed a pail of water. Firemen came up the jail elevator with tarpaulin and axes. The combined efforts of the officers and firemen put out the fire with only a damage of $20.

Then, with a smile, Mrs. Hewitt uttered this epigram in her sex's behalf:

"Few are the men who would have reached the top of the ladder if their wives hadn't steadied it for them."

A Matter of Names.

ALMOST FRANTIC WITH ITCHING ECZEMA

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between the fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality. My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redonda Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Impractical on the Face of It.

"I understand," said Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "dat dey has invented a machine foh washin' an' ironin' money."

"Go 'long, man," replied Miss Miami Brown. "You knows des as well as I does dese white folks ain' g'ineter leave no clothes lines full o' two-dollar bills hangin' out in de yard."—Washington Star.

DREADED ATAXIA

What Active Treatment With Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Accomplished in a Recent Case.

Mr. Francis M. Poole, a harness maker, of Garvin, Lyon Co., Minn., says: "My illness started in 1902, with sharp pains all through my limbs. At first I thought it was rheumatism but the pains kept getting more and more severe and I grew steadily worse. Later a numbness came over my feet. It gradually extended up my legs to my spine and waist. By this time I had lost all control of my legs. Next my bladder and bowels were affected and I lost all control of them. At this stage of the disease I was perfectly helpless and from November, 1905, to April, 1906, I was confined to the bed. My memory was so affected that I thought I would lose my mind. I looked just like a dead person. My lips and finger nails were blue. I suffered with terrible sharp, shooting pains and could get relief only from the use of morphine.

"I was treated by five St. Paul doctors. All of them pronounced my case locomotor ataxia. One said I could not live a year and another told my wife all he could do for me was to give medicine to relieve the pain. I was discouraged and, when my brother-in-law urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, I did so willingly for he had read of their curing a case similar to mine. I started to take the pills in March, 1906, while I was still confined to bed. I took several boxes when I felt a slight change for the better and had a healthier look. I was finally able to go to the country but kept on with the treatment. The bluish color left my lips and my eyes became brighter. I took the pills a long time and the next spring in May I could walk around. In June I went to work although still weak. I kept on gaining and am now working without the return of a symptom of my former trouble and without losing a days' work. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People absolutely cured me and I want all fellow sufferers to know of my wonderful recovery."

Those who are interested in the treatment which cured this case should have our booklet, "Diseases of the Nervous System," which will be sent to every nervous sufferer upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50 by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Every time a girl sees a handsome young man she wonders whose sweetheart he is.

What Difference Did It Make?

Walking behind some colored girls, homeward bound from school, in a Missouri town once upon a time, a visitor overheard the following unblushing and giggling, rich-voiced and sparkling-eyed assertion of individuality from one of them: "Yeh, she kep' me in, but I don' know inny mo' 'bout Caesar now 'n I did befo' han'. An' ef she kep' me in twel Gabriel blows his horn I wudden know an' I wudden care. What diffunce it make to me whut ol' man Caesar done away yandeh befo' de waw!"—Evening Post.

Snappy Age.

The young man breezed into the old man's library.

"I met your daughter," he announced, "at a Fifth avenue reception. I want to marry her next Friday afternoon at 3:30. She's willing."

The old man turned to his card index.

"Which daughter?" he asked.

"It's Miss Ethel."

"All right," said the old man. "Make it 4:30 and I'll attend the wedding. I have an enagegemnt at the other hour."

It was so ordered. This is a snappy age.—Pittsburg Post.

Left No Room for Doubt.

Wichita lawyers are yet talking about the way Wallace B. Baker, who was found guilty recently in the district court of selling mortgaged property, showed his ignorance of married life. The prosecuting attorney was trying to show that Baker wasn't married. He asked Baker the following questions:

"Did you ever send your wife any dresses?"

"Yes, I sent her four dresses."

"What kind of dresses did you send her?"

"I sent her one good dress and three common dresses."

"How much did you pay for the good dress, Mr. Baker?"

"Oh, I guess about $4.50."

The lawyer put Mr. Baker down then and there as an unmarried man and a poor guesser.—Exchange.

DUBIOUS

About What Her Husband Would Say.

A Mich. woman tried Postum because coffee disagreed with her and her husband. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee. She writes:

"My husband was sick for three years with catarrh of the bladder, and palpitation of the heart, caused by coffee. Was unable to work at all and in bed part of the time.

"I had stomach trouble, was weak and fretful so I could not attend to my housework—both of us using coffee all the time and not realizing it was harmful.

"One morning the grocer's wife said she believed coffee was the cause of our trouble and advised Postum. I took it home rather dubious what my husband would say—he was fond of coffee.

"But I took coffee right off the table and we haven't used a cup of it since. You should have seen the change in us, and now my husband never complains of heart palpitation any more. My stomach trouble went away in two weeks after I began Postum. My children love it, and it does them good, which can't be said of coffee.

"A lady visited us who was usually half sick. I told her I'd make her a cup of Postum. She said it was tasteless stuff, but she watched me make it, boiling it thoroughly for 15 minutes, and when done, she said it was splendid. Long boiling brings out the flavor and food quality." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

REGINA SWEPT BY CYCLONE

Half the Town Demolished--Between 400 and 500 Inhabitants Killed.

Regina, Saskatchewan.—Between 400 and 500 persons are believed to be dead, scores of others injured, and millions of dollars in property destroyed as a result of a cyclone which struck this city, cutting a wide swath, beginning at the southern and central residential sections and extending into the very heart of the business district, converting whole blocks into masses of tangled wreckage.

At the present time no complete estimate can be made of the actual number of deaths but every ambulance in the city has been working since six o'clock carrying the bodies to the hospitals which were filled to their utmost capacity early in the evening. Numbers of improvised hospitals were hastily constructed in some of the larger buildings left standing after the storm had passed.

Crowds of volunteers all over the city are assisting in the work of searching the wreckage and for hours hardly a minute went by that a dead body or the mangled form of some living victim was not uncovered. Hurrying men and women, speeding on their errands of mercy filled the streets as the night wore on, while the authorities strove to bring order out of confusion, succoring the living and to determine as best they could as to the identity and number of dead. The sweep of the storm, the worst in the history of the Canadian Northwest, was over a city which only a short time before had completed the work of decking itself in gala attire for the celebration of Dominion day. Bunting and flags covered the buildings everywhere and networks of colored electric lights were strung and ready for illumination. Through these gaily decorated streets the tornado swept and within a half-hour, Regina had been turned into a city of mourning. In the track of the storm, building after building lay in ruin, shrouded in its gay colored bunting.

Everywhere are men and women with heads and hands swathed in bandages, but all thinking of others' troubles, forgetful of their own.

It was 5 o'clock in the afternoon when the cyclone struck the city and in the history of the West, no such storm has ever been known.

Coming from the south, it dropped just a few blocks north of the southern city limits.

The Methodist and Baptist and Knox churches, all magnificent structures, were the first of the larger buildings struck.

The former went with a crash that hardly sounded above the howling of the storm and the roar of the cloudburst that accompanied the wind.

The greater part of the roof was removed from the latter structure and the storm moved on across Victoria square, removing the walls and roof from the Y. W. C. A., badly wrecking the magnificent new public library, both new this year; and passing thence to the Presbyterian church, which fared but little better than the Methodist structure.

The Y. M. C. A. was next in line, and half of the building was demolished in an instant. Three small buildings were moved from their location, some being carried across the street, and the Masonic Temple was next attacked and was almost raised.

In the next block to the west and one block farther north, the telephone exchange stood practically by itself except for a few smaller buildings.

Upon this the force of the storm had an instantaneous effect, laying the building a flat mess of wreckage, under which the girls were imprisoned for over an hour.

Up until late in the evening absolutely no attempt was made to estimate the loss of property. The work of life saving will probably be continued all day today.

Except where it is necessary for the rescue of bodies, the ruins was left lying where they fell.

One of the best of the effects of the storm can be had from Lorne street, looking south. Hardly a residence is left standing on this street. Facing on Victoria square are the Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian churches, all of which are ruined and the Y. W. C. A., the new public library, and several smaller buildings are practically destroyed.

The C. P. R. railway yards are a flat expanse of ruined shops and trains. Hardly a car remains whole. Several were picked up bodily and carried distances in the air and one was hurled through the freight sheds.

The whole north side of the city is practically wiped out.

No one knows how many are dead on this side of the city.

A canoe was carried from Wascana lake, a distance of three quarters of a mile, to Victoria park, and dropped there. Others, together with Dinghies and even small sailing vessels, lie strewn over the southern section of the city at distances varying up to half a mile from the lake.

The cupola of the Baptist church was dropped in the middle of a street three blocks away.

The electricians have been wandering through the devasted section cutting live wires. Power came on about 9 o'clock, after being off since the storm.

Husbands are hunting for wives, mothers for their children, men stop from time to time in their work of rescue to ask acquaintances passing for news of friends and relatives.

Many families were separated at the time of the storm, as the day was a hot one, and some sought comfort in the parks, while others remained at home.

Numbers were out on the waters of Wascana lake. Five are known to be drowned, failing to reach the shores in time. Every house in the city that is standing has been thrown open to the homeless.

One of the large grain elevators was picked up and thrown a distance of 50 feet from its foundation, falling on a freight train of goods and cattle cars.

One house barely on the edge of the storm was picked off its foundation and settled squarely on the vacated site.

TARIFF REFORM IS DEMOCRATIC CREED

Leading Plank of Platform Adopted by Baltimore Convention.

FAVORS FIGHT ON TRUSTS

Action of Republican Administration in Compromising With Standard Oil and Tobacco Combines Condemned—Views on Other Subjects.

Following are the principal planks of the platform adopted by the Democratic national convention at Baltimore.

The Tariff Reform.

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government under the Constitution has no right or power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of government honestly and economically administered.

"The high Republican tariff is the principal cause of the unequal distribution of wealth; it is a system of taxation which makes the rich richer and the poor poorer; under its operations the American farmer and laboring man are the chief sufferers; it raises the cost of the necessaries of life to them, but does not protect their product or wages.

"We favor the immediate downward revision of the existing high, and in many cases, prohibitive tariff duties, insisting that material reductions be speedily made upon the necessaries of life. Articles entering into competition with trust controlled products and articles of American manufacture where sold abroad more cheaply than at home could be put upon the free list.

"We denounce the action of President Taft in vetoing the bills to reduce the tariff in the cotton, woolen, metals and chemicals schedules and the farmers free list bills, all of which was designed to give immediate relief to the masses from the exactions of the trusts.

"The Republican party, while promising tariff revision, has shown by its tariff legislation that such revision is not to be in the people's interests and having been faithless to its pledges of 1908 it should no longer enjoy the confidence of the nation.

High Cost of Living.

"The high cost of living is a serious problem in every American home. The Republican party in its platform attempts to escape from responsibility for present conditions by denying that they are due to a protective tariff. We take issue with them on this subject and charge that excessive prices result in a large measure from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican party, and from trusts and commercial conspirators fostered and encouraged by such laws, and we assert that no substantial relief can be secured for the people until import duties on the necessaries of life are materially reduced, and those criminal conspiracies broken up.

Anti-Trust Law.

"A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We therefore favor the vigorous enforcement of the criminal as well as the civil law against trusts and trust officials, and demand enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

"We condemn the action of the Republican administration in compromising with the Standard Oil Company and the tobacco trust and its failure to invoke the criminal provisions of the anti-trust law against the officers of those corporations after the court had declared that from the undisputed facts in the record they had violated the criminal provisions of the law.

"We regret that Sherman anti-trust law has received a judicial construction depriving it of much of its efficacy, and we favor the enactment of legislation which will restore to the statute the strength of which it has been deprived by such interpretation.

Income Tax and Popular Election of Senators.

"We congratulate the country upon the triumph of two important reforms demanded in the last national platform, namely, the amendment of the federal constitution authorizing an income tax and the amendment providing for the popular election of senators, and we call upon the people of all the states to rally to the support of the pending propositions and secure their ratification.

"We note with gratification the unanimous sentiment in favor of publicity before the election of campaign contributions—a measure demanded in our national platform of 1908 and at that time opposed by the Republican party, and we commend the Democratic House of Representatives for extending the doctrine of publicity to recommendations, verbal and written, upon which presidential appointments are made, to the ownership and control of newspapers and to the expenditures made by and in behalf of those who aspire to presidential nominations and we point for additional justification for this legislation to the enormous expenditures of money in behalf of the president and his predecessor in the recent contest for the Republican nomination for president.

Presidential Primaries.

"The movement towards more popular government should be promoted through legislation in each state which will permit the expression of the preference of the electors for national candidates at presidential primaries.

"We direct that the national committee incorporate in the call for the next nominating convention a requirement that all expressions of preference for presidential candidates shall be given and the selection of delegates and alternates be through a primary election conducted by the party organization in each state where such expression and election are not provided for by state law.

Term of President.

"We favor a single presidential term, and to the end urge the adoption of an amendment to the constitution making the president of the United States ineligible to re-election, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle.

Railroads, Express Companies, Telegraph and Telephone Lines.

"We favor the efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines engaged in interstate commerce. To this end we recommend the valuation of railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines by the interstate commerce commission, such valuation to take into consideration the physical value of the property, the original cost, the cost of reproduction, and any element of value that will render the valuation fair and just.

Banking Legislation.

"We oppose the so-called Aldrich bill or the establishment of a central bank, and we believe the people of the country will be largely freed from panics and consequent un-employment and business depression by such a systematic revision of our banking laws as will render temporary relief in localities where such relief is needed, with protection from control or domination by what is known as the money trust.

Parcels Post and Rural Delivery.

"We favor the establishment of a parcels post or postal express, and also the extension of the rural delivery system as rapidly as practicable.

The campaign contributions plank pledges the party to the enactment of a law prohibiting any corporation from contributing to a campaign fund. It also limits individual contributions to a "reasonable maximum."

The Democratic congress is heartily commended for its long list of laws for the benefit of the people after a generation of unlimited power by the Republican party. The next plank arraigns the Republican party for waste of "the money wrung from the people by oppressive taxation."

A plank on rural credits is of importance. It is recommended that an investigation of agricultural credit societies in foreign countries be made looking toward devising a suitable system for the United States. A waterways plank provides for federal control of the Mississippi and other waterways. The plan is to maintain an average depth on the big river so it will be navigable, and construct docks to prevent further floods. This plank also favors draining of all swamp lands.

The platform favors post roads. It reaffirms its declarations in the 1908 platform in regard to labor. It holds there should be a modification of the injunctional laws.

It also recommends a department of labor with a cabinet officer.

The conservation plank is also of importance and holds that conservation and development should proceed for the benefit of all the people. Immediate action is favored to make available the coal deposits of Alaska.

A pure food and public health plank declares for the union and strengthening of the various governmental agencies relating to pure food, quarantine, vital statistics and human health. This department should be administered without partiality or discrimination in favor of or against any school of medicine. The civil service law should be honestly and rigidly enforced. Legislation is favored to promote law reform. The "policy of emperialism" in the Philippines is denounced. It favors the declaration of the independence of these islands. Arizona and New Mexico are welcomed to the sisterhood of states.

The Old-Fashioned Fire.

Could anything be more refreshing than the smell of the old-fashioned wood fire in late spring or early autumn? There is something grimy in the reek of coal, and the odor of gas is nauseating. Modern inventions may have brought their "conveniences" but a staid old senator, who lately passed beyond, insisted that when he wanted a real night of comfort, after the family had all gone south for the winter, he would hie himself home, build an old-fashioned wood fire in the cook stove and sit around as in his old boyhood days on the farm. "What memories it recalls," he would say, "to hear the crackle of the wood and sniff the smoke that seems to be purifying rather than oppressive!"—"Affairs and Folks," Joe Mitchell Chapple, in Joe Chapple's News Letter.

Insinuation.

"Fish is a good brain diet."

"I suppose you take weakfish for yours."

Death Shuns Man Who Is Prepared.

Ernest Feldkirch, a Gottingen (Germany) carpenter of 86 years of age, has cheerfully looked death in the face for 26 years. His first illness, which came when he was 60, suggested to him that, having no relatives, he should provide for his burial himself, and as soon as he recovered he set to work and made himself a coffin, which he placed conveniently beside his bed. After a number of years it began to decay, and he was obliged to make another. The second is now in the same condition as the fist, and his friends are urging Feldkirch to discard it for a third. The old man, who is hale and happy as ever, declared that he will make one more, and if he finds it decaying, he will give the business up as a bad job.

Awful.

The president of the university had dark circles under his eyes. His cheek was pallid; his lips were trembling; he wore a haunted expression. Every now and then he turned and glanced apprehensively behind him.

"You look ill," said his wife. "What is wrong, dear?"

"Nothing much," he replied. "But—I—I had a fearful dream last night, and I feel this morning as if—as if I—" He hesitated and stammered. It was evident that his nervous system was shattered.

"What was the dream?" asked his wife.

"I—I—dreamed the trustees required that—that I should—that I should pass the freshman examination for—admission!" sighed the president.—Youth's Companion.

On Land and Sea.

"Circumstances alter cases even in human nature."

"Yes. Take Jorkins, for instance. He's one of those grandiose Chesterfields who would give up his seat in a lifeboat to a woman, and then make an attempt to lead the saloon orchestra in 'Nearer, My God, to Thee' as the ship sinks."

"I see. On land, Jorkins is the fellow at 6 o'clock who horns through the women and children and gets a window seat in his homebound street car."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientific for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. Le Clerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Fougera Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

Every woman before she is allowed to vote should be able to make a cherry pie.

A man winks his eye an average of 30,000 times a day, and a woman's tongue makes 78,000 motions every twenty-four hours. At this rate how ong will it take the man to catch up?

While our schools are being conducted very satisfactorily, we believe many of the problems in mathematics are not practical. Why not have problems useful in everyday life? For instance the following:

A tin pedler cheats a farmer wife out of eleven cents on her rags and seventeen cents on a calf skin, while she works off two dozen bad eggs on him at fourteen cents, and stuffs a pound of hen's feathers into a sack of geese feathers she sells him at forty cents a pound. Wonder how much the tin pedler is ahead.

Some fiels in North Dakota are yellow with wild mustard now, and some in Minnesota are not much better. The carful cultivation of corn or other cultivated crop, with pure seed will practically eliminate weeds. The last cultivation of corn, should, however, not be very deep, as the roots have spread considerable by this time.

Miss Regna Rice who has been at Grand Forks came home to spend the Fourth with the home folks.

Insect Bite Costs Leg

A Boston man lost his leg from the bite of an insect two years before. To avert such calamities from stings and bites of insects use Bucklen's Arnica Salve promptly to kill the poison and prevent inflammation, swelling and pain. Heals burns, boils ulcers, piles, eczema, cuts, bruises Only 25 cents at all druggists.

Fodder Corn

Owing to the fact that so much land has been sold during the past season in this country to actual settlers that are moving here this spring and the majarity of these being unimproved land the result will be that hay land will be more scarce than ever as also more people during the last two years have gone into the dairy business thus requiring about twice the amount of hay that was used in former years so it would be well for the farmers to make arrangements for the feed as early as possible, and having recently made a trip thru a certain dairy district in the southern part of the state, where there, of course is no wild hay but an abundance of both clover and timothy we find that even there the farmers are prefering the fodder corn to the tame grass and that about the same amount of feed can be gotten from 10 acres of well cultivated fodder corn as they would get from 160 acres of either clover and timothy besides being a great deal more nutrius and especially far better for mil l cows for milk purposes. Even people now moving here that have no old fields on the land need not hesitate to put in fodder corn on the prairie sod broken this spring provided they will break it well and thoroughly disc it up and if given a good coat of old manure the result will still be better. We would advise the farmers figuring on planting fodder corn to make arrangements for the seed in good season and see to it that they are getting the right kind and best adapted to the country.

GOPHER NEWS NOTES.

Minnesota Events of the Week In Condensed Form.

Virginia.—A council of the Knights of Columbus was installed in Virginia Sunday.

Cass Lake.—The postoffice at Ferris was robbed and all the stamps, money and articles of value were taken.

Winnebago.—The Southern Minnesota Firemen's association will hold its annual meeting in this village June 20 and 21.

Moose Lake. — Arthur Bloomquist was burned to death and six other persons were injured in a fire which occurred here.

Duluth.—Three laborers employed by the Great Northern were struck by a passenger train and killed five miles west of Carlton.

Mankato. — Engelbret Schorn, a butcher, shot himself with a revolver, dying instantly. He was 52 years old, and leaves a widow and daughter.

Ely.—Long Lake claimed the first victim for the year. Carl Marianis, 12 years old, son of Tony Marianis, was drowned while fishing from some logs.

Winnebago.—Bids have been opened for the construction of the dormitory for girls at Parker college. Otto Neitge of Mankato is the lowest bidder, at $22,557.

Washington.—On the recommendation of Representative Steenerson, Abraham Lincoln Isenberger has been appointed postmaster at Ogema, Becker county, Minnesota.

Moorhead.—Robert Sloane, 60 years old, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the livery barn owned by Howard Shippey at Hawley, Minn., 20 miles east of here.

Duluth. — Sir William Mackenzie, president of the Canadian Northern road, and other officials of that system, arrived here from the East to inspect the company's extension from Virginia to Duluth.

Winona.—Young Rohland, who has been held since April 22 charged with having entered a Milwaukee road box car and taken several pairs of shoes, entered a plea of guilty and was given an indeterminate sentence in the penitentiary.

Rochester.—Dr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Mayo, Dr. and Mrs. Christopher Graham, Dr. and Mrs. Donald Belfour and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kahler, of this city, have returned from a two months' European tour. Dr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Mayo have now departed for Europe.

St. Paul.—Definite decision has been reached not to appeal the oleomargarine case to the United States Supreme Court, according to Alex Janes, assistant attorney general. The state Supreme Court held the law passed by the 1911 session of the Legislature to be unconstitutional insofar as it applied to coloring the oleo to resemble butter.

St. Paul.—George S. Loftus, president of the Minnesota Progressive Republican league, probably will become a candidate for railroad and warehouse commissioner. It is said that the Progressives have picked J. H. Grass of Fergus Falls as his running mate. J. A. Manahan, St. Paul, will be the Progressives' candidate for attorney general.

St. Paul.—C. D. Bensel of Montevideo, licensed to practice law in Minnesota in 1875, has been cited to appear before the state Supreme Court June 11 to face disbarment proceedings. Chief Justice Start issued the order at the request of the state board of law examiners. Attorney Bensel is charged with drawing complaints against three prominent women of Montevideo, and incorporating slanderous statements in the complaints.

St. James.—The state seat of learning, the University of Minnesota, was shifted to Southwestern Minnesota, when the "University week" opened in six towns for a rotating program of six days. President George E. Vincent headed the staff of the traveling university here and gave an address in the opera house before several hundred people. Despite recurrent showers the attendance was large and the intellectual show will be on in full blast tonight.

Vernon Center.—The Vernon Center Co-operative Creamery association held a largely attended picnic and meeting and was addressed by W. F. Schilling of Northfield, Sam Haugdahl of St. Peter and Mrs. Margaret Blair of the state agricultural college. About 400 were present. Mr. Schilling spoke on the business side of farming. He has just returned from a month's trip in the east and compared the conditions in the factories there with the Group of Full-Blood Indians in Summer Camp.

The house in the upper corner has been used for winter quarters.

These are the Indians infected with disease. They are under the direct care of the Indian agent at White Earth and get rations when they need them.

They are the Indians the Graham committee investigated on its trip, and are not affected by the Clapp act, as they were not given the right to sell their allotments.

A FEW

CLOTHES FACTS

It's the inner construction of a garment, the part you can't see, that determines the "length of life" of the garment. It matters not how well a coat looks, or how well it fits, when you first put it on, if the inside of the coat isn't honestly constructed of the proper materials. It is only a matter of a short time, usually a very short time, before the garment has lost all shape. The collar doesn't fit, the shoulders lose their "sit" the front sags and the garment gets that "all gone" look, so characteristic of "cheap" clothes.

In the construction of OUR line of tailor made suits only the highest grade of materials and trimming are used. These are carefully shaped and built into the coat by the most skilled and contientious workmen.

The result is a garment that will stand the strain of everyday wear and the SEVEREST TESTS of exposturs to every kind of weather, a garment that will FIT and RETAIN its shapeliness even after the outer fabric itself is worn thread bare, a garment that will stand everything but POSITIVE ABUSE.

Why not have a tailor made suit, built to fit YOU individually when it costs no more than a "hand-me-down."

It is usaless to try to chronical all the outside visitors who honored us by there presence on July 4th, suffice to say that many nearby towns were well represented. Apparently everyone enjoyed themselves to the utmost and partook largely of the pastimes prepared for their amusement. As far as good behavior goes the present celebration can be equalled among the best of them.

Why does the young man who rides a bicycle double himself up like a home made doughnut the minute he begins to work the pedals? Yes, and why does a fellow when he goes to throw a ball first have to screw it into the palm of his right hand with his left, then hop on his right foot, while he bumps his chin with his knee before he throws it? And why does a man when he gets a raw-boned plug and a ten dollar cart have to rein the poor crowbait up like a trutle treading water, till it can't see the ground before it, and goes stumbling along as if trying to read the answer in the stars? Why does a girl whom nature has given a clear and healthy complexion have to paint till she can't wink for fear of breaking the enamel? Why does she bang her hair like a spitz poddle and make her head look like a window mop? There are a great many other queer things which we would like to know but will wait until some other time.

Bring us the news.

CELEBRATION WAS A SUCCESS

Celebration of Nation's Birthday Passes of In a Very Successful Manner.

LARGE CROWDS IN ATTENDANCE

Excellent Order Prevailed Throughout Entire Day and In Evening.

July Fourth is now a thing of the past and the celebration of the nation's holiday here can justly be put down in history as a charming success and an advertisement for our village of no meagre proportions. The weather man could hardly have dished out a better brand of weather for a celebration, and more so for a Fourth of July celebration which generally calls forth inclement weather. In the evening, however, a brisk shower of rain fell, but to late too spoil much of the fun for anyone. The more patriotic of our populace were out bright and early to fire off the salutes to usher in our nation's birthday, and did their full duty in awakening everyone from their slumbers and to remind them of the approaching event.

The morning train from Thief River Falls brought in a large delegation from that place, who were the first of the outside visitors to arrive. During the course of the morning large numbers from the country, and nearby towns began to arrive. A large number autoed and drove over from Red Lake Falls during the course of the forenoon and by noon probably the largest number ever in Plummer at one time were assembled.

The program was opened about 11 o'clock by a few well rendered selections by the local band, followed by the oration of Atty. Rowberg, of Thief River Falls.

At 1:30 the game between the Terrebone and Plummer base ball teams was the next number on the program and was witnessed by a very large audience. The game started out favoring the visiting team and for a while it seemed that the locals would have to be content with a "goose egg," but as the game progressed the Terrebonne "stone wall" was shattered to pieces and the locals managed to score a few. Volleys of kicks and threats to "kill the umpire" were hurled at the "bumpires" for some of their decision but as they were not either from Terrebonne or Plummer it can not be stated that they showed any partiality. Both teams are credited with some good work, as well as a number of errors at different times, which ran the score up high. The final count was 13 to 6 in favor of Terrebonne.

Following the ball game was the races and varios pastimes which follows, with the winners of the first and second prizes:

Farmers running race,
Geo. Brekert, 1st
H. Coppe, 2nd

Three-legged race,
Harry Connors, 1st
Roy Wichterman, 2nd

Fat Men's race,
Sigurd Rice, 1st
C. Fellman, 2nd.

Sack race,
Elias Saave, 1st
Pete Morrisette, 2nd

100-yard dash,
H. Connors, 1st
A. Lemieux, 2nd

Boys' running race,
Andrew Lemieux, 1st
H. Hofus, 2nd

Little Girls running race,
Eva McCallough, 1st
Esther Halseth, 2nd

Cracker contest,
R. Lee, 1st
W. Frioland, 2nd

Horse race,
H. J. Laske.

Following the afternoon races was bowery dance and the display of fire works in the evening. Quite a crowd also came down from Thief River Falls on the evening flyer to take in the dance but the rain abont midnight shortened the session at the bowery but the dance was continued at the city hall, but inadequate room and the heat made it somewhat a disagreeable pastime.

Special stress may be laid on the order maintained in town on that day, and the excellent behavior of the visitors. Excepting for a few who had imbibed too freely everything was more peaceable then could be expected on a fourth of July celebration.

Oklee Here Sunday.

A game has been scheduled by Manager Rice with the Oklee "Red Sox" for next Sunday to be pulled off on the local diamond. This is the first game between these two teams this season and the outcome of the contest will be watched with interest.

Services in the English language will be held at the school house in Plummer Monday evening July 15, 8 P. M. Rev. Jas. Sanaker, of Minneapolis, will preach to us, he is an able speaker and an earnest worker with long experience. Let us give him a full house, everybody welcome—dont miss this meeting next Monday evening.

GOV. WILSON IS NOMINATED AT BALTIMORE

GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY IS NAMED AS THEIR CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT AFTER MUCH BALLOTING.

PLATFORM IS ADOPTED.

Party Declaration Prepared and Approved by Bryan Selected With a Whoop—Delegates Get Away in a Hurry.

Baltimore, Md. — Governor Wilson was nominated at 3:15 p. m. Tuesday, when Pennsylvania cast vote making total 733, breaking the long deadlock that had existed in the Democratic convention since early Friday.

The final break to Governor Woodrow Wilson as the nominee for president of the United States came at the beginning of the forty-sixth ballot. Wilson had received 633 votes on the forty-fifth, with only 725⅓ necessary to nominate.

Senator Bankhead of Alabama quickly withdrew Underwood.

Senator Stone of Missouri, in behalf of Champ Clark, released all Clark delegates, at the same time saying Missouri would vote for him to the end. Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston then withdrew Governor Foss from consideration.

WOODROW WILSON.

By this time it was apparent Wilson would win on the forty-sixth ballot and the convention was in an uproar, delaying the call for a long while.

Wilson gained 108 votes on the forty-third ballot, the first cast today, and the hoped-for break appeared at hand. Illinois' 58 delegates propelled the movement and gains were made also from Connecticut, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, Wisconsin and Hawaii.

Wilson's vote was 602, a majority of the convention. It was the highest vote he had received and the vote of 329 cast for Mr. Clark was the lowest received by him during the prolonged balloting. When the result was announced the demonstration for Wilson was as enthusiastic and protracted as the weary delegates could make it.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson was born at Staunton, Va., on Dec. 28, 1856. When Woodrow was 2 years old his father took a pastorate in Augusta, Ga., and soon became one of the most noted ministers of the South. "Tommy" Wilson, the Augusta schoolboy, is described by Prof. John T. Derby, one of his teachers, as quiet and exceptionally studious. The most important instructor of young Wilson, however, was his father.

The Wilsons moved from Augusta to Columbia, S. C., in 1870, Dr. Wilson resigning his pastorate to take the chair of pastoral and evangelistic theology in the Southern Presbyterian Theological seminary. At Columbia Tommy attended Charles Barnwell's private school. At the age of 17 he entered Davidson college at Davidson, N. C.

At the age of 22 he signalized the closing of his undergraduate days at Princeton by breaking into the International Review, in its issue of August, 1879, with an article entitled "Cabinet Government in the United States." The article contrasted British and American systems of government, pointing out advantages in the British.

In the fall of 1878 Wilson took up the law course at the University of Virginia, where he indulged in a long, drooping moustache and in membership in the glee club. "She Sleeps, My Lady Sleeps," is shown by old programs of university concerts to have been one of Wilson's tenor solos.

In May, 1882, he carried his law diploma and an oratorical prize to Atlanta, Ga., where he opened an office for the practice of law. The office, however, did not prosper, and after 18 leisurely months he gave up. The Atlanta experiment, however, was far from eventless. Although litigants gave him nothing to do, he was not idle. He improved his time by securing the promise of Miss Ellen Louise Axson to be his wife. The Axsons were a prominent Georgia lowlands family. The young couple were married in 1875.

In the fall of 1885 Mr. Wilson began teaching political economy to the girls of Bryn Mawr. From this institution he went to Wesleyan university, where he remained until called to Princeton in 1890 to occupy the chair of jurisprudence and politics. In 1902 he was elected president of Princeton.

THOMAS R. MARSHALL.

In May, 1910, the graduate college of Princeton university became the legatee of a $3,000,000 estate, which could not be accepted without sacrificing Wilson's policies. The money was accepted. The president's resignation did not come, however, until after the New Jersey state Democratic convention on Sept. 15, 1912, had nominated him for the governorship. In the following November New Jersey went Democratic for the first time since 1892 and elected Wilson by a large majority.

The earliest recorded mention of Woodrow Wilson as a presidential possibility is in the form of a letter written by someone in Indianapolis to the News of that city at the time of Wilson's inauguration as president of Princeton. This faint boom was revived on Feb. 3, 1906, at the Lotus club, New York, where Mr. Wilson was the guest of honor. On that occasion Col. George Harvey mentioned him as a possible candidate for the presidential nomination.

Colonel Harvey's magazine, Harper's Weekly, for a time gave ardent support to Wilson's campaign for the nomination, but at the beginning of 1912 this support was withdrawn.

For vice president, Governor Thomas R. Marshall of Indiana was nominated by the Democratic national convention at 1:56 a. m., Wednesday.

The nomination of Governor Marshall for vice president came as something of a surprise for when the night's balloting for vice president began it seemed that the Bryan-Wilson contingent in the convention had definitely settled upon Governor John E. Burke of North Dakota.

There was not much of a fight, however, and when two ballots disclosed Marshall easily in the lead, Governor Burke's name was withdrawn and Marshall was proclaimed the nominee by acclamation. A minute later the convention had adjourned sine die.

Colonel Bryan delivered what he called his "valedictory" and, in happy vein, turned over the mantle of his former leadership as a presidential condidate to Governor Wilson.

He pledged himself to the full support of the presidential nominee and ended by urging that either Governor Burke or Senator George Chamberlain of Oregon, he nominated for vice president.

When, after the first ballot some one moved to make the nomination of Marshall unanimous, Mr. Bryan started for the stage to make a statement. The motion was withdrawn before he could speak. When the motion was renewed after the second ballot, Mr. Bryan did not protest.

The platform hewed out in committee several days ago, and warmly praised by Mr. Bryan, was adopted with a whoop.

Prominently mentioned for the vice presidency were: Governor Marshall, of Indiana; Governor Burke of North Dakota, Representative Henry of Texas, and Senator Kern of Indiana.

Philadelphia.—A grand festival concert participated in by the thousands of members of societies constituting the Northeastern Saengerbund, with President and Mrs. Taft as the guests of honor, was the crowning event of the twenty-third saengerfest. Bitter Contest Due in Ohio.

Columbus, Ohio.—With the Taft and Roosevelt factions still at loggerheads, with not less than ten candidates for the gubernatorial nomination and with the practical assurance that there will be no third party split, the recessed session of the Republican state convention probably will be thrown into a bitter fight immediately after convening when the majority and minority reports of the platform committee will be submitted for adoption.

ELECTRICAL STORMS

SPECTATORS AT A BALL GAME SEE ONE OF THEIR NUMBER FELLED.

TORNADO DAMAGE DONE.

Tornado Does Much Damage at Various Points—Chicago Reports Electrical Damage of $300,000.

Grand Forks. — One man was instantly killed and seven others were injured in a remarkable electrical storm which hit Grand Forks. Charles Lunder was the victim of the fatal bolt, and he was killed in full view of hundreds of spectators at the Duluth-Grand Forks league baseball game, which was being played on a field adjoining the ball park when he was felled. Adam Semitz, walking at his side was stunned but regained consciousness in a moment. Many people in the park were affected by electrical shocks.

Only two bolts seemed to have worked the havoc that was wrought. One spread in such manner as to kill Lunder and injured two women and a boy. A second bolt struck in the Great Northern yards.

Mrs. Bliven, wife of a Grand Forks police officer, and Mrs. James Edwards, were seated on porches of their residences on opposite sides of the same street, when the bolt that killed Lunder rendered them unconscious, and they were not revived for a half hour.

Cleary Maloy, aged 13, had his arm paralyzed by the same bolt.

The other bolt hit the Great Northern roundhouse, coming into the building over telephone wires, and shooting a blue flame across the office, about 20 feet wide, and striking J. G. Myers and H. B. Myers, knocking them from their chairs, and stunning and burning both.

George Anderson, an engineer walking in the yards near the track, was thrown to the ground by the same bolt and was unconscious several hours.

Cyclonic conditions prevailed. The wind mounted to the speed of 70 miles an hour for a brief period.

Some hail fell, but no damage was done in Grand Forks.

At Northwood, 40 miles southwest, hail stones measuring five inches in diameter fell, but the fact there was no wind, saved the grain crop from complete destruction.

Chicago. — Damage aggregating $300,000 was caused by an electrical storm here.

Twelve houses were struck by lightning and 42 alarms were received by the fire department. Many basements were flooded, especially in the downtown business district.

In the Ghetto on the West side hundreds of basements were flooded and families were driven into the street by water. Lightning struck a large tenement house and 20 families were driven into the street by the fire that followed.

Winona, — By far the most severe wind, rain, electrical and hail storm which visited this section in several years, played havoc in this city, uprooting and damaging shade trees in all sections and paralyzing all wire service. Reports from the surrounding country are meager because of the scrippling of the telephone service.

Few connections in the city and none outside can be made. The Saturday night crowds when the electric left in darkness when the electric light company finally was left without wires with which to supply the current to the greater part of the city. The wires were tangled and twisted by the storm. Many of the city streets are blocked by the trees and fences which were strewn about by the cyclonic wind. The fact that the city was protected by the hills on either side, undoubtedly saved it from destruction by the winds. In the half hour the storm prevailed, there was an inch of rain.

Destructive storms tornadic in nature, passed over several sections of Minnesota and North Dakota. A cyclone cut a swath through farm country seven miles east of Brainerd, and great damage is reported to have been inflicted in Redwood county.

Troubles in Educators' Ranks.

Chicago, Ill. — Charges of irregularities in the granting of membership in the National Education association and of discourtesy in replying to complaints will be preferred against Secretary Irwin Shepard at the meeting of the board of directors. The charge will be the first step in a campaign to oust Secretary Shepard. Secretary Shepard, and his aids, are charged with alleged refusal to allow Chicago teachers to take out active memeberships in the name of their schools.

May Get One Warship.

Washington, D. C. — That one battleship will be authorized by house leaders, as a compromise with the senate in the naval appropriations bill, adding two battleships to the list, was the program advanced in the house. It was said the leaders had consented to recede that far from their position refusing money for any new battleships, and that the compromise would be put through in conference. Majority Leader Underwood would not positively say.

MORE HOSPITALS ARE NEEDED

Situation Improved, but Further Work Is Needed to Stamp Out Tuberculosis.

Only four states, Mississippi, Nevada, Utah and Wyoming, have no beds whatever in special hospitals or wards for consumptives. Eight years ago when the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis was organized there were 26 states in which no hospital or sanitorium provision for consumptives existed, and the entire number of beds in the United States was only 10,000.

"While these figures would indicate a remarkable growth in anti-tuberculosis activity," says Dr. Livingston Farrand, executive secretary of the National association, in commenting on the subject, there are still practically ten indigent consumptives for every one of the 30,000 beds, including those for pay patients. In other words, we have from 250,000 to 300,000 consumptives in this country too poor to provide hospital care for themselves. If tuberculosis is ever going to be stamped out in the United States, more hospital provision for these foci of infection must be provided."

Willing to Oblige.

A story comes from a town where firms advertise to sell fish direct to small purchasers. The glowing advertisements asked for the sending of half a dollar with a list of the varieties of fish preferred. One letter read:

"I want two salmon, a dozen whiting, a dozen fresh herring, some flounders, and if you have them you can add a lobster."

The next day the lady received a letter, which ran:

"Dear Madam: Please send another dime and we will forward the fisherman."—Dallas News.

Singing and the Lungs.

It is well known that singing, like whistling, is a fine exercise for the lungs, and some doctors advise those who fear consumption to go in for singing for this reason.

At the same time they, of course, do not advance the claim that singing alone will save anyone from or cure consumption. Acquire the habit of taking the big deep breath, which is a primary requisite of any kind of singing, bad or good, and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing.

Cheerful Outlook.

"Father, dear," said Amaranth, "Willie Smithers is going to call at your office this morning to ask you for my hand. Isn't there some little hint I can give him before he goes so as to make it easier for him?"

"Yes," said Mr. Blinks, "tell him to take ether before he comes. It will save him much pain."—Harper's Weekly.

Strictly Up to Date.

Alice—How oddly some men propose.

Kate—I sould say so. A gentleman asked me last week if I felt favorably disposed to a unification of interests.

SKIN ERUPTION ON CHEEK

Kingsley, Mich.—"Last May my thirteen-months-old baby had a sore come on her cheek. It started in four or five small pimples and in two or three hours' time spread to the size of a silver dollar. It spread to her eye. Then water would run from the pimples and wherever that touched it caused more sores until nearly all one cheek and up her nostrils were one solid sore. She was very fretful. She certainly was a terrible looking child, and nothing seemed to be of any use.

"Then I got some Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. She tried to rub off everything we put on so that we would sit and hold her hands for two hours at a time, trying to give the medicine a chance to help her, but after I washed it with Cuticura Soap and then put on the Cuticura Ointment they seemed to soothe her and she did not try to rub them off. It was only a few days before her face was all healed up, and there has been no return of the trouble since. We thought that baby's face would surely be scarred, but it is not." (Signed) Mrs. W. J. Cleland, Jan. 5, 1912.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston."
